QUERIES AND ANSWERS

Frank Lane, Detroit:

Don't scorch. Just simmer along at an easy pace and look comfortable.

"Century," Buda, Ill.:

A. A. Hanson of Minneapolis, Minn., is credited with having ridden 21,053 miles during 1884, a record that remained unbroken during 1895.

Marvin Graves, Omaha:

W. A. Ruby, Louisville, rode 92 centuries last year, the largest number on record.

No. 71,673:

See L. A. W. BULLETIN of March 27, for directions for shrinking sweater.

James Nesbitt, Chicago:

Most of the long distance track records are held in France, the middle distance ones in England, and the short ones in America.

FLORENCE MILLER, Chicago:

It is claimed that the first road century ever ridden in the United States in one day was made by two Louisville wheelmen, Henry Schimpeler and Orville Anderson, the course being from Louisville to Frankfort and return.

I. M. P., Rankin, Pa., writes:

I would like to have the advice of some of your experienced wheelmen on the most suitable clothes to be worn for ordinary road runs. I find when taking a run of twenty miles with cotton underwear under ordinary bicycle suit, that one soon gets chilly when resting. What I wish to know is what is best to wear next the skin?

EDW. B. FAY, St. Louis, writes:

As many readers of the L. A. W. BULLETIN have expressed themselves on the "only way" to wash a sweater without shrinking it, can not some of the well informed explain how to stretch a sweater that did shrink. I have a sweater that came back from the "wash" in an envelope, and if some of your readers will state how it may be made serviceable again, they will confer a favor which will be greatly appreciated.

Now minds that for true comfort yearn,
From coal to ice begin to turn.

Consider the Nameplates:

How They Multiply!

At the 1895 Cycle Shows they said the new and very striking nameplate on Columbia Bicycles was absurd and meaningless and would be changed within the year.

At the 1896 Cycle Shows there was not a bicycle that did not have a conspicuous nameplate of some kind, and our attorneys reported seventeen direct infringements and thirty-nine more that showed clear intention to imitate.

Now, why this unanimous imitation of a meaningless symbol?

Manifestly in the hope that some of the favors showered upon Columbia excellence might fall to the imitators.

But imitations are not Columbias, as the public well knows.

And as for Columbia nameplates—

Whene'er we see a road like this,
Through which the horse must go,
We know his wisdom is amiss
Or he'd not leave it so.
But the horse is an imperfect beast,
This no one will refute,
But the man who whips him through the mud,
Oh, he is a perfect brute.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

I am interested in the letter from a New York member who writes to you in reference to the inconvenience of profuse perspiration, from which I am also a sufferer. The temperature seems to make no difference to me, for the necessary change of clothing makes up for it. With the mercury slightly above the freezing point I have thoroughly saturated my underclothing, which is of light weight, in a ride of from three to four miles with very light grades. In the summer time my saddle becomes so wet as to make riding very uncomfortable. I have been riding four years and am enthusiastic, but my enjoyment would be greatly increased were it not for this drawback. I cannot go for the shortest distance of an errand without a change of clothing on my return. I envy friends who go out with standing collars looking spick and span, while my clothing needs to be put through the wringer. There are so many of the medical profession in our ranks, that it seems as though some of them must have had practical experience with this trouble and are able to suggest, at least, a means of alleviation.

With the hope of attracting the attention of such an one I beg space for this communication in your valuable journal. No. 40,450.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

The April 3d number of the BULLETIN contains a letter from a member in Missouri, under the title of "Perspiration and Pleasure." I cannot believe that he read my communication which appeared two or three weeks ago in your excellent publication. I had no thought of so ignorantly and foolishly flying against the very nature of things, as to ever dream of prompting the L. A. W., or any other organization "to start a crusade to abolish perspiration;" therefore, the Missouri member will have no opportunity, as far as I am concerned of enforcing his threat to resign from the L. A. W. I simply sought information for myself and a number of other riders, who found bicycling exceedingly pleasurable, only that in our cases, it is accompanied by the disagreeable feature of the perspiration bath. Moderate perspiration, is of course, healthy; but how about immoderate perspiration, where you are so bathed in it that it trickles down your nose and neck in great streams, even to the extent of making your saddle "soggy." This is what I refer to.

If there are readers of your paper, perhaps physicians, who have passed through this experience and overcome it, I am certain that I am but one of a number who would be glad to hear from them.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

I notice in a recent issue of the BULLETIN an inquiry as to some remedy for excessive perspiration, and in the next issue I find a flippant reply that does the inquirer no good. Every one knows that a certain amount of perspiration is necessary for health. Every one also knows (if he is sensible) that excessive perspiration is very weakening. To be bathed in perspiration after or during any ordinary exertion, is not only uncomfortable, but bad for the system. I think if the sufferer will take an ordinary dose of elder flower tea, three or four times a day, he will get relief. This may need to be kept up all summer. It can do no harm. If preferred, he can go to a homeopathic drug store and get the mother tincture of sambucus. This is made from elder flowers. Mix five drops in a glass of water and take a large swallow of it three or four times a day. Keep the glass covered. DIANA SNOW.

The "Cost-more,-and-therefore" argument.

Because another Cyclometer "costs more to make" than the Standard, it does not follow that it furnishes as good a value as the Standard. Consider: What MAKES Cost?

A Cyclometer that is made up in "slow, laborious ways," costs more to make than the 'Standard,' which is made by wonderful automatic machinery, in a great factory that was specially built for making instruments of precision. A Cyclometer that is made in a small way, to meet a feeble demand, costs more to make than the 'Standard,' of which a half million or more are needed to supply the 1896 demand. And the 'Standard' is best for the same reasons that it is cheapest—an enormous output justifying the employment of best materials and highest skill, which always seek the largest user. The "cost-more,—and—therefore" argument is spoken to the deaf ear of common sense.

CHARLES FREEMAN JOHNSON, of San Francisco, is writing a series of good roads letters for a newspaper syndicate, and a special article for the Overland Monthly, all of which will help along the good cause.

THE citizens of Knox Township, Jefferson County, Ohio, have voted to issue bonds to the extent of $55,000, for the building of twenty-five miles of new limestone and brick pike. The vote carried by about five to one.

THE Hudson (N. Y.) Bicycle Club is going to actively push the work of putting up sign boards.

THE Sacramento wheelmen are arranging to build a cinder path to Stockton.

MINNESOTA has formed a permanent good roads association.

THE Pacific states are pushing ahead in the organization of good roads' clubs. Portland, Ore., has one with a membership of over two hundred business men, and clubs are forming all over the state.

THE Schenectady County Wheelmen are arranging to complete their cinder path to Albany. They are making a path four feet wide. The cinders are three inches deep (two after rolling) thus one load (one and a half cubic yards) of cinders gives twenty-seven feet of path. In places the path may be made but two feet wide.

To Mrs. ——.

BY NIXON WATERMAN.

The world is so lonely without you,
So wearywise when you're away;
There's something entrancing about you
That gladdens the dreariest day.
Your smile is the dew in the flower,
Your voice is the song of the birds;
My heart is athirst for the shower
Of joy woven in with your words.

Amid all the bitter of being,
You come as a flagon of wine;
Amid all of winter's decreeing,
Your love is the summer and shine.
As bees in the bloom of the clover,
Glean sweets till the set of the sun,
You'll keep me forever your lover,—
My wife and my sweetheart in one.

VICTORIOUS POTTER.

It is especially in harmony with the "fitness of things," that we publish on this page a portrait of Isaac B. Potter, encircled by the suggestive laurel. It is hardly necessary to say to American wheelmen that Mr. Potter is chief consul of the largest division of the L. A. W. (which has been made so by his exertions), chairman of the national highway improvement committee, chairman of the local organization committee, the principal factor in the passage of the famous "Liberty Bill," and he has again covered himself with glory by his persistent and successful management of the Armstrong Baggage Bill. This latest achievement was rendered all the more conspicuous and creditable by the fact that from the start the odds were very largely against him. We had reason to expect success, in view of the remarkable efforts which were being made, but when we learned that the vote was practically unanimous, our surprise and pleasure can hardly be imagined.

There are many others who have ably assisted Mr. Potter, while the work done by Mr. Geo. R. Bidwell, chairman of the national transportation committee, was extremely important from a political standpoint, and had much to do with the large number of votes in excess of a majority.

Mr. Potter's reputation as a League worker has been most conspicuous for a number of years. He is the most persistent and effective "hustler" that the L. A. W. has today. We all know that it is common, when a head is seen above the crowd, for some one to "throw a brick at it." Mr. Potter has not escaped this common tendency. It will always be true, as it is in his case, that jealousies and misunderstandings will arise, which will permit more or less mud to attach itself to the wheels of progress. All men are not constructed with minds broad enough to take in the general good, and work in harmony with those who are in the front ranks. It is not to be expected that all men should rise above their personal pessimism and look beyond the littleness which surrounds them, to the more important possibilities. Mr. Potter has made enemies; so has every man who has done his duty. A man without an enemy is usually a man without a record.

Mr. Potter is not as old as might be inferred by a single glance at his "dome of thought." A head like Mr. Potter's has better business than the raising of hair. Our best wish for the L. A. W. is that Mr. Potter may continue his enthusiastic work, and our best wish for Mr. Potter is that his enemies may be no more successful than in the past.

Here's to Isaac B. Potter, "May he live to eat the hen that scratches over his grave."

THE cyclometer of Progress will mark a great advance in the use of the bicycle, this year.

There is no Bicycle

sold at the same price that is the equal of the Clipper. This is a plain statement. We mean every word of it, and we are willing to stand by it. We repeat it: there is no wheel of equal price that is as good as the Clipper. If anybody tells you there is, they are mistaken. You can buy wheels for less money; if you do you will make a mistake. If you buy below the lowest Clipper price, you lose safety — there is no bicycle sold at a lower price than the Business Clipper that has not a weak spot in it some place. The lower you go in price, the more weak spots you find. It costs nothing to examine the Clipper; failure to do so may cost you the price of a bicycle. If you buy before you see the Clipper, you are jumping in the dark — your knowledge is not complete. The bicycle you get may be the one you want; but you cannot tell until you see the Clipper.

FREE ENTRY OF WHEELS INTO CANADA.

The New York State division, through the kind offices of Charles L. Bullymore, local consul at Buffalo, has arranged with the Canadian controller of customs at Ottawa, to admit all touring members of the League of American Wheelmen crossing the Canadian border without payment of customs duties and without the usual "deposit." The customs regulations now in force provide that the amount of duty leviable on the retail value of the wheel in charge of each tourist shall be deposited when the tourist enters Canadian territory. The controller of customs writes to Mr. Bullymore stating that members of the L. A. W. will be admitted without a deposit, the right being reserved by the collector of customs to take a careful description of each wheel so entered. To avail ourselves of the privilege thus accorded it will be necessary that each member of the League take with him his membership ticket when crossing Canadian border and to bear in mind that in exchange for the courtesy accorded us by the customs authorities of Canada, the officers of the League have vouched for the honorable regard of our League and its members for the Canadian revenue laws.

A ROAD isn't likely to be too long if it isn't too deep.

Yes, reinforcements have come slowly and surely to the front; starting in with 16 B. W. G. years ago, we have finally reduced the tubing to brown paper thinness; thereby reducing the weight of the finished result, very materially. Frames were always breaking when 16 gauge tubing was used because they were not reinforced; or, when they were, the reinforcing was very unsatisfactorily arranged.

With our X-CLUSIVE REINFORCEMENT we have demonstrated that frames can be built on featherweight lines and by skilful reinforcing become eternally strong.

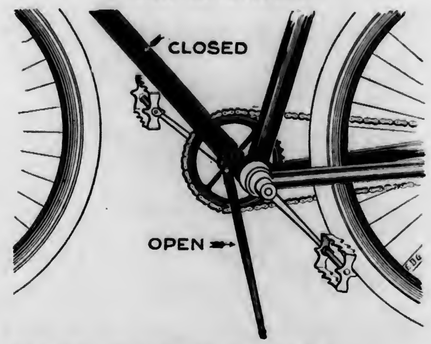
RELATION OF CRANK TO GEAR.

We are frequently asked how much higher gear can be used with a certain additional length of crank? Or, how much longer crank would be necessary to balance a certain increase of gear?

We assume that it is understood that any given safety geared to, say 60 inches, for instance, is the equivalent of a wheel 60 inches in diameter and having the crank attached directly to it without the use of chain or sprocket wheels. This being the case, a correct statement of the problem would be as follows, using even figures to make it more easily understood.



Suppose a safety bicycle to be geared to 60 inches and having a crank 6 inches long. As the crank measures entirely from one side of its axle, it is proper to consider but one side of the wheel, which would be 30 inches. Now, if a crank 6 inches long is used to propel a wheel 60 inches in diameter, it is the equivalent of a lever 6 inches in length working against one of 30 inches.

In the case cited, the longer lever, represented by one-half the diameter of the gear, is five times the length of the crank, or, in other words, the crank is one-tenth of the full diameter of the gear.

It will not stand alone."

Now any greater length of crank would bear the same relation to the gear, provided that the gear was increased in the same ratio. A 6-inch crank to a 60-inch gear would require exactly the same pressure on pedal as would a 7-inch crank to a 70-inch gear, intermediate lengths being, of course, a mere matter of mathematics. It might be proper to state, as we have done before, that the length of crank should be determined entirely according to the length of the leg joints. It is poor economy of one's strength to use a crank shorter than the longest length which can be worked comfortably, and after determining the length of crank which is most satisfactory, the gear then becomes only a question of the strength of the rider, and should in no case be higher than can be ridden comfortably over such roads as the rider is obliged to travel.

FOOD FOR REFLECTION.

That the former owners of the Tillinghast patents believed in their strength is shown by the fact that they brought them into Court, notably against the Boston Woven Hose & Rubber Co. That the present owner believes in them is evidenced by the fact that he purchased them rather than defend a suit to final issue, being advised so to do by counsel who stand at the head of the bar in patent causes. That others believe in them, witness the list of licensees, who are today making three-quarters of all the single tubes sold in this country.

Now, if the Tillinghast patents are sustained, and that they will again come into Court is beyond doubt, every manufacturer who, unlicensed, has made single-tube tires, will be cast in damages to the extent of all the profit he has made or by reasonable diligence might have made on all such tires — say $2.00 a pair. And we know that many a patent which by outsiders has been pronounced "not worth the paper it was written on" has been sustained by the United States Courts. Teste the barbed-wire case, the brake-shoe case, the collar-button case, and numberless others.

On the other hand, we know that many a so-called bottom patent, one which has been considered "gilt-edged," has been declared invalid by the Courts. Suppose the Tillinghast patents should be voided, what would happen? Let us see.

Today, manufacturers are selling at a price which affords them a reasonable, though by no means an exorbitant profit; but this suffices, if the tire is good and the percentage of seconds and returns is not too great, to pay a fair expense account, a liberal amount of advertising and drumming, and leave a balance to the good. Now, if the Tillinghast patents are declared invalid, what will happen? Every one may make hose-pipe tires; many manufacturers with small capital will launch out on this industry, and the price will be crowded down. The large manufacturers, with abundant means and facilities, can sell tires and make 10% profit at a figure which is less than cost to the small man: the result will be that the latter, to keep his head above water, must cheapen his stock to compete with his richer neighbor. Vast lots of ill-made tires will flood the market, to the damage of all. The manufacturer will make no suitable profit; the newspapers will get no more liberal advertisements; the dealer's commissions will be lowered; and the rider, who after all is the one most to be considered, will hardly know where to get a good tire, and will constantly break down, much to his discomfort and danger. With poor tires on the market, indeed, the insurance companies will be justified in calling cycling extra-hazardous and cancelling his policies.

It is not as if the price of tires was made excessive by the Tillinghast patents. It is merely a question whether the wheelman shall pay a couple of dollars extra for a pair of good tires. The owner of the Tillinghast patents receives only 25 cents a pair royalty; but he so issues licenses that only good tires shall be produced by his licensees.

On the whole then, is not a manufacturer quite as well off to pay 25 cents royalty to insure himself against a possibly big bill of damages, and to provide for some permanency and profit in the tire business? Is not the dealer better off with a larger commission? Does not the press benefit by the well-paid advertising pages? Is not the cyclist safer and happier on his daily ride?

Every one must answer these questions for himself.

LIST PRICE vs. SELLING PRICE

A great many bicycle dealers, especially new ones, seem to think that the bicycle on which they get the greatest discounts are the ones on which they can make the most money. Never was a greater mistake made. Many wheels now are listed far above what their actual worth warrants or what they are expected to sell for, simply for the purpose of quoting a discount that looks enticing. Many bicycles listed at $100 are openly retailed as low as $60, but for more if the buyer is an inexperienced one. In fact, such machines are never capable of commanding list price, and if the dealer can realize sufficient on a sale to come out whole, he may consider himself fortunate.

On the other hand, Waverley Bicycles are listed at $85, which is the very lowest figure at which a strictly high grade wheel can be placed upon the market. Their quality is such that they readily command list price, regardless of what any other machine is offered for; consequently the agent is never disappointed in the realization of his anticipated profit. What is more, the Waverley Bicycles have the reputation of causing less trouble on account of defects and breakage than any other machines made, and after they are sold to the riders do not have occasion to bother the agent almost to death throughout the season. The multitude of Waverley agents consists principally of dealers who have been in the cycle business for years, and realize the advisability of holding on to a good thing when they get it. The riding season is about here, and it will be to your advantage to get in line at once.

THE RELATION OF GEAR TO POWER.

HENRY CLYDE.

The greater the speed to be attained in a given time, the greater is the pushing force in pounds to be applied to the pedal, whatever the gear.

Suppose one revolution of the sprocket per second. For each revolution, with a 63 gear, the 28-inch rear wheel makes $2\frac{1}{4}$ revolutions and the cycle moves 197.82 inches. With a $66\frac{1}{2}$ gear, the rear wheel will make $2\frac{3}{8}$ revolutions, and the machine will move 208.81 inches.[1] It is evident that it requires more power to move a body (whether a bicycle or anything else) 208 inches in a given time than to push the same body 197 inches in the same time.

Thus, gear never creates power; it merely enables the rider to apply, at the expense of his muscles, more power to his work during a given time; and, with the same number of sprocket revolutions per minute, the higher the gear the more work must be done by the rider.

Thus the increase in gear is of advantage only so far as it does not outstrip the measure of force which the rider is able, without discomfort, to apply to his pedals.

The power necessary to drive a wheel a given distance in a given time may be applied in either of two ways. If two revolutions of the sprocket in a high-geared wheel will send the cycle as far as three revolutions of a low-gear sprocket, then the rider of the low-geared wheel, in order to keep up with his companion, must pedal one and one half times as fast; but, as has been shown, the pressure, in pounds, which he must apply at each push is less in the inverse proportion; and, at the end of the given distance, each rider will have applied an equal amount of foot-force, in pounds, to the doing of his work. (In these calculations, the element of friction is disregarded).

So suppleness of muscle and consequent quickness in pedalling will enable a rider to outstrip another of greater absolute muscular power, but, comparatively, slow-motioned and clumsy. As the number of amateur riders who combine great muscular strength and suppleness is small, it follows that a medium gear is best suited to the great majority of wheelmen. With the reduction of weight and friction to the miminum, such as is attained in the high-grade wheels of 1896, what was once a "high" may now be considered a "medium" gear, and a gear of from 66 to 68 is now as easily manageable as the 59 gears of three years ago. But, in the writer's opinion, not one amateur rider in ten can ride with advantage, in ordinary roading, the best machine geared higher than 68.

Suppleness and quickness of action are the qualifications to be sought for by the amateur rider, as well as by the racing man. A very competent authority says: "It has come to be understood that muscles which are simply hard are not the kind to be desired in the attainment of speed, but the suppleness and free action is a part of the form of strength which is a necessity." (Zimmerman, "Points on Training," page 151.) These are to be obtained, not by an exhausting push on a very high-geared wheel, but by the quickest possible pedalling on a gear which always leaves some reserve muscular power "up the rider's sleeve" to be used only in emergencies.

WHO CAN ANSWER THIS?

"If all the trans-Atlantic steamship companies combine to charge $2.50 for transportation on a crated bicycle (as they have done this year) whether the total amount of "baggage" come within the cubic limits or not, and the owner desires to avoid payment by packing said wheel in a trunk which meets the requirements as to size, how much "extra" duty will the custom-house officer levy, on account of a standing understanding with the purser, when this fact is shown up on opening the trunk upon the deck of the steamer — at Rotterdam for instance." The Real Drain.

The drain on the farmer's resources
That is really the tryingest load,
Not only to him but his horses,
Is caused as you know it of course is,
By not rightly draining the road.

THERE is civilization, enlightenment and economy in good roads. Good roads lead to prompt and steady attendance upon church services, school room duties, neighborly intercourse and social advancement. Bad roads lead to profanity, worry, trials and tribulations and lots of time.—Galveston (Tex.) Tribune.

IT begins to look as though Wisconsin would take an advanced position among the states of the west in the movement for good roads. Indeed, the badger state is already so far ahead of Illinois in the matter of state organization for improvement of the highways that it will require extraordinary activity on the part of Illinoisans who are interested in good roads to catch up with it.—Chicago Times Herald.

THE Chicago Times-Herald recently published the following from Boscobel, Wis.: "Never before in the history of this section of the State have horses been so cheap. An excellent farm team can now be bought for $35. Colts are worth only $2 to $6. A large number of horses have been let loose by the farmers and have been taken up by the authorities in neighboring towns, as there is no way of disposing of them excepting to kill them."

The same applies when two or more names are sent.

GENERAL RACING RULES OF THE L. A. W.

A—Announcement.

Through its racing board the League of American Wheelmen exercises jurisdiction over all cycle competition and record trials on tracks within the United States of America, and each and every person who shall in any way be concerned or employed therein, as well as all race promoters (clubs, associations or individuals), shall be governed by the following rules of said board.

B—Suspensions.

1. Any rider wilfully competing at races not held under the rules of the board, or rules approved by the board, or who shall enter, or attempt to enter an event which, by reason of his status or time record, he is not privileged to enter, or who shall compete at or in any way participate in a race meeting or event not officially sanctioned by the board, or who shall otherwise offend against any of the rules of the board shall be liable to suspension for such a length of time as the racing board may determine.

2. Riders are notified that to compete against any rider who has been suspended will render them liable to the same penalty.

3. Any rider under suspension who shall enter or compete in any race in public or for a prize shall be liable to further suspension for such contempt of rules, at the discretion of the national racing board.

C—Entries.

1. All entries must be made on blanks of a form as hereinafter prescribed (which will be supplied by the racing board if desired), and must be signed by the rider entering or by some one authorized in his behalf. Within the time appointed for closing, entries must be forwarded to the person authorized to receive them. All entries not actually received at the hour fixed for closing shall be ineligible, except entries by letter bearing postmark not later than the day of closing, or entries notified by telegraph, the telegram to be actually received at the sending office at or before the hour of closing. Entries by telephone or telegram must be supplanted by an entry on the prescribed form duly signed by the entrant or his agent and placed in the hands of the race promoter before the day of the meeting. Notice to promoters to enter a competitor shall constitute an acceptance of contract on entry blank.

2. The liability of all entry blanks shall rest with the rider for whom it is made, whether personally executed or otherwise authorized.

3. Entries to handicap and class races must close seven days prior to contest, to allow time for proper investigation. All entries to such events must be accompanied by a statement of the best two performances of the rider and all other information called for relative to the ability of said rider; all entries not so accompanied shall be thrown out by the handicapper.

4. Entrance fees must in all cases be paid in advance, and failure to so pay shall be sufficient reason for disqualification by the executive board of the race meet, and suspension by the racing board.

If a contestant shall have won a prize, and for any reason his fees shall not have been paid or collected, he shall be given thirty days in which to pay same, and one week before the expiration of that time the management of the races shall notify him by registered letter, and if no reply is received may sell said prize (or, if cash, retain same for its own account), and the contestant shall forfeit all claims to same.

5. Entry forms shall contain a list of the events of the meeting, and state the prizes apportioned to each event and the value of each prize. Every entry form, when signed by a rider or his agent, shall constitute an agreement between him and the race promoter to the effect that the rider will compete (subject to the exceptions hereinafter mentioned), in the event or events for which he has entered, and that the race promoter will award him any prize he may win, such prize to be of the character and value stated in the entry form. Where the value of a prize is brought into dispute, the retail price of such prize shall govern the settlement. Where cash prizes are offered only the amount that is to be actually paid in cash shall be advertised.

6. Every entry shall further constitute an agreement that all persons concerned will submit all questions and disputes arising out of such entry to the authority and judgment of the racing board, and will abide by any ruling upon disputed questions made by said board.

7. Promoters of races must send to the official handicapper of the district in which the races are to be held a complete list of entries, accompanied by entry blanks, in all handicap and class races, not later than five days prior to the date of races.

8. All entry blanks shall become the property of the League, and shall be in charge of the official handicappers.

9. Race promoters shall not advertise the intended presence of any rider unless an entry or other notice, in writing to that effect, is in their possession, signed by the rider or his agent.

A rider may withdraw his entry to any or all events of a meeting by giving notice to the promoters not later than one week prior to the date of the meeting. In default of such notice, or of a satisfactory and conclusive explanation of his failure to compete in any of the events for which he has entered, he shall be suspended from all track racing for a period to be determined by the chairman of the racing board.

10. Any entrant making a false entry shall be disqualified and debarred from any place or prize, and will be liable to suspension from all competition or time trials at the option of the racing board.

11. Any entrant who neglects to give his legal residence, or who gives other than his legal residence as such, or who gives any incorrect or misleading information on his entry form shall be considered to have made a false entry, and will be subject to the penalty for false entries.

12. By violation of the rules defining his class an amateur instantly forfeits his status and his subsequent entry to amateur events is a false entry for which due penalty is provided.

D—Sanctions.

1. Promoters of race meets must in all cases apply to the member of the national racing board of the district in which the event or events are to be run for official sanction. They shall remit with such application the sanction fee required by the rules, viz.: for each national circuit meet, $25. For each open meet or general sanction, from $10 to $5; each additional day, $2; athletic clubs, if only two events are scheduled, $2; but no fee shall be charged for a sanction for a meeting the entries to which are limited to the members of the school or club holding the meeting. Closed school and club meets and L. A. W. clubs must in all cases obtain sanction. No fee shall be charged L. A. W. clubs fully complying with the requirements of the League regarding such clubs.

2. If it shall appear that there will be a confliction of dates and interests, the first application under this rule shall have precedence to be decided by said member of the board, and notice of such race meet or event must be forwarded to the chairman of the national racing board by the member in charge.

3. Division meets shall in all cases be granted sanction, upon filing application at least thirty days prior to holding of same.

The board reserves the right to waive the rule regarding the confliction of dates, on national holidays.

4. In event of holder of a sanction finding it impossible to secure a tract on that date in city or town for which sanction is granted, sanction may be withdrawn and awarded to some other club or person for that date or transferred to another date for the benefit of the club to which first granted, without further charge therefor.

5. A sanction shall in all cases be granted where but two cycling events are to be run in connection with a general athletic programme. Where it is desired to hold more than two events, the rule regarding conflictions shall apply.

6. Race promoters failing to observe the requirements of these racing rules shall be placed upon the list of those to whom the sanction privilege is denied and refused further sanctions.

E—Duties of Race Promoters.

1. Promoters of race meets shall send to the official handicapper of their races, and to the member of the racing board granting sanction for same, within one week after a race meeting, an official programme of the meet, giving a list of all starters, and the time of the first man in each event; also a statement from the referee of all protests for foul riding or false entries together with his decisions thereon.

2. Programmes shall show the address, city and State of each rider, and shall specify which events are for amateurs, and which for professionals.

The prizes apportioned to each event and the value of each prize shall be stated on the programme.

3. A notice shall appear on the programme to the following effect:

"Notice to Riders. Races on this programme are defined as follows:

"Amateur.—Races for which any prize offered does not exceed $35 in value open to any amateur, as defined by the L. A. W., resident in this State or within one hundred miles of place of meet, or holding a permit to compete outside of such one hundred-mile limit.

"Professional.—Races with cash prizes or prizes of greater value than allowed amateurs. Riders are cautioned that to ride in professional races or to violate any clause of the amateur rule will render them ineligible to future amateur events."

4. No further sanctions shall be granted to any race promoter failing to comply with any of the above requirements.

F—Official Referees.

An official referee who shall be required to officiate at national circuit meets (for which proper compensation will be allowed), may be appointed by the chairman of the racing board. The chairman, members and representatives of the national racing board, and the handicappers in their respective States shall be ex-officio official referees, and the chairmen and the members of division racing boards shall be ex-officio official referees within their respective divisions. When it is impossible to obtain the services of an official referee, then the referee may be named by the member of racing board in charge of the district.

G—Handicappers.

1. The board shall appoint seven or more League handicappers, giving to each a special district at its discretion, who shall, for a stated fee, attend to the classification and handicapping of racing men. Classifications shall be based upon the actual time made by the man entering for the distance of the class race under consideration. Handicaps shall be based upon the ability as well as record of the contestants. Handicaps shall be trained, and the men classified before the day of the race, shall appear on the programme, and shall not be changed during that day's meeting.

2. A fee of twenty-five cents may be charged for each handicap, and ten cents for each classified entry, to be paid by the club or promoters of the race meeting for which the handicapping and classifying is done.

3. Any contestant in a handicap or class race not handicapped or classified by the district handicapper shall be liable to suspension from the race track for such a time as the racing board may determine, except that in closed club or school races the captain of such club or school may do the handicapping.

H—Championships.

1. The national L. A. W. championship events shall be as follows: One-quarter, one-third, one-half, one-mile, two-mile and five-mile bicycle.

2. Each L. A. W. division may contest, under the supervision of its division racing board, events to be known as division championships. These may be corresponding to the national championships, or otherwise, as each division racing board may decide.

No prizes except medals, suitably inscribed, shall be given to or received by any cyclist competing in division championships.

Each division racing board shall have entire charge of all matters pertaining to the running of the championships of its divisions. The division championships shall be contested at such places as the division racing board may determine, but shall be assigned only to League clubs. Division championships are open to any League members residing in the division.

3. The national championships shall be contested annually between July 1 and Nov. 15, at such places as the racing board may determine. National championships are open to all wheelmen residents of the United States; and the trophies for national championships shall be medals, to cost in no case more than $50 per set of three, gold, silver and bronze, respectively, to become the property of the winners, and to be struck from dies owned by the League.

4. The racing board shall give at least thirty days' notice of the location and date of the national championships. Division racing boards shall, within their own division, give at least fourteen days' notice of the location and date of the division championship; and no confliction of dates will be allowed; provided, however, that in case such notice has been properly given, and if it is found necessary for good reasons to postpone to some date within fourteen days of the original date, the first notice will be considered sufficient under this rule.

No city or county championship shall be granted unless approved by the division board.

5. Privilege to hold State championships in States where no division of the League has been formed, may be granted to clubs or authorized associations, where the importance of the meeting is sufficient to warrant the racing board's sanction.

I—Records.

1. The racing board will receive and pass upon all claims for records, either competition or time.

The standard table of recognized records shall be 1-4, 1-3, 1-2, 2-3, 3-4, 1 mile, and all even miles upward; no intermediate distances. Competition record must be made at an open meeting. The board will enter no competition record on its books that is not made at an open meeting, of which at least one week's notice has been given.

Records against time may be made at an open meeting, or in private and with or without pacemakers. Records made at private trials will only be allowed if at least one week's notice has been given the chairman of the board that such attempts are to be made.

The board will consider flying start only in records against time; standing start only in competition records.

2. At such trials there shall be present a referee, who shall be properly accredited representative of the L. A. W., appointed by the chairman upon application, three judges, three timers, and in addition, at least twelve witnesses, all of whom shall sign a statement attesting to the correctness of the record. No private trials will be sanctioned between June 1st and October 1st, or January 1st and March 1st.

3. Claimants must furnish a sworn statement from the timekeepers, certifying that the time claimed is correct, together with a sworn statement from a competent surveyor, certifying the measurement of the track.

When a claim for record has been proved to the satisfaction of the board, the record shall be published in the official organ, and stand as record on the books of the board. No claim for record made at a meeting not governed by League rules will be considered. No claim for record made on Sunday will be considered.

4. A competition record must be made in a race between men.

5. No records, made with the assistance of other than recognized cycling machines, propelled by man-power, will be accepted.

6. In unpaced events, or during unpaced record trials, there shall be no pacing or indicating devices, and only the rider making the trial, shall be on the track.

J—Tracks.

1. Tracks shall be measured on a line drawn eighteen inches out from a well-defined, fixed and continuous inner curb or pole; no record shall be allowed on a track otherwise measured.

K—Machines Excluded.

The board reserves the right to exclude from the racing path any and all machines which, in its judgment, do not come within the commonly accepted meaning of the term "bicycles," either by peculiarity of construction or by undoubted mechanical advantages which they may possess.

L—Betting Prohibited.

At race meetings no open betting shall be permitted. The officials of the race meeting shall not bet upon any results of any race. Officials found guilty of violating this rule shall be debarred from holding official positions at race meetings for such time as the racing board may determine.

M—Road Racing.

The League of American Wheelmen regards racing on the public highways as an unlawful practice and refuses to recognize and legislate for such form of the sport except to forbid the competing together therein or pace making, one for the other, of amateurs and professionals; an amateur also loses his status as such by competing on the road under any conditions that would professionalize in track racing.

Track Rules.

Officials, Their Powers and Duties.

The officers of all race meetings and cycling events shall be a referee, who must be an amateur wheelman, three judges at the finish, three time-keepers, one starter, one scorer, one clerk of the course, with assistants, if necessary, and one umpire for each turn in the track, or more, at option of the referee. If for any reason it is possible to obtain the services of an official referee, one may be appointed by the member of racing board in charge of district. All other officials may be selected by the race promoter, but must be wheelmen thoroughly conversant with the racing rules. The referee, judges and clerk of the course shall constitute the executive board.

The referee shall have general supervision of the race meeting. He shall give judgment on protests received by him, shall decide all questions or objections respecting foul riding or offences which he may be personally cognizant of, or which may be brought to his attention by an umpire or other officer. He shall act as he may think for the best in cases of misconduct by attendants, and shall disqualify any competitor for the event, day, or meet, who may become liable to disqualification. He shall determine all questions of fact and decide all points of difference that may arise and are not otherwise provided for in the rules. His decision in all cases shall be final, provided it does not conflict with any of these rules. In case a protest is made on the ground of conflict with rules, prizes must be held and an appeal made to the racing board, accompanied by a fee of $1, which will be returned in case the referee's decision is reversed. No appeal will be considered that has not been made within one week from the date upon which said decision is made. The referee shall render a report of all protests for foul riding or false entry, and his decisions thereon, which report shall be forwarded by the race promoters to the member of racing board granting sanction.

The judges shall decide the positions of the men at the finish. In case of disagreement the majority shall decide. Their decision shall be final and without appeal. Where there are more than three to qualify or more than three prizes offered, additional judges (to decide the position of the extra men required) may be appointed by the referee.

The timekeepers shall compare watches before the races are started, and shall note any variance; they shall each time every event, and in case of disagreement the intermediate time of the three watches shall be the official time. Time shall be taken from the flash of a pistol. In case two watches of the three mark the same time, that shall be the official time.

The scorer shall record the laps made by each competitor, the order of the men at the finish as given him by the judges and the time as given him by the timekeepers. He shall indicate the commencement of the last lap by ringing a bell as the riders pass over the tape for the final lap.

It shall be the duty of the starter, when it has been reported to him by the clerk of the course that all the competitors are ready, to see that the timekeepers are warned, and, before starting the men, to say, "Mount," in a few seconds afterward to say, "Are the timers ready? Are the starters ready?" and, if no reply to the contrary be given, to effect a start by a report of a pistol. Should the pistol miss fire, the start may be made by the word "Go." The starter shall announce to the competitors the distance which they are to ride. The starter may, at his discretion, put back for a distance any competitor starting before the signal is given. In case of a false start, the competitors shall be called back by the starter by the ringing of a bell or pistol fire and restarted.

Any competitor refusing to obey shall at once be disqualified.

In handicap events the starter shall post a man one hundred feet in front of the limit man, and in case of false starts, the man so placed shall drop a flag at a signal from the starter, agreed on before the race is run.

In case of a fall within thirty feet of the scratch line, the contestants shall be recalled by the starter by the ringing of a bell, and the race started over again.

The clerk of the course shall call competitors in ample time for each event, and see that they are provided with numbers properly worn. He shall report the contestants to the scorers, see that they are on their appointed marks, and call the numbers for the scorers as they cross the line at the end of each lap.

It shall be the duty of the umpire to stand at such part of the field as the referee may direct, to watch closely the riding, and immediately after each race to report to the referee any competitor or competitors whose riding he may consider unfair, to the end that the referee, before making any decision, may be creditably informed by an official as to the facts.

2—Executive Board.

It shall be the duty of the executive board to pass upon any questionable entry, and they shall have the power to make any alteration in the programme that they may deem necessary, or to disqualify intending competitors without any protest being lodged by another competitor.

3—Positions.

The drawing for position in each event shall be done by the promoters of the meeting, and the positions of the men shall appear on the programme. When it becomes necessary to draw for positions on the grounds, the work shall be done by the clerk and starter in conjunction. In heat races the winner of a heat shall take the pole (or inside position) the succeeding heat, and the other riders shall take their positions in the order assigned them in judging the last preceding heat. When two or more riders make a dead heat, they shall start for the succeeding heat in the same position with reference to the pole that they occupied at the finish of the dead heat. If more than one qualifies for the final from each heat, the second man in fastest heat shall be next outside the winner of slowest heat, and so on.

When races are run in heats and a final, the winner of the fastest heat shall take the pole in the final, the winner of the second fastest heat the next position, and so on. Only the winners of positions in the trial heats as stipulated by the terms of the race, shall compete in the final. Should two or more riders make a dead heat of any qualifying place in a trial heat, they shall both be allowed to enter the final heat. Should two or more riders make a dead heat of any final, or a dead heat for second or any lower place for which there is a prize, they may decide by lot who shall take the prize, or may again ride the distance to decide the race, at the discretion of the referee.

4—Starts.

All starts shall be from the inside of the track, and, except in flying start event, shall be from a standstill, with the left hand toward the curb, and the machines shall be held in position by an attendant (the front wheel touching the starting line) until the signal is given by starter. Attendants, when pushing off competitors, must keep behind the mark from which the competitors actually start. Should any part of the attendant touch the track in front of the mark, the competitor may be disqualified. Unless excused by the referee, every rider who enters in a handicap race must start in same.

5—Finish.

The finish of all races shall be judged by the first part of the front wheel which touches the tape fastened flat on the ground at the winning post.

6—Riding.

Riders shall pass on the outside (unless the man passed be dismounted), and must be at least a clear length of the cycle in front before taking the inside, but on entering the homestretch in the last lap of a race, the foremost rider or riders must keep to that part of the track first selected, or be liable to disqualification; and the hindmost rider or riders, when there is sufficient room to pass on the inside or anywhere on the home stretch without interfering with others, shall be allowed to do so, and any rider interfering to prevent him or them from so passing, shall be disqualified. If a rider, in attempting to pass another on the home stretch, should at any time cross or swerve so as to impede the progress of another rider, he shall be disqualified. A rider shall not change from the inner to the outside of the track during any part of a race when another rider is so near that in altering his position he interferes with or impedes the progress of the rider. No rider shall touch another. In any race wherein there shall be a violation of these restrictions, the offending rider shall be disqualified and disbarred from any place or prize, and if the referee believes that the rider intentionally committed acts of foul riding, he shall report him to the Racing Board for further discipline.

A rider during a race turning his head to look backwards, removing his hands from the handle bars, or otherwise riding in a careless or unskilful manner, thereby imperiling the safety of other riders, shall at the discretion of the referee be disqualified and ruled off the track for the remainder of the meeting in progress.

Competitors may dismount during a race at their pleasure, and may run with their cycles if they wish to, but they must keep to the extreme outside of the path whenever dismounted. If a rider be dismounted by accident, or to change his machine, an attendant may hold his machine while he mounts it, and he shall so mount at the extreme outside of the path.

If in any race, by reason of accident or withdrawal, only one contestant remains upon the track, the referee may call such contestant from the track, and award him the first prize. If a competitor, in a race for any distance not exceeding three miles, shall fall behind a quarter of a mile, or if he shall fall behind half a mile, in a race of any greater length, he shall be adjudged distanced by the referee, and shall be called from the track. Pacing, if attempted by any but a general pacemaker, shall disqualify both the competitor and pacemaker.

7—Protests.

Any protest against a competitor respecting his qualification as an amateur, or as to his proper class, must be lodged with the referee before starting; any protest respecting foul riding or breach of rules, must be made to referee immediately after the heat is finished. A competitor, upon being disqualified, shall forfeit any entry fee he may have paid.

8—Time Limits.

The referee may place a time limit on any race except handicap, team and lap races. The time limit shall not be announced to the contestants until their arrival at the tape, preparatory to the start of the race. If the competitors finish within the limit, they shall receive the prizes. If they fail to so finish and the referee is convinced by their riding and the time that they endeavor to reach the limit, he may award the prizes. It shall be his privilege to withhold any prize if, in his opinion, any competitor did not try to win the race.

9—Pace-Making.

A general pacemaker may be put in any race by the race promoter, having previously notified the referee of the fact. He shall assist no single rider, but shall act to increase the speed of the race in general. He shall, if a single rider only, be entitled to any place or prize he may win, if he starts from the scratch, or may be rewarded by a special prize, within the limits of the class.

Tandems, or pacing machines carrying more than two riders, may be put in to pace competitions only by consent of the member of the racing board in charge of the district.

10—Special Prize.

In order to secure a special prize, offered for the fastest time made at a stated distance, the successful competitor must have ridden the entire distance of the race on which he makes his record.

11—Track Officials and Handicapper—Cannot Compete.

The officers of a race meeting shall not be permitted to compete in any race meeting with which they are officially connected.

The handicapper shall not be permitted to compete in any race with which he is officially connected.

12—Track Privileges and Decorum.

No person whosoever shall be allowed inside the track except the officials of the meet. The handicappers of the meet shall at all times, however, have track privileges. Authorized persons shall wear a badge. Competitors or pacemakers not engaged in a race actually taking place, shall not be allowed inside or on the track. No one shall be allowed to "coach" competitors on the track. No shouting or remarks by trainers or attendants to encourage certain riders or disconcert others shall be permitted. Attendants, by such action, render the rider assisted liable to disqualification. It shall be deemed a dereliction of duty for any referee not to enforce the requirements of this rule.

13—Choice of Machines and Costumes.

Choice or change of machine or choice of costume shall not be limited, except that shirt shall not bare shoulders, and breeches must reach to the knee. Referee must insist on the enforcement of this rule.

In races distinctly stated on the programme of events to be for a particular class of machine, this rule shall not apply so far as choice and change of machine are concerned. Safety bicycle races shall be limited to machines whose driving wheel does not exceed thirty six inches in diameter.

Race promoters desiring to bar out a certain style or type of machine must give notice of such intention on both entry blank and programme, in order that racing men may understand the condition under which they are to compete.

14.—Competitors to Wear Numbers.

Every competitor shall receive in the dressing-room a number corresponding with his number on the programme, which must be worn on his back or right shoulder during the race. He shall inform himself of the times at which he must compete, and wait the call of the clerk in the dressing-room.

15—Fines—Professionals.

Professionals.—In the event of insubordination, strikes, or objectionable actions on the track by any professional rider, the official referee may impose a fine on such rider of not less than $5 or more than $50, which amount shall be forwarded by said referee to the member of the racing board in charge of the district. The rider shall be suspended until fine is paid.

16—Definition of Races.

A novice race is open only to those who have never won a prize in a track race, and shall be the first race of the meet.

A class race is only open to those who, up to date of the closing of the entries, have not won the first position in a track race of trial heat in the same or better time than the class under consideration.

In a lap race, the position of the first three men shall be taken at the finish of every lap. The first man shall score three points, the second man shall score two points and the third man shall score one point, and no others shall score. The contestant who crosses the line first at the finish shall, for that lap, score four points. The competitor who scores the greatest number of points shall be declared the winner, but any contestant, in order to secure a prize, must ride the entire distance and be within 150 yards of the finish when the first man crosses the tape at the end of the last lap. Any competitor failing to comply with this rule shall be disqualified. The 150-yard mark must be marked by a flag.

In a team race, the position of the first number of men, corresponding to the number of teams starting, shall be taken at the end of the race.

The first man shall count a number of points equal to the number of teams starting, the second one less, and so on.

The team scoring the greatest number of points shall be declared the winner.

A team shall be limited to three riders, each of whom shall have been a member of the club entering the team for at least three months previous to date of event. Each team member must also have resided within five miles of the city or town where the club has its headquarters, for at least six months previous to the date of contest.

In a heat race, the position of each rider must be taken at the finish of each heat. The first man shall count a number equal to that of the contestants in the first heat, the second man shall count one less, the third two less, and so on. The competitor who scores the greatest number of points shall be declared the winner.

Entries in a consolation race shall be limited to those who have not won a prize in any event of the meeting; provided, however, if only a single prize is given in the team race, members of the winning team shall not be considered to have won a prize and shall be eligible to the consolation race.

Boys less than fifteen years of age shall not be accepted as competitors in regular races and no race meets will be sanctioned including races for boys under twelve.

Any club or race promoters desiring to place upon their list of events a race of different nomenclature than those given above must first explain the nature of the event to the chairman of the national racing board and obtain his consent. The consent having been obtained, they shall print upon the entry blank and the programme of the day a rule to define the race, that the officials and contestants may clearly understand the conditions of the contest.

17—Conduct.

Any rider found guilty of unfair dealing in connection with cycle racing, or of ungentlemanly conduct on the race track, shall be suspended from the track for such a time as may be deemed proportionate to the offence. (See Clause D, Section 7, Article IV., of By-laws.)

Any racing man, attendant, trainer or manager who shall, in the judgment of the racing board, by reason of unfair conduct, coaching, blackmailing schemes, attempts to extort money from race promoters, or any other action detrimental to the racing interests of the League, may, by a majority vote of the racing board, be ruled off the race tracks and prohibited from exercising his vocation or appearing on the track at any race meet held under these rules for such a time as the board may determine. Violation of this rule will result in withdrawal of sanction privilege from promoters permitting such infringement, and suspension from racing of racing men accepting service from attendants under suspension.

Any rider, trainer or attendant, or any other person who at any time and in any place uses improper language to an officer of a race meeting or is guilty of any improper conduct towards such officers or persons serving under them, such improper language or conduct having reference to acts and things connected with the administration of the meeting or any race thereof shall be punished by suspension for such length of time as the racing board may deem proper.

All species of gambling games by riders, trainers, attendants or any other parties are positively forbidden about the training quarters and grounds of tracks accorded sanction privileges by the racing board.

18—Ignorance of Rules no Excuse.

Ignorance of any of the foregoing rules will not be considered a valid excuse for violation.

A printed copy of these rules may be had of any member of the racing board by enclosing stamp.

Interpretation of Amateur Definition.

Clause (a). You sacrifice your amateur status if you ride a wheel for money, in the hire of any person, or exhibit as a trick performer, act in capacity of trainer of athletics of any kind for pay, ride a race for a money prize, for a wager, or for gate money.

Clause (b). If you ride a race in which there are professional competitors. If you make pace for the above in public. In public shall be construed to be any performance or event where sufficient advertisement (newspaper notices will be deemed sufficient), has been manifest to attract an audience. This audience or spectators need not have paid admission to witness the event. A public road where a number of spectators have gathered together to witness the event may be considered in public.

Clause (c). Selling or pawning for cash, exchanging for other merchandise, or in any manner realizing cash on a prize. In short, the original prize must be retained.

Clause (d). If you take or accept anything in the way of expenses from any one. You must pay your own expenses with your own money. If you have received or are to receive money for your expenses from a manufacturer or any one interested in the business of cycling you lose your status. Accepting compensation of any kind whatever for riding a wheel. Entrance fees are expenses.

Clause (e). Competing for a prize of more than $35.00 in value.

Clause (f.) Racing men employed in cycle establishments, may be transferred to the professional class if the Board is convinced that they are receiving any racing advantage by trade employment. No other evidence is necessary.

Clause (g.) Outside your own State, beyond 100 miles of your legal residence. By this is meant you may ride in the State of your legal residence, and not to be restricted to the 100 mile limit, so long as it is within the boundaries of your own State. If you cross the line to go into an adjoining State, you must measure your distance by the 100-mile limit, starting from your legal residence. Special permits may be granted to men wishing to exceed the 100-mile limit, upon application to the member of the National Board in charge of the State where you reside (for his address see head of this article), who will send you a blank to fill out and swear to. If you qualify for the permit, you must keep exact account of your expenditures on each of these trips, and render same sworn to at once after each trip to member granting permit.

Clause (h.) Under this clause the National Board has decided to set aside the National Championship for the purpose of bringing riders of both classes together to determine the champion of all. At no other time or in no other event may you compete with a professional.

Clause (i.) Is plain as it reads.

Interpretation of Professional Definition.

A professional is any rider other than those included in Classes A and B, and may ride for a cash prize.

You sacrifice your amateur status and become a professional if you ride a race for a money prize, for a wager, or for gate money.

If you ride a race in which there are professional competitors. If you make pace for professionals in public.

In no case except where a special permit can be shown by the race promoter can you race for a greater prize than $100.

Forfeiture of Status.—By violation of the rules defining his class a rider instantly forfeits his standing, and by then entering a class to which he is not entitled makes a false entry, for which due penalty is provided.

Road Racing.

Same chain graphite as before, but other ingredients are new and improved.

Convincing ...Proof...

Every bicycle rider in the United States and many who are not riders, will recognize the writer of the following letter

Jos. Dixon Crucible Co., Warsaw, Ind., Jan. 2, 1896.
Jersey City, N. J.

Dear Sirs:—

Knowing that I used your No. 691 graphite as far back as 1887, and that it gave entire satisfaction, you will understand by the fact that one dozen, I used it to the exclusion of various other makes which were tendered me free. I used no other, and would say that it never failed to ensure an easy running chain.

Yours Truly, Tom W. Wilson.

If your dealer does not keep it, send 10 cents for sample. It will pay you.

QUERIES AND ANSWERS

WHAT IMPROVEMENT

Most improved the bicycle? we are asked. Was it the rubber tire (as at first used); the chain gear (which made the safety possible); ball bearings; or the pneumatic tire?

We believe the most important invention, in its day, was the old solid rubber tire, and among the four improvements named above the ball bearing would be missed the least if now taken away, but of course the modern safety as a whole is so perfect that it seems like rank favoritism to praise any one of its parts.

Emmet Bonlore, Nashville:

The terms "bicycle sundries" have come to mean a great deal. The list includes all things made for the cyclist, none of which is strictly essential to running the wheel. R. L. Carle of the Tiffin, Ohio, News, has compiled the following articles from genuine advertisements and up to date has found 74 different classes of them. Nearly every class has from one to a dozen varieties of manufacture.

Automatic balances, anti-rust, bells, brakes, brazing outfits, belts, baby chairs, bi-gears, bloomers, canopies, chain cleaners, chain lubricants, cements, cleaning brushes, chamois skin, caps, coats, cyclometers, chronometers, cameras, compasses, chewing gum, couplers, cycle periodicals, drinking cups, dog exterminators, enamels, enameling ovens, garters, gloves, hangers, holders, handles, hygienic saddles, knapsacks, knickerbockers, locks, large pumps, lanterns, lantern oils, lubricant daubers, lubricants, liniments, L. A. W. lapel buttons, maps, mud guards, name plates, nipple grips, oil cans, pumps, plating outfits, pace makers, packing cases, package racks, rear handles, road books, shoes, stockings, sweaters, suspensories, suspending cords, stands, screw drivers, shoulder braces, skirt holders, speed indicators, tire tape, trouser guards, toe clips, vises, wrenches, whistles.

We find as we study mankind, that its wont
(And 'tis easy to clearly perceive it)
Is to do all it can do to get to the front,
But the street-car conductor can't believe it.

BLESSED are the wise, for they shall have good roads.

CORRESPONDENCE

THE horseless carriage competition being arranged for May 30, by The Cosmopolitan magazine is attracting widespread attention. A prize of $3,000 will be awarded to motor carriages presenting the greatest number of points of excellence, to be exhibited in a trial trip to be made from the New York office of The Cosmopolitan magazine, City Hall Park, to a point near The Cosmopolitan building at Irvington, and thence back to the starting place. The award will be made upon the following points, the maximum being 100: Speed, 35; simplicity of construction and durability, 30; ease in operating and safety, 25; cost, 10. The route selected for the competition is about twenty-six miles in length, requiring a total run of fifty-two miles.

THE wheelmen of Blair county, Pa., expect to make bicycling the great feature of the semi-centennial celebration of the organization of the county, at Hollidaysburg, June 11 and 12. Prizes worth $2,000 will be offered by the wheelmen of Hollidaysburg, Tyrone, and Altoona, and an attractive race programme will make the meet one of the year's events in that State.

THE last shadow of doubt regarding the far-reaching influence and genuine earnestness of the good roads movement has been cleared away. To longer question the people's determination to improve the highways at any cost, will be to ignore the presence of forceful facts. One of the recent indications of the spread and deep-seated seriousness of the movement comes from Parsons, Indian Territory, where posters announcing "A grand wolf drive," contains this clause: "All wolves cap tured to be sold at public auction, and proceeds to pay expenses, balance to go on work on public highways equally between three townships."

ONE of the ratest cycle paths ever seen was that on the beach of Lake Ontario, north of Rochester, last summer. The very low water exposed a broad, flat strip of sand several miles long. There was always dampness enough in the part near the water to make it nearly as hard as asphalt, and as one swung in and out on the convoluted shore, alone or with another, it seemed like the skaters graceful, gliding poetry of motion. And then the return to the city on the boulevard of macadam and asphalt, well sprinkled with gay riders on bicycles, on horses and in carriages, up past the long park by the river, was an occasion of pleasure and inspiration.

DON'T try to borrow money on your bicycle, because it won't stand aloan.

A "ONE-LEGGED" BICYCLE.

We are asked how a bicycle may best be fitted for a man having but one leg. Would say that one very satisfactory plan is to take out the crank key and polish the end of the shaft so that it will turn freely in the crank. Then, by means of a little bracket attached to the frame of the machine, fix the pedal end of the crank permanently in the proper position, and so that pressure upon that pedal will not bind the bearing on crank-shaft. Of course the pedal may be attached to the frame without any connection with the crank-shaft, but by leaving the crank in position, it has rather a better appearance. The writer has fixed two different machines in this way, which gave perfect satisfaction.

ADVICE TO TOURISTS WANTED.

We are asked by a correspondent who intends going to Europe this summer with his wife (please observe that we say his wife), in the matter of wheels which they expect to use on the continent, whether it is better to take their trusted ——'s (the gentleman really inserted the name, which we must be pardoned for omitting), or whether they could depend upon renting wheels on the other side. Not being informed upon this subject, we ask BULLETIN readers to send us for publication, any trustworthy information.

JUDGE THOMPSON, of the City Court, Louisville, is and always has been a friend of the bicyclist, but he is also an upholder of the law. "I wish you would tell the young men," he said recently, "now the bicycle season has opened, that there is a law against fast driving on the streets, and this law applies to fast bicycle riding, or 'scorching.' I believe I was one of the first to hold that a bicycle was a vehicle, entitled to the rights of a vehicle — no more, no less. In my court, I propose to deal harshly with violators of the vehicle ordinance. This means that fast drivers and fast bicycle riders will fare alike. Don't scorch, for, if you do, the police will catch you, and when you come into court justice will not be tempered with mercy. We must stop this fast driving and fast bicycle riding."

I must say that I did not expect a new Cyclometer in exchange for my damaged one. Your Company is the most liberal of any I know of. I shall recommend to all my friends that they insist on having a "Standard." Many thanks for your kindness. ARTHUR G. PARKER, Pownal, Vermont.——I must thank you for your prompt attention in the exchange of my injured Cyclometer. The "Standard" works to a charm. GEO. W. ALDRICH, West Warren, Mass.——Many thanks for your punctual exchange. My husband and I will commend the "Standard" Cyclometer heartily. MRS. H. S. GOLDEY, Wilmington, Delaware.——Accept my thanks for your very generous dealing. EDWIN L. CHAPMAN (Union Trust Co.), New Haven, Conn.——Thank you for your great accommodation in the exchange. I run one hundred miles a week to and from my business, and each day's record proves the "Standard" Cyclometer to be true. STANLEY M. BURROUGHS, Philadelphia.——I am in receipt of Cyclometer in exchange for damaged one returned. I did not expect such liberality. Many thanks. JAMES C. I had no idea of asking you to replace mine, as I was run over and had my cyclometer broken by having horse step on it. GEO. B. CARPENTER, Chicago.——The way you stand by your agreements and published promises should meet with universal approval. For my part, I thank you kindly for your consideration. My "Standard" Cyclometer works to perfection. A. G. MCFARLAND (California Camera Club), San Francisco.——Many thanks for prompt exchange of damaged Cyclometer. I have sold a great many "Standards" this season, and they give entire satisfaction. I do not consider any other Cyclometer equal to the "Standard," even at a higher price. GEO. W. LONDON NOTES.

The state of things on the Viaduct just now is simply awful. No machines are to be had; and any one who wants a mount for Easter should get it without delay, and not be too particular as to details. There will be no cycles to be bought next week for a certainty if the rush goes on at the present pace.

A curious bicycle has been running about the streets of London of late — a sociable or side-by-side bicycle — the saddles being put on either side of the machine, which is simply a stout roadster, and the parts all being adjustable to any machine. Though I cannot help thinking that the fitments are likely to be mighty rough on the thin tubes of latter-day cycles, yet for dawdling round the Park, with a pretty girl on the off seat, I cannot fancy anything better than the side-by-side cycle.

I was down on the Epsom road on Saturday last, and the number of lady cyclists quite astonished me, especially as the roads were in anything but good going order. In all directions the fair wheelwomen were to be noted, and all of them seemed to be enjoying themselves very much indeed. On all hands I hear the same tale, and I venture to predict that when the sport has been taken up in so thorough a manner by the fair sex it will certainly not be dropped by them — if only because of its peculiar convenience as a means of locomotion.— The People.

A BOOKLET on "Emergencies and How to Meet Them," could be compiled from the columns of the L. A. W. BULLETIN In the issue of October 25th a rider told how he filled a punctured tire with sand and rode it. Now another member of the League sends us a note from Bellwood, Neb., telling of a brother who filled the outer cover of his tire with oats, and rode it that way. With all of these expedients at hand the punctured tire must be robbed of many of the terrors it has seemed to possess.

THE biggest hit ever made in calendars is the one built in 1896 by the Indiana Bicycle Co. The Boston Safe Moving Co. has just placed one of the calendars in position in the L. A. W. BULLETIN office, and now everybody in the block is as sure of the day of the month as he is that it's this week. The price of the calendar, f. o. b., Indianapolis, is $1.50, which is a small fraction of the cost of the white paper. It will save many times its price, for the 366 sheets on which the dates are printed are so large, that no prudent man will "take a day off" without thinking what a big loss it is. If you're fond of dates as big as Georgia watermelons, get this calendar.

BICYCLES IN THE PARKS.

THE wheelmen of Boston ask that the bridle paths of the park system be taken from the horse and given to the bicycle. And why not, since in a given time only 463 saddle horses were ridden over their ample paths, while 8,640 bicycles and 22,312 other vehicles were crowded together on the remaining driveways. That 463 horsemen should enjoy "roominess" that 30,952 other people could enjoy so much more numerously, is not in line with the true spirit of the greatest good to the greatest number. Wheelmen in other cities will see this in the same light. The few persons who wish to ride horses will have their steeds shod with rubber shoes and ride on the paved ways, and cease throwing dust in the eyes of the overwhelming army of wheelmen, whose hard, clean paths will not grow weeds nor need constant repairing. The parks are public property, and are controlled by the votes of the people. A bicycle's vote is just as big as that of the horse. And the above figures show there are nearly twenty times as many of them.

A bicycle has no brains: its owner should use his.

AN ENDORSEMENT.

BY "ONE OF THE BOYS."

The suggestion that the L. A. W. "go into politics with both feet" is a good one, and should be acted on. Our representatives in the legislatures are beginning to think twice before voting for bills detrimental to wheelmen. The "high-way men," when repairing the roads may be tempted to depart from the present custom of piling the cobble stones along the side-path for bicycles to run over, and put them somewhere else.

There should be a small piece of state road built in every town. Our people need something besides printed matter to educate them in road building. One of our selectmen said to me recently that "our roads would average with roads in any town in the state," and he undoubtedly believed it, never having had enough experience with better to realize the difference; but put a sample of permanent state road into every town for an object lesson, and it will do more to educate the people than tons of printing.

By all means push along that political organization (to work in the interest of cycling). We are waiting for it.

Do all you can to advance the L. A. W. Don't back-pedal.

THERE 's nothing else so good as wheeling
To cure you of "that tired feeling."

THOSE who love to range through the fields may now enjoy an occasional meadow lark.

THE best spring medicine is the bicycle. If the roads are rough give it a good shaking while taking.

SPACE IS VALUABLE.

"Three in a bed" doesn't express the crowded condition of the pages of the L. A. W. BULLETIN at this time. We are pleased to know that this state of things is occasioned in part by the fact that so many new members are being added to the League that it requires a large amount of space to print their names, even in very small type. Then a large and increasing number of advertisers are availing themselves of the only means of addressing themselves to the great L. A. W. family. Arrangements will be made to satisfy all concerned, but in the meantime the spring poets must be patient and other people, of a more practical turn of mind, must expect to find their letters "boiled down." Until more space is provided for, such words as "incomprehensibility," "transcendentalism," and others of similar length will be barred. Correspondents should use words of only one syllable and not many of those, to insure the friendly consideration of THE EDITOR.

Bicycle Bearings

are understood by but few dealers, and less riders. The New Clipper first attracted the attention of experts on bearings about three years ago. From that moment Clippers began to grow in popular favor. Clipper bearings were copied by other larger and older makers, riders talked about them, competitors tried to convince customers they were "no good" or were "soft," "cheap" and not made of Tempered Tool Steel

as we claimed. Time told the story for us. Clippers which were sold years ago are still in use. The bearings show less wear than any other part. Bicycles with these bearings are Worth Many Dollars

more than other wheels. All Clippers have tool steel cones. All Light Roadsters and C's have tool steel cups turned from bar steel and carefully tempered in oil. It is possible to have a "soft" one; but not probable. We will replace any tool steel cup or cone in any Clipper that shows wear at any time.

A HIRED MAN DESIRABLE.

The Illinois Division has followed the example which, we believe, was first set by New York, of employing a man and paying him for his entire time to look after the interests of the L. A. W. in that State.

In any State which has sufficient possibilities in the way of wheelmen and roads this course should certainly be found profitable. The business of any large division is, or should be, enough to occupy the entire attention of at least one good man.

Illinois should be a very fruitful field for L.A.W. recruiting, and we have a right to expect great results under the new arrangement.

L. A. W. officials whose time is entirely taken up with private business cannot do justice to division work, however much their hearts may be in it.

HAND THE BULLETIN TO YOUR FRIEND.

Many of our readers keep all copies of the L. A. W. BULLETIN on file, but to such as do not we would say, will you not take the trouble to hand it each week to some wheelman who may be influenced to join the L. A. W.

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

Isolation produces ignorance.
Poor roads compel isolation.
Ignorance keeps the poor roads.
Moral: Read, think, act, if you would compare favorably with the balance of the world.

THE Buffalo Association L. A. W., which increased its membership last year from 61 to nearly 400, expects to do even better this year. The association is now completing plans for building a cycle path to Niagara, to which it is to contribute $5,000. This "path" is to be a smooth road 15 feet wide, to be open for the use of all vehicles. There is so little traffic on this road that this plan will give ample room for the cyclists, and in connection with the brick pavements from Buffalo to Tonawanda, will give a continuous, smooth road, good in any weather, all the way from Buffalo to Niagara Falls.

DON'T spurn those who do not ride the wheel. Pity them.

THE bicycle has brought about great changes, and made many revolutions.

THE far-reaching effect of the wheel is clearly shown in the scarcity of horse radish.

CATALOGUES.

We take pleasure in making mention in this column of any bicycle catalogue which may be sent us. If our readers who send for any of the catalogues mentioned will kindly say that the notice was seen in the L. A. W. BULLETIN it will be appreciated by us as well as by the manufacturer.

Boyd.

One of the prettiest catalogues of the year is issued by the Worcester Cycle Mfg. Co., 45 Wall street, New York, in which the "Boyd" wheel is described. The three-color cover page is very pleasing in effect, as are the reproductions of wash drawings distributed through the book.

Valentine.

The Wilson Cycle Co., Toledo, Ohio, has issued an eight-page brief describing the "Valentine" bicycle.

Paul Revere.

The Revere Wheel Co., Boston, Mass., has issued a neat catalogue in which is enclosed an application for membership in the L. A. W. Very appropriately the book contains Longfellow's poem, "Paul Revere's Ride."

Electric Vulcanizer.

The American Electric Heating Co., Sears' Bldg., Boston, Mass., has issued a flyer describing their vulcanizer, designed for repairing punctures or tears in any kind of tire.

Handle-Bar.

The Springfield Mfg. Co., Bridgeport, Conn., has issued a brief regarding the Ryan adjustable handle-bar.

Bicycle Sundries.

The Elastic Tip Co., 370 Atlantic ave., Boston, issues an extensive catalogue of 114 pages, describing bicycle parts and sundries.

RECORDER FREEMAN of Macon, Ga., says: "I notice that bicyclists are anxious to have the courts define the rights the law gives to wheelmen, and I wish to say that a bicyclist has just as much right to ride his wheel in the streets of Macon as other people have to ride in their buggies or carriages. The roadway belongs to the bicyclist just as much as it does to the driver of a wagon or other vehicle, and those rights must be respected. The city ordinances keep bicyclists off the side-walk, but the city will protect them when they ride in the street. And, also, the bicyclists have a perfect right to use the city park. They have as much right to go on the race track as have the horse trainers."

"CYCLE PATH RECORDS OF THE WORLD,"

Compiled by J. C. KERRISON, bicycle editor of The Boston Herald and official L. A. W. Handicapper. This comprehensive book of 46 pages, given away by The Boston Herald, will be of interest to all who care to be informed regarding the achievements of the wheel.

X RAY PHOTOGRAPHY.

BY F. O. STANLEY.

At no time in the history of science has there been a more wide-spread interest in any discovery than in that of Roentgen, which was announced to the world last December. Had one been told six months ago that we should be able to photograph the skeleton of a living person, showing each bone in its proper place, also the relation it bears to the flesh, as plainly as though we were made of glass, he would have considered such a statement as simply nonsense. The accompanying reproduction made from a shadowgraph taken by the writer will give the readers of the BULLETIN a good idea of what can be done with our present appliances and knowledge of the art.

The apparatus used in making the shadowgraph consisted of a Crooke's tube and a Holtz electric machine. The Crooke's tube was designed especially for this kind of work, and so constructed that the rays proceeded from a single point, and to this feature is due the fine definition seen in the cut. The revolving plate n the Holtz machine was twenty inches in diameter. It was driven by power at a speed of 300 revolutions per minute.

Should any reader of the BULLETIN desire to try his hand at this new and fascinating work, use the apparatus described above. This advice is given as the results of careful tests of the various electrical appliances. The advantages of the Holtz machine over any form of induction coil are; uniformity of current, safety to the tube, and cheapness of apparatus. Scientists are in doubt as to the nature of the X rays. The "radiant matter" theory of Roentgen has but few adherents.

The fact that bodies are transparent to the X rays in nearly exact proportion to their lightness and totally without regard to their electric qualities is strong evidence that the effect is produced by some form of vibration, probably of the sound wave variety but of great rapidity. The X rays travel through a tube with so little loss that a picture made at the end of a tube four feet long is as bright as one made four inches away. Also, if the Crooke's tube and plate holder are put under the receiver of an air-pump and the air is exhausted, no effect is produced. This is exactly what would be expected were the force of the sound wave variety. The writer firmly believes that the X rays are longitudinal vibrations of matter, and that at no distant day these vibrations will be produced by mechanical means without a Crooke's tube or electric current.

[The above by Mr. Stanley shows that he is entirely too modest. He has not only taken the clearest pictures of living bones which have been shown in this country, but he has demonstrated (to my satisfaction at least) that the "X ray," so called, is nothing more or less than a mechanical vibration of the air, which may be produced in many ways, and which he has already produced by means of an ordinary circular saw.

It may be that electricity passing through a vacuum, as in the "Crooke's tube," will produce these extremely rapid vibrations to better advantage than will any other means, but the effect seems to be purely mechanical and not electrical.

Mr. Stanley has also exploded the theory that a dry-plate cannot be effected in vacuum by ordinary light.—STERLING ELLIOTT.]

"Once the initial expense of buying the machine is over, there is very little more spending about it, if you are a moderately careful rider."

Editorially the Bicycling World could not go beyond the above statement. At the same time, it is only fair to add that the above optimistic condition of affairs can only be realized by purchasing the highest grade bicycle. Now, dear reader, we intend to amplify the above statement and when we tell you in all sincerity that is the highest grade wheel known to the art, we have a great mass of evidence up our sleeves. We can prove it: we enjoy the seal of public approval gained by honest devotion to the public good.

Union Crackajack II

Clovers watch ye warily to see my lady pass.

Circling round her path with painted snare,
Butterfly, butterfly;
Touch her dainty hand, her neck, her hair—
As would I, fain would I—
Caressing touch, O, butterfly, her neck, her hair.

Buttercups and daisies, white and yellow,
Call to her, call to her;
Sing, O bird, your sweetest ritornello,
All to her, all to her—
Sing, O silver-throated bird, you sweetest ritornello.

Tell her all the summer holds within it
Scenes of her, scenes of her;
That her lover, every golden minute,
Dreams of her, dreams of her—
Aye, he fondly dreams of her, every golden minute.

Gliding through the breezes, fair and sweet,
Soon she comes; when she comes,
She shall find my heart beneath her feet,

Soft, I'll lay it in the clover at my lady's feet."

The latest by Mr. Beardsley, "The ideal bicyclist," shows a woman of very Bernhardtesque proportions, emerging, if one may judge by indications, from a convulsion of nature, gliding along in a state such as "Ike Marvel" speaks of in his "Dream Life." She does not appear to have any beginning or any end, a sprite or a spirit seated between two shadowy, crooked wheels which are far enough apart to be the front and rear wheels of a tandem.

If Mr. Beardsley's intention is to make people study, he is a grand success as an advertising artist. For certainly it does require good eye-sight as well as good imagination to figure out what he is trying to figure out. His pictures as a rule would make excellent illustrations for some of Rider Haggard's novels. Mr. Beardsley may be a fine artist according to artist technique, but he is not a success at drawing wheels and fair wheelers.

IDA TRAFFORD BELL.

"I AM opposed to buying any more horses for patrolmen," said O. W. Shipman, of the police board. "I shall advocate using bicycles altogether for such service. They are cheaper, cost nothing to maintain, and admit of much more effective work on the part of an officer. They should be used very largely outside of the two-mile limit, thus enabling the patrolman to cover long beats more frequently and thoroughly. This would be much cheaper than increasing the force. Aldermen have talked the matter over with the board, and I think they will favor the bicycle idea."— Detroit Evening News.

Waverley BICYCLES.

Are Built in the Largest and Best Equipped Factory on Earth.

LIST PRICE vs. SELLING PRICE

A great many bicycle dealers, especially new ones, seem to think that the bicycle on which they get the greatest discounts are the ones on which they can make the most money. Never was a greater mistake made. Many wheels now are listed far above what their actual worth warrants or what they are expected to sell for, simply for the purpose of quoting a discount that looks enticing. Many bicycles listed at $100 are openly retailed as low as $60, but for more if the buyer is an inexperienced one. In fact, such machines are never capable of commanding list price, and if the dealer can realize sufficient on a sale to come out whole, he may consider himself fortunate.

On the other hand, Waverley Bicycles are listed at $85, which is the very lowest figure at which a strictly high-grade wheel can be placed upon the market. Their quality is such that they readily command list price, regardless of what any other machine is offered for; consequently the agent is never disappointed in the realization of his anticipated profit. What is more, the Waverley Bicycles have the reputation of causing less trouble on account of defects and breakage than any other machines made, and after they are sold to the riders do not have occasion to bother the agent almost to death throughout the season. The multitude of Waverley agents consists principally of dealers who have been in the cycle business for years, and realize the advisability of holding on to a good thing when they get it. The riding season is about here, and it will be to your advantage to get in line at once.

PRISON LABOR AND GOOD ROADS

Nearly every State legislature is toying with the prison-labor question. We say "toying," for the reason that the law-makers appear to be afraid to take up the subject in real earnest.

They sort of "shy" at it, as a skittish colt does at a steam street-roller. They appear to be going ahead but they never get anywhere. They tread a good deal of water but they don't touch bottom.

The average legislator is a prudent man. He tries to be with his constituents. He also wishes to be re-elected. He doesn't know just where he stands on the prison-labor question. He is waiting for a tip as to what is the proper course.

If the utterances of the press may be accepted as reflecting public opinion, there is a widespread belief that prison labor should be utilized in the work of building good roads. Hundreds of newspapers are so expressing themselves.

The Montreal (P. Q.) Star asks: "Why should not the Ontario government try the experiment of employing prison labor on the public roads while it is in the business? The benefit reaped from good roads would amply compensate the community for any inconvenience they might fancy themselves to suffer from the presence of a few prisoners; while the steady, useful labor in the open air must be of great moral and physical advantage to the prisoners themselves. It is really a serious problem — the devising of suitable employment for prisoners. There are so few things they can do without coming into competition with free labor; a result both undesirable and politically impossible in Canada. Idleness or make-believe labor is bad for them and bad for the country. Prisons should do more than punish, they should reform; but it is folly to talk of reform when a man is given no chance for manly development. Work on the public roads would bring these men into rivalry with no class of labor; for, if they did not do this work, it would remain undone with the exception of the spattering contributions of statute labor. And the men who now perform statute labor would never dream themselves to be aggrieved if so relieved of the necessity."

And this from the San Francisco Call:

The advantage accruing from an intelligent employment of petty offenders in making roads is receiving a pleasing illustration in the southern extremity of the city, which is both convenient to the Branch County Prison and in great need of this improvement. Fifty men and six good teams have transformed a number of defective highways into valuable promoters of settlement. The good results derivable from such an employment of prisoners are these: First, valuable public improvements are made; second, a considerable expense is saved to the public, this tending to lower tax rates and to invite development both on that account and by reason of improved public facilities; third, the work is beneficial to the men who perform it, not only because it assures them good health, but also for the reason that it may encourage a habit of industry in them; fourth, it may tend to reduce the number of petty offences.

Some years ago there was a sentiment against this use of public offenders. Its origin was in the belief that work so done came into competition with that of free men. That will be the case wherever work has to be done, whether by prisoners or free men. Such is not the case with a wide range of work which prisoners may do and which otherwise would remain undone.

The subject is particularly interesting at this time when so strong headway has been acquired for the good-roads movement, and it is a matter which deserves the attention of those who are promoting that movement. It would be well to gather statistics showing how much the various counties of the State have saved, say during the last ten years, by this employment of prison labor. That the idea has been carried to nothing like its legitimate possibilities goes without question, but that does not render its possibilities any the less attractive.

Salesroom, 44 Columbus Ave., Boston.

A DOZEN DON'TS.

A page in the catalogue issued by the Peerless Mfg. Co., Cleveland, O., is devoted to the following good advice to wheelmen:

Don't!

—Apply the brake suddenly at any time; all brake pressure should be gradual.

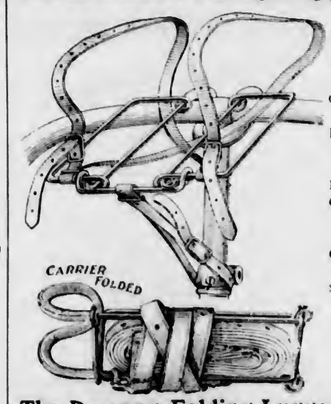
—Abuse the baggageman for neglecting your wheel; try a quarter instead.

—Fail to join the L. A. W. It did lots for you before you knew there was such a thing as a bicycle.

—Say you "Don't believe this!" Write to Mr. Secretary Bassett, 12 Pearl st., Boston, Mass., and get some cold facts and a membership application blank.

—Start out for a run without seeing that the tires are well inflated; the front one with a little less pressure than the rear.

—Carry a helpless infant on your bicycle in a crowded thoroughfare; there are already too many ways of reducing the surplus population.



—Scorch along the public highway. The nimble policeman is abroad these days awheel, and arrest and fine are not pleasant things.

– Fail to make sure that every bolt and nut is perfectly tight on your machine before starting on a long ride. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

—Ride without learning to use the foot as a brake for the front wheel. It is as effective and sure as a hand brake; and is sometimes of value should the latter fail to work.

—Coast down either a dangerous or a strange hill. "It is a long lane that has no turning;"

PAT'S PARADISE.

NIXON WATERMAN.

For years the Rebellion dragged wearily on,
Each day saw the passing of men,
And souls that the reveille wakened at dawn
It never could waken again.

So dragged all the sorry misfortunes of war,
So long was the carnage and strife,
The things that at first men were wont to abhor
Became the vocations of life.

And so at the last when the fighting was done
And the battle-scarred banners were furled,
The men who had lived by the sword and the gun
Must find a new task in the world.

It happened one morn, as they waited around,
To get their discharges, a few
Of the peace-released soldiers began to propound
The things they were likely to do.

Some thought it were best to do this or do that,
And each gave a voice to his views,
'Till someone, half-joking, inquired of "Pat,"
What sphere he intended to choose.

Now be it remembered that all through the war
Pat never found half enough sleep,
And the reveille call he had learned to abhor
With a hate that was lasting and deep.

And Pat studied a while, ere he answered, and said,
"Faith there's wan thing I know mighty well,
If I only had ten thousand dollars ahead
I'd build me a place for to dwell.

"An' I'd have me a bed an' a good wan, you know,
An' a place just beyant on the lawn
Where a bugler would come an' the revielle blow
Every morn at the breakin' o' dawn.

"Then I'd slip out o' bed an' the window I'd boost,
An' I'd shout in a tone harsh an' deep
'You go to the dhivil!' an' go back to roost
An' have all I wanted o' sleep."

USE THE FULL WIDTH OF THE ROAD.

W. F. MOORE.

Since the pulication in the July '94 issue of GOOD ROADS, of a cut representing a sign designed to protect country roads, I have worked zealously to carry out the rule in this vicinity, and am gratified to find that the labor has not been without reward. As far back as six years ago I began the work of improvement on the road on which I have lived for thirty years. Previous to six years ago we had a narrow road consisting of three ruts, running over a hill nearly a half mile in length. During the muddy seasons frequent calls were made on my next neighbor, who kept a yoke of oxen to help teams up the hill. Now, no one calls for help, and no man finds it necessary to abuse his horse in order to get his load over the hill. Although only a dirt road, we have a fine driveway at almost all seasons of the year, and the change has been made, simply by widening the road bed, keeping the stones raked out, and making a gutter on either side.

With help from others, the same improvement has been made in another piece of road near by.

I believe that a sign placed on all country roads, requesting all drivers to "keep to the right," would result in better roads and fewer ruts. I believe, also, that an article in your paper advocating "right hand driving," and inducing road makers to try this method of road protection, would result in recognition from the general public and make each and every one of our roads a delight alike to teamsters and to pleasure seekers.

LEOMINSTER, MASS.

THE new State law in Virginia says that "any person riding a bicycle who shall meet or overtake a vehicle or wagon, or person on horseback on any public highway or bridge, shall use all proper care in passing such vehicle or person on horseback to prevent the frightening of the horses that are being driven or ridden, and if said horse or horses appear to be frightened, he or they shall dismount and stop, in order to prevent accident from fright of said horses. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be fined not less than two dollars nor more than five dollars, and shall in addition be liable in civil action for such damages as may result from neglect or want of proper care."

THE best thing farmers can lay up for a rainy day is a good road.

Is life worth living? It all depends on the condition of the roads.

RACING BOARD.

A rule to the following effect has been quite generously quoted as part of the L. A. W. racing rules, viz :

"Any cyclist ceases to be an amateur by riding after April, 1896, in any bicycle race upon any make of bicycle offered for sale or manufactured in any factory, store or other place of business in which he is employed in any capacity whatsoever."

There is no such rule in our racing rules, and it is not intended that there shall be this year. Clause (f) of the amatuer rule in the L. A. W. constitution provides that any racing man employed in a cycle establishment, may, by the vote of the racing boad, be transferred to the professional class. This does not mean that the board will make wholesale transfers of such employes, but that it may use its discretion in transferring racing employes against whom it may be impossible to obtain other evidence, and by whom the board may believe that advantages are received contrary to the spirit of the amateur definition.

Important to Race-Meet Promoters.

Race-meet promoters and managers of school and college track teams will please note the following :

Every year about this time the various colleges and schools begin to develop racing men to represent them at the intercollegiate and interscholastic outdoor games. It is customary to run off one or more trials to pick out a team. Racing throughout the United States is governed by the L. A. W. and the L. A. W. requires that every track race be sanctioned. A man competing in an unsanctioned event is liable to suspension.

Now your men in particular may not care whether they are suspended or not, but they are sure to find somebody at the final meet from some other college who does care and will not allow them to ride, if under suspension. The trouble occurs every year, when by a little caution it can be prevented.

Remember that every race on a track, be it one event or more, must be sanctioned. If you are to have any trials send for sanction every time. For open races a fee is charged; but no fee is required for closed club or school events; but in all cases send for sanction and save your men from suspension, which in one or more cases last year affected the standing of the school in points won at the championship meeting.

LOCAL CONSULS.

Indiana wheelmen are becoming much interested in the L. A. W. "They like to follow the crowd." Local consuls should take a pride in recruiting. Don't let your town have a poor showing. Don't forget the half rate of insurance on wheels. You get many other advantages, as the BULLETIN, road book, reduced rates at hotels and repair shops, etc. Stand with us. Don't live on "free lunch." Each member has friends who may easily be interested. Talk to them.

Much recruiting work is expected to be done on April 26, at "Road Meet" of the Dragon Cycle Club.

1800 — MISSOURI WANTS — 2500.

TO MEMBERS: —

The annual renewal season for those of our members who joined us prior to April 1, 1895, is now here and we would thank you to bear the fact well in mind that your membership expires March 31. Unless you renew before that date your name will be taken off the BULLETIN mailing list and no papers will reach you after that date until you renew. We trust that every member of the "veteran corps" will not hesitate to send in his renewal at once to W. M. Butler, secretary-treasurer, 2030 Osage street, St. Louis, and by promptly complying with this request relieve your officers of much arduous labor in extra correspondence. The work accomplished last year speaks for itself. The publication of the new road book and maps alone is sufficient evidence that the members got value received and we want to see every present member remain with us for another year.

New Road Maps Free.

The new road map of the eastern portion of the State is now ready for distribution and will be mailed free only to those that have renewed. If you have not secured a copy of the road book to date it will be mailed together with the complete set of four maps on receipt of ten cents in addition to your renewal fee. Don't fail to renew at once no matter when your membership expires in 1896.

ROBT. HOLM, Chief Consul.

MISSOURI DIVISION.

The quarterly meeting of the board of officers was held at the South Side Cycling Club, with the following members present: Chief Consul Holm, Secretary-Treasurer Butler, and Representatives Robert, Gilbert, Bettis, Sanders, Towar, Hildebrand and Mardorf.

The minutes of Dec. 5, 1895, were approved as originally published in the BULLETIN.

Chief Consul Holm announced that he had appointed Mr. Chas. Espenchied as representative at Large, as the division now had more than sixteen hundred members.

Chief Consul Holm then read his quarterly report, of which the following is an abstract:

During the quarter more than two hundred members have been added to our rolls. A new list of local consuls has been made up, being guided largely by the record of the past quarter's work on recruiting, in judging of the probable efficiency of these officers. One hundred and thirty-six have been appointed, with Kansas City, St. Joseph & St. Louis yet to be provided for. Badges for the local consuls will be furnished by John Harriott of Boston, at fifty cents each, and note heads and cards for local consuls, at twenty-five cents per hundred. The local consuls are expected to make monthly reports on the official blanks, and a record is kept of these reports, to be checked up by the secretary's books, to show who is doing the most efficient work. The former recruiting pamphlets being nearly exhausted, it was thought best to prepare a new form, profiting by the suggestions and experience of other divisions. The road books now on hand will soon be exhausted, but as we have plates, they can be easily repainted, though new maps will be required, as our stock of these is about out. Much of the success of the past quarter has been due to the cordial and efficient aid given the officers by the Associated Cycling Clubs of St. Louis, who have assumed the financial support and management of the local tours formerly given by the board, and at considerable expense. Our city streets committee have done us yeoman service in bringing about a better condition of our city streets, and have by their personal efforts secured nearly two hundred members during the last three months. Here too, the Associated Cycling Clubs lent financial aid, contributing fifty dollars cash for this work, besides arranging with the local board of trade, so that a part of the proceeds of the late very successful cycle show will be set apart for the use of this committee. The committees for '96 have been announced in the BULLETIN. The State meet has cost much time and labor to arrange, and though I have written to several cities in regard to it, I have no definite offer to report, except from Moberly. The choice of place for the meet is left to the board.

The secretary-treasurer submitted the following membership report :

The highway improvement committee (Mr. Chubbuck, chairman), reported that they were getting organized for an active campaign for '96. Special efforts have been made to secure the passage of the bill for a national highway commission, and it is hoped this important step will be taken by Congress. Attention is called to the alleged diversion of license taxes in some of our counties to other than road improvement, as provided by law. The committee are working with the rights and privileges committee to ascertain just what can be done to check this. Efforts will be made to secure in the political platforms of both parties this year, an expression that will commit them all to the cause of better roads. The twenty five dollars formerly appropriated for our work is still on hand, the emergency for its use not having arisen.

The touring and road book committees reported through Mr. Gilbert that the Abbott case in Pike Co., referred to in December is progressing slowly. The helping hands formerly ordered are now here and will be put up in conjunction with the city streets committee. Of our 1637 members, about 483 have never sent postage for their road books, and it is recommended that another notice be sent them. (So ordered, secretary.) The new map ordered at the December meeting will be ready to send out when the renewal season begins. A list of short tours around St. Louis has been printed for local use, which is the only expense for local purposes the committee has incurred. The report was duly received.

No report from the racing committee (Mr. Sanders) as no racing is now going on.

The city streets committee reported that they had received from various sources $142.70 and paid out $127.20, leaving a cash balance of $15.50. They have further about $540 due them as their share of the late cycle show.

The committee report that most of their work is in such shape that it would be unwise to publish details at this time. The block patrol system of street cleaning is now an assured fact, and also much larger appropriations for street cleaning in '96.

Mr. Sanders as delegate to the national assembly, submitted his account, from which it appears that there is due him $5.20, besides the $50 already paid. The secretary was directed to pay this.

Mr. W. H. Shipley was duly seated as representative of the Monett Wheel Club, his credentials being in proper shape.

State Meet.

Mr. Fred K. Smith and Mr. O'Leary of Moberly appeared before the board to present the offer of Moberly for the State meet. After hearing them, the chief consul, secretary-treasurer, and chairmen of the racing and touring committees were appointed as the meet committee with power to act for the board. (Note by the secretary. A duly signed guarantee for $700 for the support of the meet has since been drawn up and placed in the secretary's hands.)

Mr. Bettis submitted a letter from chairman Ferris of the rights and privileges committee, stating that in his opinion, the charge now made by Missouri railroads was illegal, and offering to conduct the case, should it seem on further examination best to litigate the matter. One hundred and fifty dollars was set aside as the maximum sum to be spent on this most important work.

Adjourned.

Attest, W. M. Butler, Sec.-Treas.

WISCONSIN GOOD ROADS AGITATION.

The Milwaukee Sentinel, on April 2, issued a special good-roads edition of both its daily and its weekly number, and is now engaged in sending out to farmers and those interested in the work, a vast number of extra copies, sufficient to give the good roads number a total circulation of 80,000 copies. The special edition of this paper was issued under the editorship of Mr. Otto Dorner, a member of the National and State Highway Improvement committees of the L. A. W. and secretary of the Wisconsin League for Good Roads, an organization formed under the division's auspices last year. It was through his efforts that letters and articles were obtained from leading farmers, town chairmen, road superintendents and others, the illustrations prepared and the copy arranged, involving a vast amount of work on his part.

The Wisconsin division has every reason to feel proud of this edition, as the creation of one of its members, which will do a great deal in moulding public opinion on the good roads question. We would like to get more names of farmers and others to whom this paper might be sent, and every member is requested to send in names to the secretary of the division. Let the list be as large as you can make it.

By the by, if any one whom you are urging to join the League asks you what good the League is doing, do not forget to mention this good roads edition.

M. C. Rotier, Sec.-Treas.

GUIDE BOARDS FOR NEW YORK STATE.

Under the new law any five or more resident tax-payers in any town can compel the commissioners of highways to put up guide boards at any or all of the road intersections within the town limits. Any twenty or more tax-payers residing in any part of a county can compel the erection of guide boards in any or all of the towns of the county. We have prepared blank applications to be signed by tax-payers and addressed to and served upon the commissioners of highways, and these blank forms are now ready for distribution. I particularly urge all members, and especially all consuls, to immediately take advantage of the provisions of this law and take up the matter of erecting guide boards in the various counties throughout the State. Blanks will be sent on application. Let me also urge you to co-operate with commissioners by getting the wheelmen together in your town and serving upon the commissioners your proposition to supply accurate cyclometer measurements of all distances from points where guide boards are to be erected to the various towns named on the guide boards. The distances should generally be measured to the Court House (of county seats), or to the postoffices or principal hotel of the smaller towns.

Isaac B. Potter, Chief Consul.

OKLAHOMA L. A. W. MEMBERS.

Have you not among your lady friends some who indulge in the enjoyment of wheel riding? If so, why not urge upon them to become L. A. W. members, we need their help as well as the men and we want our division to have lady members as well as others. As an inducement to become members we will give every lady member a very handsome L. A. W. pin. Now let every member speak to their lady friends and see who will be the first to send in a list of lady members. At present we have only ordered six ladies' pins but earnestly hope we will be compelled to order that many more at once.

Chas. L. Wesner, Chief Consul.

BICYCLES BUT NOT WAGONS.

We are asked whether drivers of wagons can be compelled to carry lights in a town where there is an ordinance which makes a light necessary on the bicycle. We would say that depends on how much "get-up-and-get" there is in the local wheelmen. If the town contains a lot of riders who don't see what they would "get for their dollar," they must put up with whatever the city fathers give them. If, however, they will "get together" and act together they may have something to say when it comes to the making of ordinances.

Eliza:—Plan your trip thoroughly before starting. Study the subject of dress and points for rest and refreshments. Don't ride too far in a day. Don't burden your wheel with unnecessary articles.

Columbia Bicycles

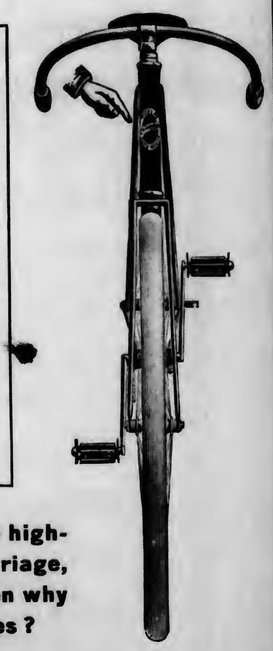
THE SAFEST TO BUY

An expert in bicycles recently said: "The safest bicycle in the world to buy is a Columbia. You know what you are getting."

BECAUSE

The Columbia is the Standard Bicycle of the World.

It is fully guaranteed by the greatest and oldest house in the bicycle business, with a record of 18 years for making better bicycles than any one else.



You will run no risk. There is no guesswork in the making of Columbias, and there are no untried devices. The Columbia Bicycle represents the carefully tested work of the highest trained corps of mechanical experts and inventors in the world.

It contains the finest materials to be had, regardless of cost, and you are sure of the quality. All materials used in Columbias are ordered to specifications, in the same way that the Government orders its materials, and they are rigidly tested both chemically and physically to see that they conform to the requirements.

It needs fewest repairs, and is easiest to repair, adjust, and clean.

You can promptly get an accurately-fitting duplicate of every one of its parts.

A Columbia will sell second-hand for more than most other bicycles will new.

$100 With money enough to buy the highest priced piano, watch, or carriage, you wouldn't experiment, would you? Then why have anything but the Standard in Bicycles?

One of the most artistic and comprehensive catalogues of the year is issued by Humber & Co. (America, L'td), Westboro, Mass. The beautiful cover design, printed in white, red and purple, prepares one for the pretty pages within, where "Humbers" are very neatly and handsomely described. All in all, the artist and the printer have made a very attractive book of it.

Viking.

The Union Mfg. Co., Toledo, O., has issued one of the most attractive catalogues of the year. The many-colored cover page design, showing a Viking ship of "ye olden time," is very striking. The book throughout is rich in color and designs.

PROTECTION AGAINST THIEVES.

In the BULLETIN of April 3d, I referred to an arrangement which had been made with the American Wheelmen's Protective Association of Chicago to register wheels belonging to League members at $1.00 per year, the regular price to others being $2.00. Much misunderstanding has resulted from certain agents of said company having refused to accept L. A. W. risks except at $2.00, and also from the report circulated in some quarters that this concession could not be obtained after a certain date.

The matter is exactly as I stated, and any L. A. W. member who fills out a blank similar to the one on page 641, and sends it with one dollar to the address given, will receive the full benefit for which other wheelmen will have to pay $2.00.

A Very Important Point

However has just been settled; suppose a wheelman who is not a League member should represent that he was, and so obtain protection at the L. A. W. rate, no question need be raised at the time; he pays his dollar and gets the contract which will expressly state on its face that in consideration of the low rate it is assumed that he is a League member in good standing. This is all that is necessary at the time, but should he lose his wheel and ask the Protective Company to act, they would at once ask Secretary Bassett if the applicant was a member at the date of his application for protection, and also if he is now a member. If the answer is "yes," then the wheelman will at once receive a wheel to use while they find the original; if it turns out that he was a fraud, no harm is done except that he has paid a dollar for his folly.

To do exact justice all round we have decided that this low rate of protection shall run with the L. A. W. membership, but not afterward; for instance, the L. A. W. membership may have nearly expired, the member may obtain the L. A. W. rate of protection for one year on condition that his membership in the League is renewed, otherwise he is protected until the end of the L. A. W. ticket.

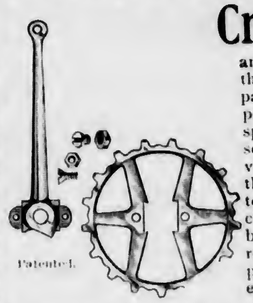
NIXON WATERMAN.

Oh, once on a time there lived a man
(There may have been two or three)
Who fancied his death would sadly twist
The whole community.
So he lived as long as he could because
He knew what an awful space
There'd be, that the world could never fill,
With him in another place.

But the next day after he died the sun
Rose up in the same old way,
And went right down in the same old place
At the latter end of the day.
And a stranger got off the cars to stretch
His legs, while the engine "drank,"
In the town where the corpse had lived for years,
And never once noticed the blank.

OFFICERS OF SMALL DIVISIONS



Sometimes report that they are unable to gain members as they would like, owing to the fact that they cannot accomplish what larger divisions can, and hence there are not so many reasons to use in soliciting wheelmen to join.

All divisions were small once. The man who said he "would have to wear his boots a few days before he could get them on" was wrong: it can't be done. It is harder to get the start than to keep the pace; but the start must be made.

Many wheelmen would join a division which has a thousand members, and who would not want to come in with a small number. How would this do? Write an agreement by which the solicited party promises to become an L. A. W. member if you can get a thousand others in the same State, make ten copies, and then go about getting signatures. A committee of ten could soon obtain a hundred each. Then put them together and ask each man to "ante."

Try it.

BICYCLE PATHS IN PARKS.

The eight hundred League members of Buffalo have started after a cycle path through the public park, and under the able captaincy of Thomas Cary Welch are likely to get it.

Parks are presumed to be maintained for the pleasure of the public. An overwhelming percentage of that portion of the non-walking public that visits the park is composed of wheelmen. This is true of all cities.

Bicyclists are, to a large degree, the public. Their numbers are rapidly increasing. They deserve recognition, not because they are bicyclists but because they are persons constituting the people.

There are over 40,000 bicycles in Buffalo, most of which are owned by voters. If their wishes are not worth respecting they should make their strength felt, or else use their ballots to wad pop guns.

Buffalo wheelmen are well organized, and most of them are awake before it is fairly daylight. If they do not secure that park path we shall almost believe there is no balm in Gilead.

"SOME HOME-MADE POEMS."

Our associate editor is a many sided man, but he is not "two faced." He is an "all-round man," and yet he is "perfectly straight."

One of Mr. Waterman's strongest points is his ability to think over old thoughts and clothe them anew in rhythmic words. He is also a prolific source of new, unharnessed ideas, which he sometimes hangs out on the line to air.

He looks at the world through the eyes of an optimist, and tells us of what he sees in the words of a philosopher. He is a preacher of helpful sermons; a singer of decidedly human songs.

He has recently published a book containing what his inherent modesty prompts him to call "some home-made poems." They bear about the same relation to the average poetry of commerce, that good home made bread bears to the product of the bake shop.

Humor, philosophy, poetry, sentiment and common sense are so delightfully blended that when you have read the hundred and ten pages your only regret is that it wasn't two hundred and twenty.

The book stores sell it, handsomely bound, for $1.00.

Don't lose sight of the importance of broad tires for keeping the roads good.

THE GREAT SHERIDAN ROAD.

OTTO DORNER.

(Secretary Wisconsin League for Good Roads.)

CHICAGO, claiming nearly two million inhabitants, and Milwaukee with a population of over a quarter of a million, are less than one hundred miles apart. Both cities are on the west shore of Lake Michigan.

For several years it has been the dream of a number of public-spirited men to unite the two cities by a broad and beautiful driveway, skirting the lake, and making communication easy and delightful between the two great centres of population. The picturesque ravines, the rugged bluffs, the stretches of meadowland, the shady groves of tall and stately trees, and the never-ending beauty of the curving shore line are to be brought from their charming inaccessibility and placed in sight and touch of one of the world's greatest thoroughfares.

The magnificent highway projected has already been completed for a distance of twenty-five miles in Illinois. It has been located and surveyed from Chicago to Fort Sheridan, and the largest portion of this distance has been graded and paved with macadam. The road for its entire length skirts the lake, being the northward extension of Chicago's lake shore boulevard, running through Edgewater and Rogers park to Evanston, through Wilmette, Winetka, Glencoe and Ravina to Highland Park, and continuing northward through Fort Sheridan to Lake Forest.

A law was passed by the Illinois legislature during the past winter, providing for its extension to the State line from Lake Forest, through Lake Bluff, Waukegan and Spring Bluff, so that the Illinois part of the Sheridan road is an assured fact. It now remains for Wisconsin to do her share, and from the character of the men who are interested in the project, and the widespread sentiment which exists in its favor, it will not be long before a coaching journey or a ride on a horseless carriage over a good macadam road may be made from Chicago to Milwaukee and back.

Beginning at the Milwaukee end of the road the drive will lead southward through the Cream city, past the Bay View rolling mills, down along the lake bank to St. Francis' seminary, along the shaded banks past the manufacturing village of Cudahy to South Milwaukee, through the picturesque ravine of Oak Creek; southward still along the lake through farming lands and wooded patches down to a level winding road to Racine, out upon the very edge of the bluffs adjoining the belle city on the south, and skirting the lake over a level ten miles of road to Kenosha, and south again another six miles to the line dividing two great States.

Horsemen all along the line are full of praise of the proposed roadway, and wait an opportunity to aid in its construction. The road from Racine to Kenosha is perhaps more travelled than any other stretch along the line, and every Sunday brings out dozens of buggies and vehicles, working their way over the sandy soil which God put there in his wisdom, and which the hand of man has left almost undisturbed. Racine seems to have made up her mind to bring about a change, and has been improving the character of this line of road within her city limits.

Interest in the Sheridan road is crystallized, so to speak, in the Wisconsin league for good roads, an organization of leading citizens formed at Milwaukee last January, in the interest of good roads throughout the State, and having the construction of the Sheridan road as one of its purposes.

It is safe to assume that the league for good roads and its friends may be depended upon to push the Sheridan road project to a successful completion, as rapidly as the character of the work will permit.

Aside from the members of the league for good roads, the wheelmen have been doing much to promote interest in the matter of securing better roads, and incidentally in the Sheridan roadway. The body of bicycle riders is becoming so numerous among all classes of people that the wheelmen may well be claimed to constitute a considerable per centage of the population.

If you owned a house, what would you call it if a man should seize one room in it for his personal occupancy, without even a "by your leave;" and then refused to pay rent, on the excuse that he believed your title to the house to be imperfect.

You would call it Trespass, would you not, and expect to deal with the trespasser by a summary process?

Similarly, if you had been granted a patent by the United States, what would you call it if a man should use that patent without your leave and without offering you any compensation, on the excuse that he believed the patent to be unsound.

You would call it Infringement, and you would feel as if you ought to have a summary process against him, would you not?

It is to be expected that the wheelmen will prove a valuable auxiliary to the League for Good Roads in pushing the construction of the Sheridan road.

Racine, Kenosha, Milwaukee, South Milwaukee and Cudahy are deeply interested in the building of the Sheridan road, knowing the value of such a highway, and the farmers all along the route are only too sensitive to the increased value which it would give to their farms.

The State law under which the Sheridan road improvements have been made in Illinois is a peculiar one. It provides for the organization of park and driveway districts, upon the petition of 100 voters in the proposed district, through the aid of the county judge, and a public election to decide upon the question of laying out parks and building roads. A body of commissioners is created, which assumes control of the proposed parks and driveways, and superintends the improvements, which must be made under the direction of a competent engineer appointed for the purpose. This law is peculiarly suited to the situation in Illinois, where cities, towns and villages are strung along the shore, almost to the State line, and where park systems are entirely practicable. It is under this law that much of the work already accomplished was done, and the law will admit of the completion of the Illinois end of the road without trouble, and in a short time. The same law also provides that the lake frontage for the entire distance shall be the property of the people of Illinois, thus insuring the entire beach for park purposes. Think of the possibilities this opens up for a magnificent system of parks, such as the world has never seen! And it is as a part of this splendid undertaking that the Sheridan road is to be built to Milwaukee.

When the first great interstate highway was dreamed of a few years ago, and the Milwaukee and Chicago friends of the project began to give it publicity, it looked to many like a Utopian day-dream, beautiful to contemplate, but as far from practicable as a bridge across Lake Michigan. But to-day the matter looks differently. Thirty miles or so of road laid out through Illinois, twenty or more miles of it completed and in first-class condition, and public interest all along the line continually growing, are bountiful assurance that the plans already formed for the construction of the Wisconsin part of this great roadway are not only feasible, but sure of success in the near future. Property-owners along the entire route eager with interest, leading citizens in each of the towns united to further the project, and methods of procedure clearly pointed out, it needs only those expressions of the public will which bring about other great things, to call into existence a magnificent roadway, a source of pleasure to young and old, and of direct practical value to all residing on or near it. The construction of the Sheridan road as first conceived by Volney W. Foster of Chicago, and as planned by representative men in the cities along the lake, would give to Milwaukee and to Chicago a magnificent thoroughfare, the like of which cannot now be found in this country, and scarcely in Europe.

THE AMERICAN WHEELMEN'S PROTECTIVE ASS'N, OF CHICAGO.

THEIR BLUE TAG PROTECTS.

In these times when the bicycle thief is unusually numerous and correspondingly industrious, the man who purchases a new wheel or rides a valuable one without securing protection against theft is foolish. The risk of a wheel being stolen when left standing for a moment by the curbing or in a hallway is great, why run such risk of loss of wheel to ride, when you can place the care with such a responsible association, who will give you a new duplicate of the stolen wheel to ride until yours is recovered and returned in as good condition as when stolen. The American Wheelmen's Protective Association, home office, 1522-1523 Marquette building, Chicago. The only association in the United States affording absolute protection to bicycle owners from loss by theft, at a cost of two dollars. L. A. W. members one dollar. The paid-up capital of the American Wheelmen's Protective Association is $100,000, with a surplus of $27,060.77, as shown by the treasurer's report, February 1, 1896.

I have investigated the financial standing of the Wheelmen's Protective Association, Chicago, and find that they are perfectly reliable and will carry out any contracts which they make.

With every tick of the clock, my dear,
The days go singing by,
And the skies are blue and our hearts are true,
And there's love in your laughing eye.
And never you care if the silver hair
Steals into each golden lock,
For your heart must know you dearer grow
With every tick of the clock.

With every tick of the clock, my dear,
We drift from the shores of youth,
And we swifter glide on the broader tide
Of the grander sea of truth.
The flight of time but smooths to rhyme
Life's every grief and shock,
And we nearer grow in love's glad glow
With every tick of the clock.

HIGHWAY LOCATION.

GOOD roads are being practically and scientifically considered by the Oregon Road Club, of Portland, Ore. It recently issued a bulletin in which W. B. Chase, a member of the club, gives some interesting points on "Highway Location." The following lines are taken from his paper:

To locate a wagon road properly is a work requiring no little thought and careful consideration. To weigh all the conditions, giving to each its proper importance, and finally to make a location in which conditions are balanced, requires much time and thought, and cannot be done in a day. To be sure, it is easy enough to say that a road over which a team can haul a ton is better than a road on which half a ton is a limit. But, maybe the people who are to use the road have more horsepower and time to spare than money. Again, the traffic of a district may be light, so that it is cheaper, both at present and in the long run, to endure the inconvenience of steep grades than to reduce them.

Again, the future development of a district must be considered. A traffic of twenty tons a day now may grow to a hundred tons. The loss caused by steep grades might be unimportant to the losers in the first case, but serious in the latter. To express it differently, what does grade cost the users? Or what effect has grade on the traffic? What would it be worth to the users of a road to have a lighter grade? How far would you be justified in spending money to go around a hill to avoid going over it?

All other things being equal, the farm line is the place for the road. In the middle west, especially in the prairie States, the section line was generally as good as any other, but in the hill countries the locator ought not to be required to locate on a division line, simply because it is some one's farm line.

In the study of grades, the direction of the heaviest traffic should be considered. Most of our market towns are in the lowlands, while producing districts are higher up. Obviously, a hill down which a load must pass is not so objectionable as one which a load must ascend. You would not spend so much money nor use so much distance to reduce a grade which is down for most of the traffic, as you would for one which must be ascended by the loaded teams. Of course, the subject of direction of traffic cannot be considered as closely as in railroad work, but it ought not to be lost sight of.

Enough undulation in a road for good drainage is desirable, but heavy undulation causes more loss of horsepower and waste of time than any other one mistake of the road locator. To go up a hill just to go down again ought to be avoided, yet that is what we are doing on most of our hill roads.

The locator, when laying out roads connecting places of different altitudes, should endeavor not to lose grade, that is, when the grade has been brought down to the desired level, keep it there; or, if it has reached the desired altitude, do not go down again.

We ought to be willing to make considerable distance to avoid making an up-grade in the direction of heaviest traffic steeper than five per cent. Grades up to ten and twelve feet in one hundred are not uncommon in mountain districts, but they are bad for any but light traffic. Keep your long-grade lines below five per cent if possible, or, if they must be steeper, break the line occasionally with a short distance of easier grade. It sometimes occurs that a valley road miles long, has one or two bad hills in its way. This is the place to spend your money to reduce grade, either by digging down or going around, for this one hill determines the hauling capacity of your teams, which might haul two tons over the miles of nearly level valley road, and but half a ton over the hill. A road leading from one town to another, or from a densely populated district to market or through manufacturing districts, ought to have lower grades than simple neighborhood roads.

The traffic determines whether it will pay to go around a hill or over it. If it is a poor road, those who use it must suffer for it, either by hauling more loads or increasing horsepower. Avoid dead-level roads unless they can be well drained. Avoid swamps, if possible. It is very expensive to build a good road through a marsh, and expensive to maintain.

Do not lose sight of the drainage question. It is easy enough to drain where grades are, but dead-level valley roads are too often a little earth thrown up between two long frog ponds. Drain these off, if possible, for, depend upon it, drainage is the soul of a good road.

Avoid crossing streams, whenever possible. Bridges add much to the cost of a road.

In general, keep your grades as low as you can consistently with the purposes for which the road is built, and the ability of the people to pay for work, not forgetting that the better the location the less it will cost to build and maintain the road.

Some persons think that the day of the road horse is about ended, and the roads should be located and built to suit some sort of motor. I do not share the belief. The horse will be with us a good long time yet, but a road that is good for horses is good for anything else.

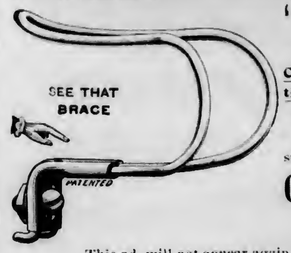
AN OBJECTION TO GOOD ROADS.

Chief Consul Scherer of Tennessee, tells of a farmer who gave him a severe reprimand for advocating good roads. His objection to the modern highways was based upon the novel argument that the mud road was more economical. "Why," said he, "I can drive my mules the year round without shoes in the dirt, but on these blamed stone roads it costs me thirty-six dollars per year for shoeing."

PAVEMENTS MADE OF HAY.

Permission has been granted by the mayor of Baltimore to lay a sample of a new pavement, made of swamp hay, in order to test its durability and to ascertain whether it should be allowed to compete with asphalt and other paving material.

The material of which the paving blocks are made is swamp grass, which grows luxuriantly in the salt marshes along the Atlantic coast. It grows very compactly and in many places to a height of six or eight feet. It is cut at any time of the year, except when growing.



Laborers go into the marshes with large, flat boats and cut the hay, which falls into the boat as it is poled slowly through the water. The material is then put into bundles and cut up into the proper length by a machine similar to the ordinary hay-cutter, with which the boat is provided. It is afterward subjected to a moderate pressure and made into blocks by a machine attached to the cutter, about 6 inches thick by 16 long and 20 wide. These are then fastened in the shape stated by wires, very much in the manner as hay is put up. Before the blocks are shipped from the factory to their destination they are treated with a preparation of "dead oil," and they are then ready to lay upon the street.

The cost of putting down this pavement complete, including the preparation of the concrete foundation, is given at from $1.40 to $1.70 per square yard. The cost will vary somewhat from surrounding conditions, the freight on the blocks, cost of labor and cost of crushed stone and other material for the foundation. — Exchange.

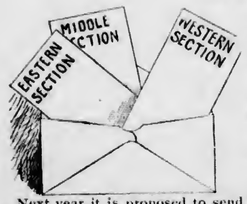
TO PENNSYLVANIA MEMBERS.

At the end of the year Pennsylvania should have more than twice the members she has now. Just a little "hustle" on the part of every member will bring that result.

The Pennsylvania Button.

Members of the Pennsylvania division will be supplied with an exceptionally handsome and artistic official button, emblematic of the Keystone State. The face is of the finest enamel. The wings and tire of very pale blue, flecked with gold, the keystone a rich carmine, the background is white.

One will be mailed to member sending ONE application with accompanying entrance fee and dues ($2.00), or on receipt of 25 cents.



A Neat Cap Pin.

Same design in a larger size for those who prefer it as a cap pin, or for ladies' use, will be sent to any member sending two applications with accompanying entrance fees and dues ($4.00), or on receipt of 35 cents.

In sending applications for which you request either the button or pin do not send direct to Secretary Bassett in Boston, but mail to the secretary-treasurer of the Pennsylvania division, box 1177, Philadelphia.

New Maps.

A new colored road map, which is far the best Pennsylvania ever published is now on press.

The scale is twice as large as map in present road book; contains many heretofore unreported roads, and is printed on bond paper. It is in three sections, and may be carried in coat pocket or in the pocket in back of road book.

It will be sent to every member who renews or who has renewed, and will be embodied in the road books sent to new members.

Next year it is proposed to send every member of the division an entirely new and revised book, on which road book committee are working.

A Recruiting Leaflet.

A neat little eight-page leaflet setting forth the advantages of League membership in Pennsylvania has been prepared, and a package will be mailed to members to distribute among non-League riders. One member writes: "I received twenty-five of the little booklets, and as a result enclose eight applications." Another (a dealer) says: "I put one of them in the tool-bag of each machine sold, and in every package and letter I send out, and a number of the recipients have already sent in applications."

Display it Everywhere.

A very striking hanger, to which is attached application blanks and recruiting literature, is now ready. One of these should be hung in a conspicuous place in every club house, cycle store, and similar place in the State. Write for them and see that they are displayed.

Subscribe for the Bulletin.

Every member should subscribe, even if there is another copy in the family. Notices of meets, voting blanks, and all sorts of invitations are mailed from this list and if your name is not there you are likely to be missed. Secretary Bassett writes: "Pennsylvania has fewer non subscribing members than any other State."

More Local Consuls Needed.

There should be a consul in every town in the State. If there is none in yours it is your fault. Write at once to the chief consul asking for the appointment yourself, or else recommend some other good active man.

A handsome button similar in design and color to the member's button, but a little larger in size and bearing the word "Consul" has been made for consuls. It will not be sold, but is sent to any consul requesting it when sending two applications, which should be sent to the secretary-treasurer.

The State racing board is preparing a State circuit and if your town desires a date on it, address the chairman of the board.

ARIZONA.

I have this day appointed Frank D. Meyers, consul at Prescott, Arizona.

W. L. Pinney, Chief Consul.

1900 — MISSOURI DIVISION — 2500.

To Members, — The left-hand figure shows our membership if every present member renews. The right, what we are aiming at. To reach them by May 1, will require tall hustling but nothing is impossible if we all work.

Our elegant map of eastern Missouri is ready and will be sent free only to those who joined in 1896, and those who renew promptly, who joined in 1895.

To further stimulate the prompt renewal of memberships we have had an offer made us to furnish each member who renews prior to May 15, an elegant Missouri Division button of special design, which cannot be purchased at retail for less than twenty-five cents. They must be ordered in quantities and for this reason we must hear from you at once in case you want it.

St. Louis Dry Streets.

Again the city authorities are lending their aid to the L. A. W. and by the good offices of the city streets committee, the dry streets schedule has been greatly extended this year. Maps are being prepared showing streets which are to be left unsprinkled before 9 A. M., and after 5 P. M., printed in red. They will be sent free to all St. Louis members. Each ward and precinct will be in charge of a special ward consul whose name will be printed on the margin of the map. If sprinkling is not done right, complain to your ward consul who will promptly investigate. Street commissioner Milner is an L. A. W. member and will see that rules are strictly enforced. Is the privilege of riding over clean dry streets worth one dollar per year? If so, remember that it will only be ours just so long as we retain the big St. Louis membership we now have. Moral: Renew at once.

St. Louis County Souvenirs.

We have a quantity of the St. Louis county tour souvenirs, furnished by the associated cycling clubs left and will in addition to gifts offered above, mail one, while the limited supply lasts, to every member who renews. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Pike County Tour.

The annual pilgrimage to the magnificent roads of Pike County will take place May 17. We will leave St. Louis May 16 on the new steamer "Jo Reynolds," which has been specially engaged for the trip. Make your arrangements to attend now. Particulars announced later.

Annual State Meet.

Will be held at Moberly, July 3, 4 and 5 and the Moberly Cycle Club is making big preparations to entertain us in royal style. The city is centrally located on both the Wabash and M. K. & T. railroads. Both make special low rates to attract a big crowd. Address P. J. O'Leary, Sec'y, Moberly, Mo., for information.

Robt. Holm, Chief Consul.

NORTH DAKOTA.

We need local consuls in every city, town and hamlet. I call upon at least one reputable member in every such place to write me either suggesting himself or someone suitable for the office.

The season is now on us, now is the time, don't delay, but write me at once. Let every member make himself a committee of one to secure at least one new member, and we shall soon have a flourishing division.

O. St. C. Chenery, Chief Consul.
Grand Forks, N. D., April 10, 1896.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The following members have been appointed local consuls for the current year.

Woods, S. M. Gaylord.

O. St. C. Chenery, Chief Consul.

TENNESSEE DIVISION.

Members, — Your League membership expired March 31, and unless promptly renewed you will not receive the Bulletin. From the large increase of wheelmen this year we can safely count on a membership strong enough to issue a road book. To do this and get proper information, we need local consuls in every small town and hamlet. I therefore ask the wheelmen of all localities to name some one or suggest themselves, so that we can get information when needed. Note also, every League member will get a handsome white and gold enameled Tennessee division, L. A. W. button mailed to you on receipt of your renewal or application. Any member sending me five new applications will receive a fine 1000-mile standard cyclometer, L. A. W. emblem on it.

Charles J. Scherer, Chief Consul, 211 Main St.

QUERIES AND ANSWERS

W. C. F., NEWARK, N. J.: The tire of the driving wheel of a safety bicycle does not slip perceptibly on a dry road.

WILLIAM B. PHIPPS, Albany, N. Y.: For best route to Richmond, Va., consult road books of States you will cross, and make inquiry of local consuls residing in towns you wish to pass through.

FORT SCHUYLER: Ask local consuls and consult road book for best route to Washington Bridge. Your question and answer would interest but few. The space occupied would be lost to the other 40,000 readers.

WATERBURY: On a five days trip eat and drink just enough of anything that agrees with you. Don't eat very rich food nor drink very strong drink. We cannot tell you just what to eat. It might not agree with you. Your stomach will tell you what is the correct thing. Avoid culinary pyrotechnics.

Columbia Bicycles

Saddle Comfort

Eighteen years of making bicycles has taught us many things, among them how to design bicycle saddles that will be comfortable to all kinds of riders —and stay comfortable.

We are not theorizing as so many doctors and others are. We have tried and tested and proved. The Columbia saddles are proper in shape and adjustment. One can ride them for days or months or years without injury or discomfort.

They may require some adjustment, but that is amply provided for. A few experiments and the Columbia saddle fits. This is the verdict of men and women, doctors, scorchers, pleasure riders, all. It will be your verdict.

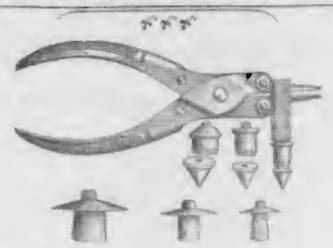
A NEBRASKA member writes that cramping of the muscles of the calf is probably caused by having the saddle too low or riding beyond one's strength.

A MEMBER suggests that wheelmen everywhere should throw to the side of the road all pieces of wire, stone, china, and everything likely to injure a tire, as thereby roads will be made much better.

H. W. STONE, 106 N. Tenth street, writes: "Since Wisconsin has not yet issued its road book, I wish some member of that division to give me best route from Minneapolis to Milwaukee, via Madison.

"IF we ride but ten miles," writes a Texas member, "we pay the railroad company twenty-five cents and the baggageman twenty-five cents for handling our wheels. Can't someone suggest a remedy?" Organize the wheelmen, and then, if you don't see what you want, ask for it.

"IF FASHION is to dictate," writes a lady member, "make fashionable the idea of dressing according to the occasion, and not protest against bloomers for bicycles any more than against bathing suits that are conspicuously worn at the beach. For short rides in town the skirt of medium length is probably best, but for a ride of several miles against a wind a skirt to the ankles means a severe strain on the strength, and a shorter skirt, easily lifted by the wind, is of doubtful utility."



J. M. MARSHALL, 37 Charles street, New York, wishes suggestions regarding best route to San Francisco by wheel, and other points of interest regarding such trip.

INFORMATION regarding best route from Cincinnati to Preston Co., W. Va., via Gallipolis or Parkersburg, is wanted by W. P. Breed, 721 W. 8th street, Cincinnati.

A NEW YORK member thinks wheelmen should work to have all vehicles carry lights at night, as it is impossible to hear or see a buggy fifty feet away on a soft country road on a dark night. It's a one-sided law that works against wheelmen when it makes them the only ones liable for not carrying lights. The wheelmen are also in greatest danger of personal injury.

W. H. S., Dalton, Pa.:—We have heard many stories concerning electric bicycles, but have no personal knowledge of any which have been materially successful. The only means of applying electricity to such a vehicle is a storage battery, and at present we are not aware that any storage battery is made which gives out sufficient energy in proportion to its weight. We are more than anxious that something in this line shall be accomplished, and will be glad to hear of any successful experiments.

CORRESPONDENCE

"I SPENT the greater part of last summer in France on a wheel hired in Paris, with which I was well satisfied," writes Eugene I. Moses, of 56 W. 34th street, New York. "The wheels my three companions and myself rode were English wheels made in Coventry and 1894 pattern; they weighed about thirty-two or thirty-three pounds, and were the best we could find after an exhaustive search through the Paris stores. The cost was about fifteen dollars each, for a little over five weeks, a part of which had to be deposited on hiring the wheels. Although our machines ran easily and stood the severe usage we gave them very well, I think that we were fortunate, and do not believe every one would have the same good luck. If I were going again, I should most unquestionably take my own wheel: the cost of transportation is small. The bugbear of the custom officials is not so black as it is painted. A deposit of the amount of the duty is required on entering France, which is returned to the owner of the wheel on leaving the country. If the prospective tourists wish any information or advice about wheeling in France, the fruits of my experience are at their disposal."

A NEBRASKA member writes that cramping of the muscles of the calf is probably caused by having the saddle too low or riding beyond one's strength.

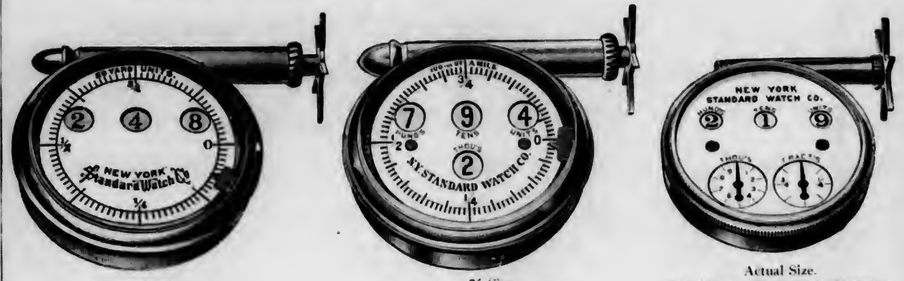
A MEMBER suggests that wheelmen everywhere should throw to the side of the road all pieces of wire, stone, china, and everything likely to injure a tire, as thereby roads will be made much better.

H. W. STONE, 106 N. Tenth street, writes: "Since Wisconsin has not yet issued its road book, I wish some member of that division to give me best route from Minneapolis to Milwaukee, via Madison.

"IF we ride but ten miles," writes a Texas member, "we pay the railroad company twenty-five cents and the baggageman twenty-five cents for handling our wheels. Can't someone suggest a remedy?" Organize the wheelmen, and then, if you don't see what you want, ask for it.

"IF FASHION is to dictate," writes a lady member, "make fashionable the idea of dressing according to the occasion, and not protest against bloomers for bicycles any more than against bathing suits that are conspicuously worn at the beach. For short rides in town the skirt of medium length is probably best, but for a ride of several miles against a wind a skirt to the ankles means a severe strain on the strength, and a shorter skirt, easily lifted by the wind, is of doubtful utility."

J. M. MARSHALL, 37 Charles street, New York, wishes suggestions regarding best route to San Francisco by wheel, and other points of interest regarding such trip.



INFORMATION regarding best route from Cincinnati to Preston Co., W. Va., via Gallipolis or Parkersburg, is wanted by W. P. Breed, 721 W. 8th street, Cincinnati.

A NEW YORK member thinks wheelmen should work to have all vehicles carry lights at night, as it is impossible to hear or see a buggy fifty feet away on a soft country road on a dark night. It's a one-sided law that works against wheelmen when it makes them the only ones liable for not carrying lights. The wheelmen are also in greatest danger of personal injury.

W. H. S., Dalton, Pa.:—We have heard many stories concerning electric bicycles, but have no personal knowledge of any which have been materially successful. The only means of applying electricity to such a vehicle is a storage battery, and at present we are not aware that any storage battery is made which gives out sufficient energy in proportion to its weight. We are more than anxious that something in this line shall be accomplished, and will be glad to hear of any successful experiments.

"Where there is friction," writes a Kentucky member, "a lubricant is necessary, and as oil causes dust to collect, I think it bad to use on exposed places. My chain gives better satisfaction by oiling joints and using graphite on inside of chain, as graphite will not penetrate the joints. After oiling, I always clean chain well and use graphite sparingly, so as not to gum-sprocket wheels and chain."

F. C. R., Flagstaff, Arizona: The artist who selects the colors for the cover pages of the L. A. W. BULLETIN has had years of experience in a rainbow factory. We havn't told him of the harsh things you wrote, for his is a very sensitive nature, and were he provoked by criticism he might do even worse than he has. He is very familiar with colors, being able to shut his eyes and tell when he is feeling blue. He is opinionated and very fond of a dispute. We think this explains why he doesn't care to get colors together that will agree.

A member writes that Nantucket Island roads are not so bad as the Road Book paints them. Great improvement has been made. There are 200 wheels on the island, Macadam roads and cycle paths.

"It is perfectly natural that the man who persists in calling the machine he rides a 'bysickle' should use it to mow down unsuspecting pedestrians." This, from a recent issue of a bicycle paper, prompts a member to say that the proper spelling of the word is "bicicle" or "bicircle," not "bicycle." Cycle is derived from a Greek word which means a recurring period of time, such as cycle of the sun or of the moon, and does not refer to a geometrical figure at all, whereas "circle" is derived from a Greek word meaning a circle or ring. "Bi" being a contraction for "bis" (twice), bicicle, — or, more properly, bicircle, — simply means two-ringed: the wheels representing the rings or circles. The second syllable should be short. A southern writer says the word is pronounced just like the word icicle. We have never heard anybody pronounce this word as though it were eye-sigh-cul, and there is no more authority for bigh-sigh-cul. The accent is on the first syllable, and the second and third are both short. This is a vehicle that is steadily growing in popularity, but there is no more authority for calling it bi-sigh-cle than for ve-high-cle. Let us sit steadily in the saddle, without leaning over the handle bars, and keep the accent on the bi. And yet the fact remains that if the public decides to call it "bi-sigh-cle," so shall it be.

SIDE PATHS.

It seems probable that a thousand miles of side paths or wheel ways for bicycles will be built this year.

The interest in them is growing as the paths are extended in length and their worth increased.

The side path bill which recently became a law in New York, authorizing the supervisors of Niagara county to appoint side path commissioners, and to expend the funds raised by the taxation of cycles in the construction of side paths for cycles, gives the undertaking a legal standing and protection. This was necessary to keep other road destroying vehicles off the paths when the roads are bad.

The gist of the law is that a majority of the members of the board of supervisors may tax bicycles to build side paths along public roads under the supervision of a board of side path commissioners.

The board has power to tax wheels owned in the county from fifty cents to a dollar. "Wheels" include any unicycle, bicycle or tricycle, whose wheel or wheels, or either of them, shall exceed twenty-four inches in diameter.

A board of five commissioners, appointed by the board of supervisors, has the power to construct side paths and to repair and improve same, and to expend the side path fund each year for such work. It has the right to condemn and examine land for right of way, but is subject to the jurisdiction and control of the officers charged with the duty of maintaining streets and highways.

The yearly tax is paid between January and March to the collector of taxes or city treasurer. Wheels bought after March 1, must be taxed within a month after purchase for the rest of the year. The side path board can draw on fund so raised, but not in excess of amount on deposit.

The county clerk keeps the books of record, and provides for the identification and registering of wheels. When tax is not paid on a wheel the collector or city treasurer may sell the same on six days' notice to the highest bidder. If anything remains after all expenses of sale are paid, the owner of wheel gets it. The owner can redeem his wheel at any time before the sale by paying the tax, and all expenses incurred and one dollar fees for seizing the cycle. All cyclists may use the paths subject to the board's rules governing speed, lamps, signs, etc. Violations are punished by a fine not over five dollars.

Driving horses, cattle or other animals, or vehicles of any kind propelled by animal power along the side paths, shall be a misdemeanor, and may be punished by a fine not exceeding five dollars.

Dealers in bicycles shall be exempt from paying the tax on all cycles carried in stock, but shall pay the tax on each cycle kept for rental or use.

LAMPS AND BELLS.

The wheelmen of a certain western town have refused to obey an ordinance which aims to compel them to carry lamps and bells. They refuse obedience on the ground that other vehicles are exempt from these rules. We doubt the advisability of such a course, and have so written them. In the absence of a State law as we have in Massachusetts, cities have the right to make such regulations as they please in regard to the carrying of lamps, bells, etc. Proper laws, while they are in force, should be obeyed by all good wheelmen. If, however, the laws seem to be obnoxious, wheelmen should not forget laws are made (and repealed) by officials who are elected by the votes of the people, and if the wheelmen in a given town permit the election of officials who are antagonistic to them, it would indicate, either that there were not wheelmen enough in the town, or that those who were there were not sufficiently aggressive.

THE MONKEY-MEN.

dangerous thing to meet, and that no gentleman was ever induced to take up with bicycling by observing the antics of a monkey-man.

They say also that if there is any one type of bicyclists that represents the ungraceful, ungentlemanly side of wheeling, it is the scorcher and his companion, the gum-chewing, loud-talking "bike" girl.

As a matter of course, this class of persons are no worse on the wheel than off, but the bicycle gives them more of a chance to get up to the top of the column, next to reading matter, where they appear sadly conspicuous.

Scorching, of itself, is not so bad, but the how and when and where should be carefully thought of. The best place for it is on a oval track, inside of a high-board fence.

The street and highway scorchers have made enemies, who, in turn, have disliked all wheel riders. The fewer scorchers there are the more kindly the non-riding public will feel toward the bicycle.

INDIANA ROAD BOOK.

With this new L. A. W. road book a blind-folded man could go over the entire State of Indiana and never strike a stone or a stump. It is bound in rubber cloth, stiff or flexible covers, and contains five fine maps covering the whole State. It is free to League members, or is sent for 75 cents to others by Frank S. Chance, 107 E. Washington street, Indianapolis.

THE BICYCLE VOTE.

Politics are the rather undesirable means of obtaining desirable ends. Wheelmen have votes.

Votes elect legislators. Legislators make laws.

If the wheelmen of any community will organize and demand the rights their numbers merit, they will get them.

Votes count. Why shouldn't they? Laws are made for the people.

Anything that isn't worth asking for is not worth having. If your representative in the city council or State legislature is unacquainted with your wishes, how can he be expected to act intelligently?

Get together. Organize. Find out what would add to your comfort as citizens, not necessarily as wheelmen, and if it belongs to you by constitutional right, try to get it.

Do it peacefully, good naturedly, forcefully. Join the L. A. W.

THE Orion Cycle Club, just organized in Brooklyn, requires every member to be a member of Orion Lodge No. 717, F. & A. M., from which it takes its name. This club is believed to be the first and only Masonic cycle club in the United States. It demonstrates how universal wheeling is becoming. Formerly only the light social organizations gave this exhilerating sport attention, whereas now, with this new club as an example, the more dignified and reserved fraternities are taking it up.

WHEELS AND CHURCHES.

The bicycle has made itself felt in nearly every phase of business and social life, and in nothing else is its force more apparent than in the decreased church attendance, against which so many ministers are raising their voices.

A great many preachers who are sufficiently philosophical to read, and accept the full meaning of the handwriting on the wall, are adapting themselves and their churches to the new order of things. The Brighton Chapel, Coney Island, sends out the following circular:

CONEY ISLAND, April 29, 1896.

The building of the cycle path to Coney Island has brought into our community thousands of wheelmen, and especially is the number increased on Sundays.

It has suggested itself, that among such a great number there are many who will be pleased to spend an hour in the house of God; and, in furtherance of this idea, we have arranged a short, spirited service, to be held every Sunday during the season, to which we extend a cordial invitation to you and your friends to attend.

The service will commence at 11 A. M., and the congregation will be dismissed at 12.

Brighton Chapel is situated on Neptune avenue, Coney Island, about six hundred feet west of the cycle path. Turn to the right when you reach the "five mile" stone.

We have appointed a committee, who will cordially welcome you and take charge of and check your wheel free of charge. W. F. SHILLECK, Pastor.

THE POWER OF THE PEOPLE.

The great victory which we wheelmen have gained over those organized monopolies, the railroads, and for which so much credit is due to Mr. Potter, is but a pressage of what we, the people, can do when we know what we want.

The politicians got just such a lesson on the bill, which they "jammed through," putting a speedway through the Central Park. In "Wealth against Commonwealth," Henry D. Lloyd gives an account of a similar victory by the people of Toledo over the Standard Oil Co.

And now Depew says that "the assemblymen were frightened into granting" our reasonable demand by the thousands of letters which poured in on them. Hail Potter! They had good cause to be frightened. "Our Chauncey" says he will introduce a bill compelling clothiers to furnish suits free to bicycle riders, and will "test" our free transportation bill in the courts. If he has not learned that there is a clear distinction between clothiers who are subject to free competition, and railroads which have acquired exclusive rights of way of uncalculated value by grants from the careless public, wheelmen will find means to teach him.

If the bill should be set aside by servile courts under railroad influence, it will invite the people to ask who made those autocratic monopolies, ruling by virtue of franchises over public ways; and to take for the people in taxation what the people have created. GOOD STREETS.

The St. Louis wheelmen have issued a fine map, showing location of principal residence districts in St. Louis, and indicating all streets that are sprinkled or left dry in the morning and evening for the use of wheelmen. The splendid plan is in the hands of the local consuls, whose badges entitle them to a respectful hearing from city officials, and an assurance that all proper demands will receive prompt attention. St. Louis will have the best riding this year it has ever known. The work is done, as indicated in the following instructions to local consuls:

1. Call on the Sprinkling Inspector in your district and become personally acquainted with him.
2. Whenever bad sprinkling is reported to you by any wheelman, kindly ascertain if possible if the complaint is justifiable (sometimes for slight dereliction complaints better not be made,) and, if so, call on the inspector to see if he will not remedy the matter for you.
3. If the inspector will not or can not do this, then report direct to the City Streets Committee, Sandford Northrop, Chairman, Commercial Building, stating that you have seen the inspector and the matter has not been remedied.
4. If you notice any bad sprinkling in other districts, report the matter to the local consul for that district, and do not report it yourself unless it continues.
5. On the streets which are not included in the Dry Streets Programme, the sprinkling should be rational. Consult your inspector in regard to this, and see if you cannot get him to lower the bands on the wagons in his district, so as to produce sprinkling instead of flooding.
6. When you notice a cart that is sprinkling at the wrong time or throwing on altogether too much water, speak to the driver in regard to the matter, and, if not remedied, see the inspector. Inspectors have orders to pay attention to complaints of gentlemen who wear the local consul badges.

THE Hoboken (N. Y.) ferry charges as much for carrying the passenger's wheel as for the passenger, — three cents in each instance.

WHEELMEN of Clearfield, Pa., have had repealed an ordinance compelling the use of lamps on bicycles, the borough attorney deciding that the ordinance was unwarranted and unconstitutional.

THE mayor of Elmyra, N. Y., issues permits to proper bicyclists to ride on the sidewalks of that city. A recent letter from the chief of police says: "We have but very little trouble with riders of bicycles in this city. They most all adhere to the rules." The rules are printed inside of the folder permit, which must be shown on the request of any officer.

Cranks are moving things the world over, but a positive crank and one yet readily detached is widely appreciated.

Bicycles cranks, like Uncle Sam's dollars, require to be on a thoroughly solid basis. We have used the simple crank pin for years — every cyclist knows it on sight. It is a good thing, the best to date. We have respect for good things, and retain them.

THE OHIO BICYCLE LAW.

THERE is nothing harsh or unjust to the railroad companies in the law just passed by the Ohio Legislature, providing that a traveler may take his bicycle on the train with him, just as he does his trunk, without extra charge. Bicycles have become so naturally the adjunct of every happy and well-regulated individual that it is high time they should be called "baggage."

The new law declares:

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, that hereafter for the purposes herein specified, bicycles are declared to be baggage, and shall be transported as baggage for passengers by all railroad companies operating in the State and be subject to the same charges and liabilities as other baggage, and no passenger shall be required to crate, cover or otherwise protect any such bicycles: provided, however that a railroad corporation shall not be required to transport under the provisions of this act more than one bicycle for a single person.

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

This means simply that a bicycle shall be treated as a telescope grip or trunk. Up to the limit in the number of pounds the railway companies carry as baggage, the passenger's wheel shall be admitted to the same privilege as his other personal belongings.

There is one good thing, at any rate, to say of the seventy-second General Assembly. It has stood by the wheelman. — Cincinnati Tribune.

HANGING, like many other troubles, distresses a man more before it occurs than it does after, — we guess.

Woman and the Wheel.

IF YOU are a woman it is your bounden duty to call down blessings upon the head of him who first made a wheel which a women could ride. It was a great day—a white day for the sex and the race when woman mastered the graceful art of riding: for by the wheel she has reached many things most desirable.

From the makers and sellers of wheels comes the good news that the out-put of wheels for women this year will be greatly in excess of any past year. The news is good news, because of its cheering significance. It means that many women will be more in the open air and sunshine than ever before in their lives; it means that their flabby muscles will grow firm and strong, their eyes bright and quick, that their cheeks will lose their sickly cast, and will glow with life — in short that the thousands of women who ride will become healthy creatures in mind and body. And every improvement thus made in personal health, means a corresponding gain in public health, so that we are all better for every wheel sold to a women.— Womankind.

THERE is most always a star shining somewhere for the man who looks earnestly for it.

A POSTAGE stamp illustrates the value of a determined purpose. If it didn't stick to it, it never would get there.

Room 56, Equitable Building,
BOSTON, February 25, 1896.

I desire to notify the trade that I am the owner of Letters Patent of the United States, granted to Pardon W. Tillinghast, of Providence, R. I., No. 486,915 of Nov. 29, 1892, and No. 497,791 of May 23, 1893, for improvements in pneumatic tires, which said Letters Patent cover the manufacture, sale and use of all single-tube or hose-pipe tires in the market.

The following firms and companies have been licensed to make and sell such tires, to wit:

The Pope Manufacturing Co.
The B. F. Goodrich Co.
The Hartford Rubber Works Co.
The Hartford Cycle Co.
The Boston Woven Hose and Rubber Co.
The New York Tire Co.
The Hodgman Rubber Co.
The Newton Rubber Works.

No other manufacturers are authorized to make or sell single-tube or hose-pipe tires, and dealers are warned not to purchase such tires of any other manufacture. Any person selling or using any such tires manufactured by any one not licensed by me will be liable to prosecution for infringement.

THEODORE A. DODGE.

What Will Happen?

Either the Tillinghast Patents will be sustained, or they will be defeated.

If they are sustained, every unlicensed manufacturer must pay to their owner all the profit he has made or by reasonable care might have made on his single-tube tires. By taking a license now, a manufacturer insures himself against this disaster, the price will remain where it is, and enought profit can be earned to enable him to make good tires.

If the patents are defeated, every one can make single-tube tires, and a few large manufacturers will sell them at a ten per cent. profit over a cost so low that no one else can compete without cheapening the goods. Result: no profit earned in manufacture; a market flooded with ill-made tires, and no wheelman assured that he can get back sound from a ten-mile spin.

Is not every manufacturer better off with a Tillinghast License?

"HOW BE YE, JIM?"

NIXON WATERMAN.

"How be ye, Jim?" That sunny voice
Comes back through the misty years.
And I see the grace of an old man's face
Smile up through his happy tears.
Long time he strays down the quiet ways
Where the path is strange and dim.
But I keep the cheer of his love and hear
His words, "How be ye, Jim?"

There came to me as comes to all
The voice of Purpose when
I lost the joy of a careless boy
For the broad, bold world of men.
And the skies were glad or dark or sad;
My thoughts ran back to him
Till we met once more at the old home door.
And he said, "How be ye, Jim?"

Sometime in the far off by-and-by,
When the years are old and gray,
I shall wander down from the busy town.
Through that sweet and quiet way.
I shall find the rills from the rose-crowned hills,
And drink from their blissful brim;
And, the best of all, I shall hear him call
And say, "How be ye, Jim?"

FRANK C. FLINT, local consul at Chicopee Falls, Mass., is doing some telling work. Among his aids are lots of five applications for membership, bound together, on the backs of which are effective arguments for good roads, the advantages of League membership, and local ordinances regarding bicycles.

"I AM a little past seventy years old," writes a New York member, "and have been riding eleven years, and have derived much benefit, especially in helping to break up chronic asthma. I ride mainly for recuperation and the pleasure of riding. If I feel good for fifteen miles, I take twelve; if eight, I take six; if four, I take three. I sit upright on the saddle, and have my handle bars as much above the level of the saddle as scorchers are below. Needless to say I do not ride as if I had four legs. I think the brake is a great protection in going down hill, but not against collision."

CAN a man be said to be "running high and dry" if cycling in a Vermont town?

MR. ALDEN CHESTER, one of the most respected citizens of Albany, N. Y., and a judge of the Supreme Court of his state, having been elected on the Republican ticket by a majority of nearly 5,000 in a district usually of that many Democratic majority, has become a member of the L. A. W. He is also an enthusiastic wheelman, having ridden the past two years. Wheelmen can rest assured that any cases involving the rights of wheelmen, coming before him, will be decided without prejudice, and strictly in accordance with right and justice.

FOR the first time in the history of American politics, a delegate to a national convention will ride 1,000 miles on a bicycle to nominate a man for the presidency of the United States. This delegate is Joseph R. Clark, of Brooklyn, the president of the board of aldermen of that city. Mr. Clark is about 40 years old and has been prominent in Brooklyn politics for many years. He is an enthusiastic cyclist, and when he announced that he would wheel all the way to the national convention a number of his friends and fellow wheelmen said they would accompany him. Mr Clark and his athletic delegation are already in receipt of numbers of letters from cycling clubs that will meet them along the route and help them on the road to St. Louis.

MECKLENBURG COUNTY, N. Y., has built most all of its thirty-one miles of macadamized roads within the past few years. Real estate has advanced in price, and everyone is so pleased that the work will be continued as rapidly as county finances will permit.

THE Missouri Division of the League of American Wheelmen has instituted mandamus proceedings in the Circuit Court against the Missouri Pacific Railroad with a view to testing the baggage law in that State and compelling the railroads to carry bicycles free on a first class ticket. The matter has been under consideration for some time. If the mandamus proceedings are unsuccessful a bill will be presented to the next legislature, compelling the railroads to carry bicycles as baggage.

IN ENGLAND the owners of estates above one acre are about 300,000; in France they are 7,000,000. In sixty years, 8,500,000 emigrants have left England, and less than 500,000 have left France. In England, 33 per cent. represents rural population, while in France it is 75 per cent. In the French post-office savings banks there are $600,000,000. Small farms well tilled are the best for the individual and the nation. Small farms will bring increased rural population, better roads, better society, free mail delivery to farmers, and a bettering of all conditions. The good roads of France are a strength to the nation.

NOT UP TO DATE.

The illustration, published herewith, shows a toll-gate in Rondout, N. Y., a city of 23,000 inhabitants. This toll road occupies an important location and should be free to the public. The only men employed by the company are those who collect the tolls. The road is in a very bad condition. The city authorities have commenced proceedings to buy the turnpike, and what has been a public injustice, and almost a nuisance, bids fair to be corrected. It is a little late in the day for up-to-date cities to permit prominent streets to remain as toll-roads.

BICYCLES AND TOBACCO.

We do not exaggerate the least. The bike craze has infatuated, enslaved, at the least calculation 500,000 males who were formerly addicted to the smoking habit. If these 500,000 male slaves to the bike craze have weaned themselves to smoking only two cigars less a day — this must be considered a most moderate calculation, as the bikist hardly ever worships less than from four to six hours at the shrine of his wheel — then the consumption of cigars is decreasing at the rate of 1,000,000 per day and 700,000,000 in a year. And the decrease in our cigar production since the bike craze has set in has actually been 700,000,000 per year. — United States Tobacco Journal.

IMAGINARY trouble is more distressing than the real article because there is that exasperating uncertainty about it.

THE grade of a road should be measured by its steepest hill.

TREATMENT OF RHEUMATIC TISSUES.

BY DR. BICYCLE.

Since this briefest of accounts is to concern my own case, it will, of necessity, be dreadfully personal.

Recurrent attacks of acute inflammatory rheumatism, continued through many years, caused me to grow stiffer and clumsier. With the hope of retaining a reasonable use of my muscles, it was my habit to walk between my home and my place of occupation, a distance of near three miles. But the time arrived when I felt inclined to do but half the distance, and finally I did that with more or less of inconvenience. I was fifty-five years of age, but knew that I was physically sound, and had not a doubt that I would be vigorous but for rheumatism.

In July of the year past, my kind hearted coworker made to me what seemed the most ridiculous of all possible suggestions: he advised that I try riding a bicycle. Consider my age and stiffened muscles, my inability even to walk far with any comfort, and judge what my chances were to ride so crazy a vehicle as a bicycle, a born wobbler and dodger, a typical jolter even of sound bones and healthy muscles.

However ridiculous, the suggestion was rational at its foundation. If only I could drink enough water daily, and free it, chiefly through the skin, there was much more than a hope of opening my choked-up sewers. There might be elimination of the almost insoluble residues which stiffened my anatomy.

It was my own fault that I was so hurt in the bicycle school. I tore a pair of trousers until they no longer could be worn, and I sacrificed two shirts. There was scarcely a place upon its floor on which I did not bruise my already sore tissues. I was compelled to defer some of the half-hour lessons until my hurts had somewhat healed. And all because I would not permit a nimble little darkey to push my mount around in the school. But at the end of ten evenings I had taken the usual five lessons, when I moved to the asphalt the scenes of my falls and bruises. And duly, I was at evening among the riders over the smooth roads of the park.

Not only had I grown somewhat less clumsy and stiff, but from added enjoyment of life I judged that my health actually was better. Pleasurable exercise in the free air, and profuse perspiration, were accomplishing effects as yet beneficial. Moreover, I knew precisely how to pass the evenings until summer had gone, and my family had returned to the city.

The park course is one and a half miles in length, a level road around a lake. I rode there during evenings, rode and drank water and perspired prodigiously. As I grew stronger, greater distances were accomplished; until at the end of a month I easily and pleasurably would ride as many as ten miles within the usual two hours. After a bath, I slept the sleep of a tired child, and awoke refreshed and light hearted. For quite surely, I was getting the best of the enemy.

Not once did I permit myself to ride until tired, or to attempt heavy hills, or to ride rapidly for short distances. Nor did I attempt any manner of the tricks which sooner or later bring to grief riders both young and old.

At the end of ten weeks from my advent in the park, or about the middle of October, one of the pleasantest of fellows and myself started from Newark, in Delaware, to ride down the peninsular. We made thirty miles that day and slept in Smyrna. The second day we rode fiifty miles, and at the end of it I knew that I had been on a bicycle. We made fifty miles on the third day, and I had another inspiration — I knew that I could ride fifty miles daily over a good road, with enjoyment of every hour of the time.

And yet, three months ago I was in effect a kind of cripple, who had no pleasure in walking even a single mile. Here was indeed a miracle.

It was our delayed summer holiday, and it proved as happy a one as either of us had ever enjoyed. One of us was regarded as an invalid, the other as a cripple, but we contrived to enjoy almost every one of the two hundred miles to Cape Charles. The sandy ones were good when one fell from his perch, and we did not object to them.

During the past winter, there were but few days in which I could not ride to and from my work, a total of six and a half miles. And now I can walk with the best of them; and can, and do, enjoy riding as many miles as the average rider cares to make in an afternoon. I am not at all conscious of any rheumatism.

THE Vermontville (Mich.) Echo says the building of good roads, as they are now to be built by that State, will ruin every farmer in the country. The Echo should get some light from the happy, prosperous farmers of New Jersey. who are being ruined (?) in just that way. Even some editors should be born again.

RENTING WHEELS ABROAD.

"TAKE your wheels to Europe with you," advises a New York member. "The foreign wheels are heavier and less adapted to American riders. Tourists should join the Cycling Tourists Club."

A NEBRASKA tourist says, "it is best to take wheels from this side on a European trip. It is cheaper than renting, and English wheels weigh much more than American. It is best to join the Cyclists Touring Club, as hotel system alone will enable one to save, every day, the expense of joining."

"GOOD wheels can be rented in Paris for fifteen to twenty dollars a month," writes a tourist. "Women's wheels with drop frame, are not so easy to obtain, as most French women ride diamond frames. The wheels average much heavier than ours. If a tourist is expert at patching punctures he had best take his tried and trusted wheel with him. The flinty, broken stone used in road repairs in many parts of France is severe on tires. Extra spokes and chain links should be taken. Bicycle repair shops are found in every city and town."

IN REPLY to questions asked, a Louisville member says, "There is no duty on wheels taken into Holland. The purser, who is an officer of the ship, does not accept tips nor intrigue with custom officers. A friend and myself crossed last summer. Our two bicycles in a trunk were carried free. Landing in Germany or Belgium, no duty is required. In France the duty paid is returned on leaving the country."

AMONG the many influential citizens who are joining the L. A. W., our attention is called to the Hon. Geo. W. Aldridge, commissioner of public works of Rochester, N. Y. It is also interesting in this connection to state that wheelmen in Rochester have for some time been licensed to ride on the sidewalks in the less crowded parts of the city, and without any resulting disadvantages.

THE up-to-date cities now use street sprinklers with wheel tires six inches wide, and the outside of the front tire is placed even with the inside of the rear tire, the machine thus rolling twenty-four inches of street as it moves along and doing, excellent work in keeping the streets in excellent condition.

THE Texas State Roads League has called a meeeting at Galveston, June 9. The L. A. W. is working to make the event a big success, which it promises to be.

THE suggestion that the League colors should be red, white and blue, instead of royal purple, is endorsed by several correspondents. They speak of the inspiring and patriotic sight it would be to see the highways of the land made brilliant by the display of the national colors. It is a suggestion that many will think favorably of.

THE OREGON ROAD CLUB.

One of the strongest good roads and cycling organizations of the United States, is the Oregon road club of Portland, Ore. The prestige which the club enjoys can be appreciated from the statement that it started out with a charter membership approximating six hundred, and it has enrolled to-day a total membership of over eight hundred.

The organization of the Oregon road club was an innovation in the formation of good roads clubs, which similar orders elsewhere will do well to follow. This club was the first to take the initial movement favoring the relegation of cycling to a second place in club discussions, at all times in favor of constant agitation of the good roads movement, which was the one serious object the organizers of the club had in view. While the interests of the bicycle riders have not been slighted, the encouragement of cycling has been made incidental to the more serious work the club has on hand. The announcement of the adoption of this policy demanded for the club the recognition of the most representative of Oregon's people, and as a result the club claims a prominence and an influence to-day, not accorded to any other good roads organization west of Chicago.

The affairs of the club are managed by a board of eleven directors. These include Hon. George P. Frank, mayor of Portland; H. L. Pittock, the millionaire journalist; Gen. Charles F. Beebe, in charge of the State militia; George H. Durham, one of Portland's prominent attorneys, and others equally as well known in Portland business and professional circles. The president is E. G. Jones, prominently connected with The Oregonian, Oregon's representative paper; E. D. White, who promises to be a second I. B. Potter in his active efforts in favor of the good roads movement is first vice-president; H. L. Pittock is second vice-president; F. W. Leadbetter a young gentleman of marked ability is secretary, and L. L. Hawkins, one of Portland's leading bankers is treasurer.

The Oregon road club occupies elegant quarters. The club building is one of the old mansions of Portland. It stands in the center of a whole block of ground, well laid out and kept in perfect condition at all times. The club house has been fitted and furnished at great expense. It has all the appointments of any first-class club, including cafe, billiard and pool room, parlor and reception halls, etc. The club members have the use of the first steel bowling alleys ever introduced on the Pacific coast. Four of these alleys have been put in by the club. The prime movers in the organization of the Oregon road club may well feel proud of the remarkable progress the club has made, since its first formation a little more than eight months since. It has already attained a distinction in "good roads circles," which is accorded to-day to but few of the oldest establishd "good roads" clubs of the country.

WANTED, AT ONCE. Bicycle Frame Builders and Filers. Permanent employment, and good wages to skillful men. The Premier Cycle Mfg. Co., South Ave., Bridgeport, Conn.

fuel and water, are now being worked, with the power plants, in many cases, twenty miles distant from the mines, and the wonderful magic force is conducted through a wire, over mountains, and through ravines, to the electric mine cars, drill, motors, etc., at the mines.

In the beginning, the electric cars simply took the place of the horse cars, or "jack rabbit motors," as they were jokingly termed, but as the city grew, and the motors were more powerfully built, the roads were extended to all the outlying districts and almost invariably along city streets, which of course, become woefully less in the suburbs.

When they were extended into the county, they were constructed on the farmers' right of way, the public highways, as much as possible, with the two exceptions of the Houseman Air Line, and the St. Louis & Suburban Ry., the latter succeeding the old narrow gauge. Even the Houseman Line cut into Shady avenue, through Webster, when it might have used the side of the road, or better still, a right of way of their own.

The Electric "street" railways, as they call them, not only use the county roads, but they leave them in a most deplorable condition, which of course, farmers' pocket books will have to fix? We don't think! As there was supposed to be some kind of an agreement for all this sleight of hand ballast, and "right of way" performance, we are either going to see the electric roads held to it, or we will see that men are elected who will. The suburbanites may want rapid transit and cheap fares, but they won't get rapid transit on electric railroads along the public highways.

Superintendent and Assistant Superintendent . . . .

Cycle Works Wanted.

A prominent Eastern Cycle Manufacturer wishes to secure by the end of this year a thorough and experienced practical Superintendent and Assistant Superintendent for the manufacture of high grade cycles. Applicants must occupy such a position at the present time and must have a long experience, and be of unquestionable ability. Any communications will be treated strictly confidential.

A type of highway that is growing in popularity.

Southern Snap Shots—"Gwine to roast dat Possum."

Southern Snap Shots.—"Representatives of some of the first families."

For their own interests, if nothing else, electric railroads should have their own right of way, fenced in and cattle guarded, and everything in strict railroad order; so that twenty miles per hour would be merely a minimum possibility, and there would be no wagons stalled in the track, or smashed, nor numerous other accidents, many of which they could be held liable for.

If the farmers would organize themselves on the order of the League of American Wheelmen, or rather a Good Roads League, they could then command respect and could hold a voting power which could not be ignored. In speaking of the League of American Wheelmen, the writer can say, from his own knowledge, that they are to a man the friend of any good roads movement, and are ever ready and willing to help the cause of good roads in any way within their power. To be sure, the wheelmen pay no tax, but their bicycles are road makers, and not road breakers, as the soft rubber tire rolls over the surface of the road, merely smoothing it and spinning any stray rocks to the side of the roadway.

If we are going to stop this highway monopoly, we must, first of all, unite, for, "United we stand: divided we fall." And when we have formed a solid organization, then nominate a good roads man, and elect him.

This is a country of magnificent distances, but many of the roads between distant points are n't altogether magnificent.

"Good, hard, level roads remind us.
We may make them all that way;
And you never more will find us
Using mud and sods and clay."

D. L. SPENCER, Local Consul.

A GROWING SENTIMENT.

BY "EMERY."

All hail to the morn! when the sun in its glory
Shall rise o'er a land where "Good Roads" do abound;
Then the hearts of the people, in song and in story,
Will make the whole earth with their praises resound.

WISCONSIN LEAGUE FOR GOOD ROADS.

The first annual report of the secretary of the Wisconsin League for Good Roads is a decidedly interesting one. Although in existence barely one year, this organization has every reason to be proud of the work already accomplished. Through their efforts many miles of macadamized road have been constructed. The League was also largely instrumental in securing the appropriation in Marinette county, on November 18, of $8,000 for road construction,—a similar or larger appropriation to be made annually.

The League membership has more than doubled since its organization, and public interest in road improvement has been aroused to such an extent that it is safe to predict radical reforms throughout the State, within the next year or two.

WORKING THE ROADS.

"I have just returned from southwestern Virginia," said a Washingtonian to a Star reporter.

"What did you see of interest?"

"I saw them work the roads," was the reply. "Riding along, I noticed a group of men. Each had a gun, and by the roadside, half hidden in the clump of bushes, was a jug of whiskey. They were shooting at a target improvised out of a tin can. There were two road scrapers, upon which games of seven-up were in progress. 'Having a picnic, boys?' I asked.

"'Naw,' said one of the men, 'we're workin' the roads. Got to do it three days every year. This air our las' day, an' I'm nigh a dollar loser. One mo' day an' I'd ketch up.'

Then I rode on over the rocky road and meditated.—Washington Star.

FIX the road right, this time.

FOR hauling purposes a road is no better than its worst place.

THE roadmaster was lazily leaning over his front fence, chatting with the town clerk and the postmaster, when up rode Miss Betsey, with her favorite basket full of stones, which same she carefully spilled on his front walk.

"I know you must value these, Mr. Stiles, or you wouldn't leave them on our roads with such care, so I've brought you a basketful. I'll bring some more next time I come this way, for I know where there are lots." And she did, too!

Of course the story spread like wildfire, and official inertia was for once goaded into efficient action. When he had picked up the third basketful out of his front yard, and was sure she meant business, Mr. Stiles harnessed up his team and mended his ways thenceforth, to the greater comfort of the community. It was easier to do that than to live at odds with Miss Betsey. For Miss Betsey Bennett was odd!—Extract from a story by John Preston True.

He Was Wool-Dyed.

"They ain't no such thing as a real Christian," said the man with the patched jeans.

"Don't you think they ain't," said the man with the soft hat turned up behind. "I knowed one myself."

"Huh! Whatever did he do? Never miss goin' to meetin'?"

"Oh I ain't layin' so much on that as on when it comes time to work the roads he went out and did a real honest day's work, jist as if he was workin' his own farm."—Indianapolis Journal.

"I AM familiar with the system by which counties in Texas employ convicts in road making," writes a western member. "Convicts sentenced for not more than two years are formed into camps and worked with spendid results. Wheelmen could do much in directing such work, and should talk the matter up in every State. Such a move would add to the pleasure of all and to the wealth of the nation. It would benefit the health of the convict, teach him habits of industry, and remove his services from competition with free labor."

BATH, Me., a city of 10,000 inhabitants, has won a world-wide fame for proficiency in ship building, but she doesn't appear to know how to build roads. The condition of Lincoln street, one of the principal thoroughfares of the city, is made known by this paragraph, clipped from a Bath newspaper:

"The hack owned by George Bright got stuck in the mud on Lincoln street last evening, and it was impossible to move the vehicle until this morning, when the aid of one of the city teams was secured."

WILL there be a dark bicycle in this presidential race.

BLESSED are the meek, for there are only a few of us left.

COLORADO DIVISION.

OFFICE OF CHIEF CONSUL, Denver, Colo.

TO LOCAL CONSULS:—

The renewal season is near. It is very necessary that we retain every member we have. You are responsible for your districts. See every man personally.

Remember this: Not one of them has a just cause for refusing to renew. No matter what excuse he may offer, don't let go. Stay with every man until you have convinced him that it is not only his duty, but a privilege to put up his dollar.

Begin now. If the member has not renewed by the date at which his membership expires he will not get the Bulletin until he does renew; therefore get every renewal in advance.

If he says that the League has not done anything for him, tell him that it has done much which he does not appreciate. He has received his Bulletin and his road book, which are at least two things in direct evidence. You know what the League has been doing throughout the country: tell him about it.

Tell him that in Denver we have secured, against the greatest odds, the passage of an ideal ordinance doing away with bells and lamps; making all vehicles turn to the right; and punishing those who throw wire, glass and other dangerous things into the streets. Tell him that at Colorado Springs and at Pueblo we are working for the passage of the same ordinance. Tell him we will extend the work throughout the state as fast as we can.

Tell him that at Denver we have secured the erection of guide boards at every cross roads within fifty miles of the city. This will be extended wherever possible.

Tell him that the state has never been organized. We are doing it. We are doing it thoroughly. The Chief and Vice-Consuls, though busy men, spend four or five hours every day in this work.

When we are organized we will work for many good ends, of which these are some: A uniform law regulating the use of bicycles throughout the state on lines of the Denver ordinance; A sign board law; A law making railroads in the state carry bicycles as baggage; A highway commission; A more complete system of League hotels; More maps for the road book, and every other good thing we can think of for the benefit of wheelmen.

HUSTLE! Keep the work going! Be generous in giving your time to the League, and remember the watchword for '96: Colorado 2,000. Do your part.

Yours for accomplishment,
GEO. L. MCCARTHY, Chief Consul.

G. E. JOHNSON, Chairman Press Committee.

MISSOURI DIVISION.

A special meeting of the board of officers was held to-day with seven members present:—The following action was taken:

1. The new road map of the Eastern portion of the State is to be issued free to all members joining in 1896. Those in good standing can obtain it for twenty-five cents, or free on receipt of renewal for 1896.

2. Two thousand maps of St. Louis, showing the "Dry Streets Schedule for 1896," were ordered and fifty dollars appropriated therefor.

3. Touring committee were authorized to have thirty Helping Hands erected in St. Louis County, at the cost of the division, same having been donated by individual members in 1895.

4. Secretary was authorized to issue free of charge L. A. W. buttons to members renewing prior to May 15th.

5. Card Index System adopted for recording names etc., of members, and thirty-five dollars set aside therefor.

6. Secretary directed to correspond with American Wheelmen's Protective Co., in regard to issuing advertising matter to our members.

7. Secretary instructed to suggest to the national officers whether arrangements could not be made for securing special rates for accident insurance to L. A. W. members.

8. Fifteen dollars set apart for framing thirty copies of the New Dry Streets map, to be displayed in the agencies, for recruiting purposes.

W. M. BUTLER, Sec.-Treas.

ST. LOUIS, April 11, 1896.

CONNECTICUT DIVISION.

The road book of Connecticut will consist of twenty-seven maps, scale two miles to one inch, each about 7 x 9 inches, and with but two folds. A light, convenient form of book, with but little printed matter, and no advertisements except such as pertains to the L. A. W. The proofs are now out for correction. Reports should be filled out as fully as circumstances will permit. The book will be presented to every new member, and those who renew can procure it of the secretary-treasurer for half a dollar. The price to outsiders is two dollars; the price to members of other divisions has not yet been decided upon. It will likely be completed June 15, but all depends on the promptness of those making the reports. Requests are also made for information regarding the ordinances of the various towns relating to wheelmen, and places in the State where it is desirable to have sign posts erected. These sign posts, if this matter is taken up, will be erected at the expense of the towns, should our researches in the State laws uphold us.

PHILIP W. WESTLAKE, Chief Consul.

BRIDGEPORT, April 24, 1896.

A Grave Joke.

There's lots of foolishness and chaff
In what is heard and read,
But the man who writes an epitaph,
He does that "on the dead."

BICYCLES FOR BOYS.

I do not, for an instant, hold that the bicycle is going to redeem the world, or turn the rising generation into an army of saints, but I do know from personal experience that the boy who rides a bicycle and comes to school with a healthy glow on his face, that means a good circulation and a hearty appetite, produced by exercise in God's free air and God's bright sunshine, is a much more tractable lad than is the same boy when he is allowed to mope around the house or the corner grocery, listening to the vile stories of vile men, or concocting some deviltry of his own. And not only is he more tractable, but he is more teachable, he learns more, is a better boy, and will make a better man. — Womankind.

Two small boys meet on the street and the following conversation takes place:

Jo — Say, Tom, do you see that wheel? She's been pneumatic tired a week and goes like fun.

Tom — That's nothin', ma told Aunt Mary, yesterday, she'd been rheumatic tired a month, and she can't go at all.

THE man who loves with his whole heart truth, will love still more he who suffers for truth.— Lavater.

SIT up and look ahead.

DON'T buck against the inevitable.

A terse truth and a butcher's pig
Have different pilgrimages,
For one becomes the sage's saw,
The other our sausages.

SELLING a worthless complexion beautifier is a "clear skin" game.

ONE of the sublimest things in the world is plain truth.— Bulwer Lytton.

To Anna who had won my love
I said: "Oh, lady mine,
Give me just one fond kiss to prove
The tender spark divine."
"No, it can never be," said she,
"Your pleading I resist,
For if I yielded, don't you see,
I'd be an Anna-kissed?"

THE dignity of truth is lost with much protesting. — Ben Jonson.

NATURE loves truth so well, that it hardly ever admits of flourishing.— Pope.

The biggest game of draw
This old world ever saw
Was when Joshua razed Jerico, creating war and din;
Then the people of that city
All cried aloud in pity,
And all said they were sorry they had ventured to stay in.

TRUTH must be destructive before it can be constructive. — Carson.

TRUTH, like roses, often blossoms upon a thorny stem.— Hafiz.

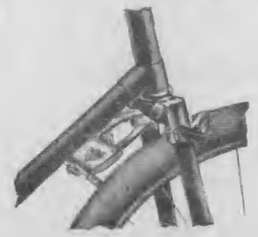
QUERIES AND ANSWERS



EMMA L.: — To determine the gear of your bicycle, multiply the number of teeth on the front sprocket by the diameter of the rear wheel, and divide the result by the number of teeth on the rear sprocket.

RICHARDS: — Interest in good roads is not waning. It is more manifest this year than ever before. Every man, woman and child who rides a wheel becomes an advocate of improved highways.

L. V. M.: — "They say" bloomers will be worn less this year than last. We don't know how "they" know. We believe no one has ever seriously contended that bloomers look as well as skirts: and looks go a long way with the ladies.

JASON AND OTHERS: — We cannot tell you the condition of roads in obscure and out-of-way localities, for the simple reason that we do not know. We have never ridden a wheel from Ragtown to Jiggerville. If you can't find them in the road book, write to some local consul who lives in the locality you wish to visit.

Columbia Bicycles

Facts Popularity does not come without cause. Nothing but the standard quality that is invariably maintained in Columbia Bicycles could secure such indorsement as comes unsought to Columbias.

EVERYBODY'S CHOICE When The New York Journal offered the choice of its ten leading makes of bicycles recently to the ten winners of a guessing contest, every one of the ten selected Columbias. And The Journal bought ten Columbias at $100 each.

TIFFANY'S CHOICE When Tiffany & Co., the famous jewelers, desired to make an experiment with elaborate decoration of bicycles, they of course first selected a Columbia—and paid $100 for it. They have decorated other bicycles since, but Columbia was first choice.

CHOSEN by the GOVERNMENT When the United States Government recently asked for proposals for furnishing five bicycles, it received bids from other makers of from $50 to $85 and our bid of $100 each for Columbias, their invariable price. And the experts selected Columbias, as in their opinion Columbias were worth every dollar of the price asked.

If you are able to pay $100 for a bicycle, will you be content with any but a Columbia?

A WOMAN'S VIEW.

BY LUCIE MCKEEN.

PERHAPS the women of the land will submit to the law proposed, and in at least one State enacted, by the tyrant man, having for its object the suppression of the theatre hat, but it is more likely they won't do anything of the kind unless they have to.

In the first place, women's idea, first, last and all the time, is to dress so as to please the men. They are willing to confess that some of the styles are outlandish, but the men like them.

Don't you believe it? Why? Because you've heard men say so.

Well, that does n't count for much.

Ever since Eve was a young lady, old enough to have beaux, men have been industriously and cheerfully lying about their likes and dislikes.

How they do rave, theoretically, over the good, plain, common-sense girl!

They tell you that the girl who eschews lacing, wears shoes without any heels to speak of, does n't spend her time "frizzing" her hair, and helps to do the housework, is the kind a man looks out for when he wants a wife.

Indeed! And does he?

Look the facts squarely in the face.

The very man who raves about the matchless worth of this plain, simple, useful girl, living on corn bread and doing a day's work every twenty-four hours, is just the man who passes the useful, mother-helping daughter by to wed a worthless, novel-reading, high-heeled, tight-laced, flashily-dressed butterfly, who has her breakfasts served in her room by her mother or her grandmother.

Men are forever poking fun at women for being such slaves to fashion, but they do not care to appear in public with them if the fair ones they are with are not dressed just as nearly up to date as others are.

Woman's dress is often very uncomfortable, but the torture of wearing it is endured for the sake of pleasing the men.

Now, as a matter of fact, most women accompany men to the theatre. If every man will see to it that the lady or ladies in his party do not offend by wearing unpardonably high hats, the question would be nearly solved.

If the ladies are given to understand that a display of millinery is not so pleasantly attractive as the play, they will do better. The woman who will wilfully insist on offending others, by wearing her mammoth hat, deserves to be suppressed.

It's all right for the men to make such laws if they must, but would n't it be better for every man to be a law unto himself and refuse to accompany any one to a play, the second time, who insists on wearing a big hat.

The good and true and noble men of the land do not indulge in horse stealing. Is it because there is a law against it?

The real ladies of the land will not wear high hats to the theatre. Will it be attributed to the fact that the law won't permit it?

A Lofty Motive.

THE ballet girls kick high, so that
The mortal bathed in woe,
Who sits behind a mammoth hat,
Can see some of the show.

THE theatre hat is not really to be blamed. It's the woman who wears it.

THE big hat is a matter of fuss and feathers.

IT IS easier to see through the plot of a play than it is the hat in front of it.

THE little bit of the play we see over the high hats is certainly above criticism.

IF THE ladies would take their hats off — and the ladies will — the stage won't need elevating.

Driven to It.

WOMEN, if your hats were doffed
So men could see the stage,
The "lords" would not go out so oft
To quench their burning rage.

A WOMAN is not necessarily high-minded because she wears a high hat.

THE word hat occurs but once in the bible; the connection is interesting. Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego were bound up in "their hats and other garments" and were "cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace." This fact should be enlarged upon to those who wear the sky scrapers. They were bound up in their hats, etc., and what? Why, cast into the fiery furnace! What could be more appropriate? How often has the theatre-goer wished that the party in front might be so bound up and cast as aforesaid, and yet did n't know that there was an illustrious precedent for it?

THERE was a girl in our town who never had a beau, but once upon a time her papa took her to the show, and when the play was started, why this girl took off her hat, aud, say! she always had dead loads of fellows after that.

HEY, diddle, diddle! The cat and the fiddle; the cow jumped over the moon, but if she'd jump over a theatre hat, she wouldn't get back till June.

CAN'T SEE THROUGH YOUR HAT.

EMILE PICKHARDT.

O, woman, you are very sweet
And man will gladly yield his seat
To spare your pretty, tired feet,
And gladly tip his hat to you,
Since admiration prompts him to;
And lots of other things he 'll do
His high esteem for you to show
And make you happy here below,
But one thing you should surely know —
Just think a bit when e'er your at
The play — pray but consider that:
Despite that he esteems you so,
He can't see through your hat.

Though high aloft your headgear tower
With ponpon plume and tropic flower,
Which, worn by you at proper hour,
Accentuate your every charm —
Thus working good instead of harm —
Your critics you can ne'er disarm
Till you can learn to see aright
And view the matter in our light
(Since we have only mortal sight)
Then please at least remember that
While at the play you sit and chat
Though we begrudge you no delight,
We can't see through your hat.

ISLINGTON, MASS.

"TRUTH is the highest thing," so Chaucer wrote. But Chaucer never saw a modern theatre hat.

THE average theatre hat is a bird (stuffed), a whole lot of flowers (artificial), and a blooming nuisance (genuine).

OPENING OVERTURE.

Oh, woman! lovely woman! Nature made thee
To temper man: we had been brutes without you.
Angels are painted fair, to look like you:
There's in you all that we believe of heaven,—
Amazing brightness, purity and truth,
Eternal joy, and everlasting love.

Thomas Otway.

HOW often poets have sang and raved; artists and sculptors have drawn, painted, "sculpted," and gone crazy over "lovely woman" since the day when the first one was "snaked" out of the garden of Eden! Men of all races and nations have bowed down to her, and promised all sorts of impossible things to win her favor; she has pledged herself to "obey" untold millions of bewhiskered "smoke stacks," and never did it; but they have repeatedly forgiven her on the ground of reciprocity.

It is not the purpose of the L. A. W. BULLETIN to say aught which could tend toward the extermination of woman. We do not rate her with the gypsy moths or the Canadian thistle; on the contrary, we believe she should be fostered and encouraged, even though that has already been overdone in Massachusetts.*

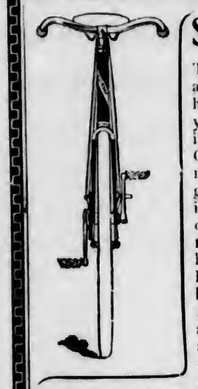
Perfection is hardly to be expected, for since woman does not attain it where else shall we look? It has been said, by some brute, that "with all her faults we love her still, even though we seldom find her in that condition," but, with all her loveliness, we are sorry to record (with our elegant new type), the fact that she has one real serious fault. Of course we refer to the daring manner in which she has for years defied public opinion, — not exactly in the matter of head-gear, but in the hazardous disregard for consequences which enables her to wear it at the wrong time.

Now if a woman wanted to put on a two-story and basement hat, and sit down amid the chestnutty quietude of her own home, no one (that is, probably no one) would object. But no, she promptly takes it off and lays it on the table or a chair until she is ready to start for church or the theatre, then she gets under this aggregation of feathers, tropical plants, birds, etc., and stalks forth into the public domain.

In some instances (now, mind you, we say some instances so as to avoid too many inflammatory letters), her only idea seems to be that she has on a complicated array of millinery, which cost her hard-working husband more than he could possibly have lost by playing poker all night, especially on a ten cent limit.

She arrives at church and — but, of course, that doesn't count, as the minister always wears long black pants and — well they have often seen him before, any way; but at the theatre it is different: here she attracts most attention. She takes a seat, behind which are other seats also occupied by human people, and, with a nerve which passeth all understanding, she sits upright under the hat, and looks straight ahead, apparently all unconscious of the decidedly forceful fact that she is causing more unholy thoughts than can be neutralized by a whole Sunday of the most devout formality.



But it shows courage, either that or an utter and inexcusable ignorance, which latter we cannot accept as the reason. What man could go and sit in front of another with such an obstruction on him, and not expect it to be knocked off along with his head?

Not a Close Pick.

SINCE woman claims the right, we believe,
To pick her hat or bonnet.
Why, why, oh why! does she still leave
So many feathers on it?

IF YOUR hat is n't on straight, take it off.

Straight Goods

To give the buyer exactly what you agree to give him, exactly what he has a right to expect from the way you present your case, and to give it to him at one price, is "Straight Goods" — honest dealing. The man who has a flexible price, (bargains away his goods) is discriminating against one buyer in favor of another. That dealer either has no confidence in his goods, his profits are too high, or he has n't got the conrage to sell an honest article for an honest profit. More likely his goods are not such as would inspire confidence, and and he knows it. This kind of a dealer is not honest with himself, and a man who is not honest with himself might now and then "slip a cog" in his dealings with other men.

NEW CLIPPERS are honest bicycles sold at one price— an honest price— by people who have confidence in them. No club rates on Clippers; all treated alike.

WE CLAIM EVERYTHING.

I HAVE decided, on this important occasion, to waive my well-known modesty and make the following statement, assuring readers of the BULLETIN, at the same time, that I am not only willing, but anxious, to stand whatever of praise or censure may properly belong with it. The first effort to regulate, by legislation, the wearing of hats in public places, originated in Boston. I was making an effort to get the local theatrical managers together, with a view to adopting, if possible, a universal rule which might result in allowing us to see the stage. All the managers were very much in favor of it, and yet none dared to agree to such a rule. (This illustrates a peculiar fact in reference to nearly all amusement managers. They become so used to catering to the whims of the public that they lose any individual independence which, in some other line, they might have exhibited. When the average amusement manager thinks of compeling a single patron to remove the obnoxious headgear, he thinks only of offending her, and seems to utterly forget the ecstasy which his action might cause among the number of people whose view would thereby be improved).

The idea of getting a State law passed was suggested to me by a famous Boston lawyer. With his assistance I got up a bill which was to be offered to the Massachusetts legislature. For reasons which seemed to be good at the time, the filing of this bill was put off until the afternoon of the last day on which bills would be received. Meanwhile, the proposed introduction of such a bill had been discussed in a column interview, published by the Boston Globe, weeks before our bill was filed. This conspicuous publication of the idea gave the cue to no less than seven other States, in the legislatures of which similar bills were introduced and acted upon before the hearing which was finally given on the Massachusetts bill. Our hearing resulted in an adverse report of the committee. And in this connection it might be interesting to state that I presented a petition, signed by fifteen hundred ladies, asking for the passage of the bill. Only one lady who was asked to sign this petition refused to do so. That was Kate Tannett Woods, and she agreed to sign it if I would add another section which would prevent men from going out between the acts. I explained to her that this tendency to go out was a legitimate result of the theatre hat, and that nothing was more likely to "drive men to drink." If we could exterminate the hat there would be no necessity for any law to keep men in their seats. She failed, however, to concur with me in this view of it.

A very peculiar fact was developed at this hearing, which may be interesting to those who elect by their votes legislative officers, whose duty we had supposed was to serve their constituency. I was informed by the chairman of the committee before whom this bill was heard, that if every lady in the State had signed the petition, that that would, in itself, be no reason why such legislation should be advocated by his committee. By asking several questions, I lead him to say that if every inhabitant of the Commonwealth were to ask for a law that he would still feel that he had a perfect right to report adversely.

I am glad to note that the legislature of Ohio has passed a "Theatre Hat Bill." If it works successfully in that State for the next few months, there can be no reason why a similar law should not be passed in every State. STERLING ELLIOTT.

THE DANCE OF THE BONNETS.

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER.

All up and down the brilliant house,
  Through Circle, Box, Parquet,
Sat rows and rows of waiting folk,
  Men, dames and damsels gay;
All with their bright, expectant looks,
Care-free as if in story books,
  Impatient for the Play.

At last the lights turned, sudden, low,
  The curtain upward went,
Each voice was hushed and garment's stir;
  With eyes and ears intent
Upon the sparkling, lovely scene
With elfs and fays the brooks between,
  Each eager face was bent.

But one, aghast, could nothing see
  Except a monstrous plume;
While three red roses high awave —
  From Paris skill abloom —
Before another's straining eyes,
With saucy tilt and savage size,
  Did loom, and loom, and loom,

And hard by this another sat,
  Meek soul, but now a-rage,
For two wide-spreading, fan-like wings
  Concealed just half the stage
Sometimes a player's head or hand
Or fragment of a dancing band
  Would fall within his gauge.

One dame, behind a ribbon tower,
  Felt honest, true amaze
That thoughtful she of tiniest toque
  Must thus be spoiled of gaze.
She knew not that her light aigrette
To eyes behind would only let
  Things pass as through a haze.

And so the dance began — to right,
  To left — to right again —
The flower, the feather, silken bow,
  The wing of bright bird slain.
O weird chasse! row after row,
The bonnets come, the bonnets go,
Till curtain drops and from the show
  Wend weary eyes and brain.

THE THEATRE hat should be put down — under the seat, or somewhere else.

THE THEATRE hat nuisance, like much of the trouble of this wobbly old world, has a woman at the bottom of it.

The volume of sales are increasing every day, making for it new friends and more firmly clinching the old ones. Our agents report that the call for Waverleys is far in excess of their anticipations and that they anticipate a still further increase later on, as many riders who were induced earlier in the season to buy cheap or untried wheels, are beginning to realize their mistake, and it is a question of only a short time when they are sure to want a reliable mount, in which case their thoughts will naturally turn to the Waverley. The Moral — Any bicycle dealer can understand.

"CHARITY suffereth long and is kind," but it is oftener that long suffering produces unkindness which results in legislation.

"TALKING through your hat" originated with actors on the stage. They could in no other way talk to the people behind you.

"I NOTICED when I was in Germany," writes a Pennsylvania member, "that ladies are obliged to leave their large hats, and they can also leave their wraps, in a dressing room of the theatre, where they receive a check for them, the same as in the cloak-room in our hotels."

IN the hat line, a Pittsburg lady tells of an experience she had in New York, when there on a business trip. Being invited to attend the play and having no head gear with her, save the travelling, or street, hat she had worn from home, she thoughtfully uncovered, as soon as the curtain went up, and at the close of the entertainment was somewhat surprised, and not displeased, to have a gentleman, who sat in the row back, lean forward and say, "I beg pardon, madam, but I wish to thank you for a very enjoyable evening."

Room 56, Equitable Building,
BOSTON, February 25, 1896.

I desire to notify the trade that I am the owner of Letters Patent of the United States, granted to Pardon W. Tillinghast, of Providence, R. I., No. 486,915 of Nov. 29, 1892, and No. 497,791 of May 23, 1893, for improvements in pneumatic tires, which said Letters Patent cover the manufacture, sale and use of all single-tube or hose-pipe tires in the market.

The following firms and companies have been licensed to make and sell such tires, to wit:

The Pope Manufacturing Co.
The B. F. Goodrich Co.
The Hartford Rubber Works Co.
The Hartford Cycle Co.
The Boston Woven Hose and Rubber Co.
The New York Tire Co.
The Hodgman Rubber Co.
The Newton Rubber Works.

No other manufacturers are authorized to make or sell single-tube or hose-pipe tires, and dealers are warned not to purchase such tires of any other manufacture. Any person selling or using any such tires manufactured by any one not licensed by me will be liable to prosecution for infringement.

THEODORE A. DODGE.

What Will Happen?

Either the Tillinghast Patents will be sustained, or they will be defeated.

If they are sustained, every unlicensed manufacturer must pay to their owner all the profit he has made or by reasonable care might have made on his single-tube tires. By taking a license now, a manufacturer insures himself against this disaster, the price will remain where it is, and enought profit can be earned to enable him to make good tires.

If the patents are defeated, every one can make single-tube tires, and a few large manufacturers will sell them at a ten per cent. profit over a cost so low that no one else can compete without cheapening the goods. Result: no profit earned in manufacture; a market flooded with ill-made tires, and no wheelman assured that he can get back sound from a ten-mile spin.

Is not every manufacturer better off with a Tillinghast License?

Her Highest Design.

The man who is honest is free to confess
(If he 's been to the opera) that
Woman's loftiest aim is not centered in dress,
But in her tall theatre hat.

AS OTHERS SEE THEM.

In the multitude of counsellors there is safety. — Old Testament.

REALIZATION of the fact that the theatre hat question is a very broad, as well as a very high, one, prevents us from passing upon the ultimate disposition of the evil without first giving others a chance to present their views of it. The views given herewith are for the most part those obtained from a seat just back of the offending article. They were written to the editor of the L. A. W. BULLETIN in response to the inquiry:

Should persons, while occupying seats in a public auditorium, be allowed to wear any apparel which would unnecessarily obstruct the view of others sitting behind them?

The opinions expressed range "from grave to gay, from lively to severe," the most of them coming under the latter classification.

SENATOR JOHN SHERMAN.

Whose mature years and extensive observation entitles his words on this subject to gravest consideration, writes:

"How can they* sell such a grand wheel† for $75, and yet treat their agents so handsomely?"

* Edw. Oliver & Co., 23 Park Row, New York.
† The Elmore Bicycle.

I think no one, man or woman, ought to be admitted to a public auditorium wearing apparel that will necessarily obstruct the view of others sitting in the rear.

Suitable regulations to prevent a public inconvenience should be made and strictly enforced.

JOHN SHERMAN.

W. D. HOWELLS

Has made character study his life work. He should, and no doubt does, know all about the inalienable rights of men and women. His pen has created so many women that he can tell just what a lady should be like and what she should do. His answer to the question above referred to is brief and to the point:

Certainly not. They should be subject to a suit for damages.

W. D. HOWELLS.

CHARLES A. DANA

Has gotten far enough along in life to know what 's what. In his usual terse and forceful way, he sizes the big hat question up as follows: —

It is a question of good manners, and possibly of local police. If the managers of public amusements can't regulate it, let people stay away from their places.

C. A. DANA.

REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE,

Whose long and brilliant career as a minister of the Gospel has given him the very best of opportunities for studying that peculiar quantity known as "the public," puts the question in so clear a light that any one may see it correctly. That is, any one whose moral view is not obstructed by the wearing of a mammoth hat.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY,

The poet of the people, is as dainty in his arraignment of the fair sex as he is in the arrangement of his matchless rhymes. He writes:

Draughty theatres and tendency to "colds" may account for many instances of the objections implied; therefore, if you will as kindly overlook my opinion as I overlook the hat, I will venture to say that only the wearer can righteously decide the question.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

ISAAC B. POTTER,

Whom all the world knows as the Chief Consul, New York Division L. A. W., and the man who pushed the Armstrong bicycles-as-baggage bill to success, treats the question from the legal standpoint of justice and equity; and, speaking of draughty theatres, reminds us that Mr. Potter should know something of their evils, for when he removes his hat the once flowing locks now so unanimously flown makes it easy for him to read his title clear to mansions in the skies, and for those back of him to wish his style of not wearing his hair at the play might become permanently contagious. He answers the question thus:

One person has no more right to unnecessarily prevent another from seeing the things he pays to see, in a place of public amusement, than he would to unnecessarily interfere with his eating the dinner that he pays to eat at a public hotel. ISAAC B. POTTER.

Takes a conservative view of the question, which might lead one to believe that he is not a close student of the drama, and hence can suffer to have the stage eclipsed by a dark feathery opaque mass of fuss and feathers without that extreme anguish of spirit which overtakes one of highly strung temperament. His private secretary writes:

Governor Morton desires me to say that while he is aware, from public agitation of the question, that permitting ladies to wear high hats in theatres and other public places causes annoyance to many persons in the audience, he believes that it is a matter which can scarcely be settled by legislative action, but rather by the force of public opinion.

Very respectfully,

ALICE STONE BLACKWELL,

Recording Secretary of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, also speaks in no uncertain tone regarding the theatre hat evil.

It is thoughtless, selfish and wrong for persons in a public auditorium to wear head-gear which needlessly obstructs the view of others sitting behind them; but I am not sure that the matter is one which can advantgeously be dealt with by law. ALICE STONE BLACKWELL.

MAJOR McKINLEY, MR. THOS. B. REED AND EX-PRESIDENT HARRISON

Expressed regrets, through their private secretaries, that they were all too busy to offer an opinion on the subject of the theatre hat. The fact that a national political convention is to be held in the not very distant future gave the hue of entire probability to their statements.

Mary had a little hat
She wore it every day.

And does'nt make them tired.

All the woes that we suffer to-day;
But she did not establish the style, we believe,

FAIR OFFER. — In the middle of the third act the young woman with the big head-dress turned around in her seat and spoke to the youth immediately behind her. "Sir," she said, "if you will change your brand of chewing gum, I 'll take off this hat. I 'm getting tired of that wintergreen fragrance." — Ex.

THE spring hats will be towering mountains of mauve and nut-brown straw, with filmy loops and soft rosettes of mulle, with a full frill of lace around the crown, which, in many instances, will he surmounted with twenty-six pink roses and the long, spreading tail of the bird of paradise. — Times-Herald.

Thought at the Play.

Oh, woman, woman! we desire

If you 'd wear a lower hat.

We Just Can't.

Let women do whate'er they may
We 'll pardon them by hook or crook,
But wearing big hats at the play
Are wrongs we cannot overlook.

HATS AND TEMPERANCE.

A famous woman's rights woman, who was asked by the writer to indorse a protest against the high hat indoors, said: "I will, if you will combine with it a protest against men going out between the acts." This voices a general impression that the "going out nuisance" is a disease by itself, when it is really but a symptom of the "hat trouble." Men go out mostly to drink and smoke, — two habits which they acquired for the express purpose of drowning sorrow.

Nothing generates sorrow like the obstructive hat, and hence the remedy suggests itself.

Remove the hat and the men will stay in and be happy.

EVEN the bald-headed men are not allowed to wear hats while attending the play.

TAKE off your hat and stay awhile.

BIRDS of a feather flock together, but women with big hats sit all over the house.

THE discarding of the theatre hat would certainly take a great load off of woman's mind.

To the theatre hat: "Come off!'

DON'T hide your light under a bushel, nor your head under a theatre hat.

HOW FRANCE SAT ON IT.

That the war on the theatre hat, already an old story on this side of the water, has only recently begun in Paris, is not an evidence that the French have been more patient than we. The reason is that only recently have women been admitted to the orchestra chairs of the Parisian theatres at all. In the boxes they were in their own place and could wear what they chose. In the galleries the inconvenience caused by their hats was slight, because the sharp slope of the floor raised each successive row of seats considerably higher than the row immediately in front of it. But within recent years, every theatre in Paris, except the Palais Royal, has abandoned the old custom. As soon as the women began to invade the orchestra, men began to be annoyed by their big hats, and instantly took sharp measures to abate the nuisance. The management of the foremost theatre in the world, the Comedie Francaise, felt none of the scruples which make American managers timid in this matter, and at once took the proper action. They ordered that women in the orchestra stalls must not wear hats of any sort, big or little, and they enforced the order. When a woman forgot to remove her hat, the "ouvreuse" politely called her attention to the regulation. If the hat-wearer declined to obey, the price she had paid for her seat was returned to her, and she was directed to leave the theatre. That settled the big-hat question at the Theatre Francaise in short order. Every American manager could settle it as quickly in his own theatre if he chose.

Managers of other Parisian houses, less courageous or more dependent on the public for support than the subventioned State theatre, sought to accomplish their object by various indirect means. One very ingenious and effective device is worth describing. It was adopted at the Theatre de la Republique. Just before the time for raising the curtain one of the actresses of the company, elaborately dressed, with an immense picture hat, and sleeves excessively "bouffantes," sailed down the aisle and seated herself, taking care to attract as much attention as possible, in a conspicuous place in the orchestra. Immediately behind her was one of the actors. He showed great annoyance, and finally courteously requested the actress to remove her hat. She treated his request with manifest contempt. He persisted. She replied with an impertinence. Their voices, as the colloquy proceeded, were "unconsciously" raised. Their words became audible all over the house. The public grew deeply interested. The actor, though insistent, was reasonable and carefully courteous. The actress played the part of an angry, vulgar and unreasonable woman to perfection. The audience sympathized with the courteous gentleman, ill-used and insulted by the "brazen creature." Cries of "Otez votre chapeau" resounded from every part of the house. The manager appeared upon the scene. He requested the actress to remove her hat. She refused. He offered her the money she had paid, and requested her to leave the house. She refused vociferously, and was, finally, forcibly removed in the most ignominious manner. This object lesson was always effective. Before the climax of the unpleasant scene every last woman in the house would have her hat in her lap. The little comedy, with modifications and changes of cast, was repeated as often as it was necessary. It soon ceased to be necessary. The custom of removing the hat had become firmly established among the feminine patrons of the Theatre de la Republique. So by one means or another, the big hat was speedily banished from about every theatre in Paris.— Rochester Chronicle.

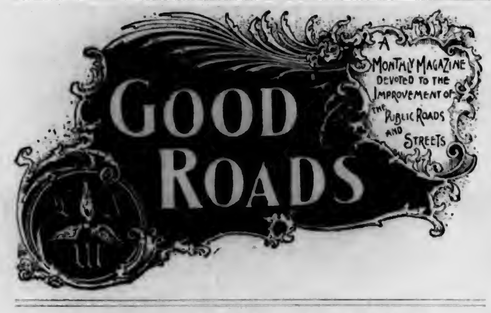
COMB your hair and take your hat off.

THIS theatre hat subject is a pretty big one.



TRADE NOTES

MR. CHANNING ELLERY'S PARTY, six gentlemen, sails June 24. Absence, three months. Price, $550. Two places vacant. No. 228 W. 38th St., New York.

"Fair tresses man 's imperial race insnare.
And beauty draws us with a single hair;"
But, oh! a play seems very stale and flat
When beauty (?) hides it with a single hat.

"Man wants but little here below," Leastwise we 're certain that
The average man while at the show
Prefers the smallest hat.

PLAIN TALK FROM A FARMER.

JAMES BARTON ADAMS.

Now look here, Mister Congressman, I worked fur you last fall, an' pulled a mighty lot o' votes acrost the party wall. I turned the other feller down in my township, you bet, an' I've an idee but fur me you'd be plain Mister yet. I made some rattlin' speeches every time I got a chance, an' talked to them ol' farmers till they trembled in their pants; an' when the votes was counted we jes' split our whoopin' throats, fur you had more majority than Robinson had votes.

Considerin' all this, I think I've got a right to say what sort o' legislation we're a needin' wust to-day, not only here, but everywhere in all the 'tarnal land, from Maine's big rocky hills to Californy's golden strand. I'm goin' to talk United States as plain as I know how, an' I'm a chinnin' now fur every man that holds the plow by tellin' you, as sure as there is 'taters in the hill, if you don't work fur better roads we'll git a man that will!

You're 'propriatin' money fur all sorts o' useless truck, fur dredgin' creeks an' rivers that 'd scurcely float a duck, fur pensionin' rich widders, an' fur buildin' ships o' war (not havin' any enimies, what do we need 'em for?) You're votin' publick buildin's at a mighty lively rate, jes' fur to raise the value of surroundin' real estate, an' while you're there a squanderin' the nation's golden blood, the farmers o' the country are a flounderin' in the mud.

When any cussed railroad wants a finger in the pot, a grant o' land or franchise, doesn't make no difference what, you ain't a morsel delicate 'bout featherin' their nest. They simply press the button, an' you fellers do the rest. But when the toilin' farmers make a sort o' modest play, you plug yer ears with cotton, an' you look the other way; but when you're 'lectioneerin', then yer talk's as soft as mush, yer promises 'd make ol' Bible Ananias blush!

You know the toilin' farmer is the backbone o' the land; the welfare o' the country lies right in his horny hand; he feeds the hull durn nation, keeps it in its bread an' meat, an' all the other proper truck fur Christian folks to eat. He toils when you're a loafin', he's at work when you're asleep, he sows the seeds o' livin' fur you city folks to reap, an' when he asks a little show to git his stuff to town, you fellers there in Congress jes' perceed to turn him down.

You know in rainy weather we kin neither plow nor sow, an' that, of course, is jes' the time when farmers ort to go to market with their farm produce: fur when the weather's fair the growin' crops is needin' every minute o' their care. No matter how it's rainin', if they have a solid road they'd all go to the market with a profitable load; but now in dampish weather they jes' set an' twirl their thumbs, an' spend the time a cussin' you ol' legislative bums.

I tell you, sir, the farmers are at last upon the track; they're gittin' 'tarnal tired o' this here rippin' up the back, an' sick o' bein' kicked about, jes' like a lot o' toads, an' now, by the Eternal, they're a goin' to have some roads. So I jes' want to tell you in the plainest sort o' talk; if you don't mind yer knittin' you're a goin' to take a walk. Jes' shed yer coat an' hustle fur a proper good roads bill, or, by ol' Gineral Jackson, we will git a man that will!

MUD is physical and industrial immorality.

COME in out of the mud.

GOOD drainage is the first requisite for good roads.

HAVE sand enough to insist on making your roads good.

A STATEMENT recenly made to the effect that the assignment of this year's national circuit is not cordially received by manufacturers, racing men, or the body of promoters at large. A great many dates assigned have been cancelled," etc., is entirely erroneous and misleading. Advices from California tend to show that the circuit meets have been quite as successful as could be expected so early in the season. Of fifty dates assigned, but four refused, and three of them have been promptly filled by other parties.

A somewhat general impression prevails that the racing board will rule upon prize values in amateur road races. Such is not the case — nor will any attention be paid to the 100 mile limit.

TO PENNSYLVANIA MEMBERS.

The new book of popular and delightful tours around Philadelphia is now ready for distribution, substantially bound in cloth.

It not only shows and describes all telforded, turnpiked and other good roads in the vicinity, but also every principal asphalt and brick street, within the city limits, so colored as to be readily distinguished. It includes descriptions of scores of points of interest in the beautiful surrounding regions, charmingly illustrated. As an adjunct to the division road book it is invaluable.

The principal map is printed in three colors on a scale of 3,600 feet to the inch, and covers a surface of 34 x 30 inches. Numerous smaller maps of special sections are also embodied. Thirty illustrated chapters describe in detail every principal road radiating from the city together, with interesting historical references. A carefully measured century run, two fifty mile runs inside the city limits accompanied by maps, lists of cycling clubs, road houses, L. A. W. hotels, schedule of one way fares on railroads, altitudes of the various points, etc., are included.

It will be furnished without cost to any Pennsylvania member sending two new applications for membership, or to any member sending one new application and twenty-five cents additional. The price to members is fifty cents, postage prepaid. Sample page, etc., if you desire. Address, Secretary-Treasurer, Pennsylvania Division, Box 1177, Philadelphia.

OR STAY AWAY.

"You want to keep your eye on the woman's bonnet," says an item in a fashion paper. No, we don't want to, but under certain conditions, dear editor, we have to. — Yonkers Statesman.

THAT HIDDEN "PHYSICAL DEFECT."

The Times-Herald says that, "it is suspected that at least ninety per cent. of the women who wear large hats to the theatre, do so to hide some physical defect." That is rough. It is bad enough to keep the man sitting behind from a view of the stage, but it is adding insult to injury to call him a physical defect." — Peoria Herald.

WOMEN would go crazy if they had as much on their minds as they do on their heads.

AT THE THEATRE.

"Been to the theatre, eh! What did you see?"

"I saw a large black hat, with five ostrich feathers, a rhinestone buckle and two magenta roses. And once (here the strong man's voice trembled) once, for one moment, I thought I saw half of a sofa at the extreme left of the stage, but I cannot be sure." — Life.

A Sad Experience.

He knows she's in high feather,
He's very sure of that.
For at the play last evening
He sat behind her hat.

Two wrongs won't make a right. The theatre hat is no smaller because so many wear it.

QUERIES and ANSWERS

ANGELICA:—Ladies wearing theatre hats should not eat with the knife nor drink out of the pitcher.

ETHEL:—We cannot advise you clearly without first seeing your hat, but it might be better for those back of you if you were to remain standing and let your hat occupy the seat.

MAUDE:—We fear it would be inconsistent, to say the least, for you to wear a theatre hat and knickerbockers on a wheeling trip.

LUCILLE:—We understand that theatre hats are not to be worn with bathing suits this summer. We are sorry.

ARABELLA:—THEATRE hats should never be worn on Fridays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, Mondays, Saturdays or Wednesdays.

"EDNA," Ohio:—Yes, we would advise you to remove your hat on retiring for the night, because it would be inconvenient for you to wear it. The convenience of others should never be seriously considered.

Isn't Worth It.

His very fairest hat on earth,
Though trimmed supremely gay,
Is hard to see two dollars' worth
While seated at the play.

THE theatre hat is not a tower of strength. It's a weakness.

THE bare-headed theatre is the hope of the race.

SOME wrongs we can forgive and forget, but the theatre hat is something we can't get over.

A SOFT answer turneth away wrath, but a mammoth theatre hat stirreth up much anger.

THE theatre hat is a nuisance the ladies should no longer uphold. They should get from under it.

THE theatre hat covers a multitude of sins.

THOUGH the theatre hat has been called "down" frequently, it is still largely a matter of feathers.

CONSIDER the lilies, how they grow: they toil not, neither do they wear theatre hats.

IF THE up-to-date woman means to be real manly, let her take her hat off at the play.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

Dear Sir:—I have the honor to be the official compiler of the Indiana Division, L. A. W. I note with swelling head the kind words you use in speaking of the road book issued by this division. I also note that you say the book is free to League members. You should have said Indiana League members. I only wish I had something to sell to cyclists, for the way the letters are pouring in for free copies of the book goes to show that the BULLETIN is a paper that is read from cover to cover. Kindly tell the boys that you were misinformed when you said we would give them all a copy.

A REMARKABLE CURE

The following sounds somewhat like a patent medicine testimonial, and we should not think of printing it except that we know Mr. Brigham personally, and have known something of his history.

He says in a recent letter: "You know I have been a sufferer from asthma for years. I have spent thousands of dollars on doctors, climate, etc. I have wintered in Florida, Colorado, California and Europe, bnt I have never felt a permanent improvement until I began riding the bicycle. Now I have nearly overcome the disease, and am never bothered about sleeping. I attribute it entirely to the judicious use of the bicycle. PERRY BRIGHAM."

ACROSS THE SEA.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

Let me give you the information, to publish for the benefit of cyclists, that on May 25th the minister of foreign affairs of Switzerland notified the French ambassador at Berne, that on the application of the Touring Club de France, members of that club could enter Switzerland on presentation of their card of membership without payment of customary duties.

I have received a despatch from the Touring Club de France, of which I am the Boston delegate, informing me of this fact, that they will be presented at the frontier with a duplicate of the permit, which they are required to deliver up when they leave Switzerland, but no duty is required. Also that members of this club can receive a permit to cross Belgium without paying duty. And the delegue of the Italian Touring Club at Verona, Mr. Vittoria Cavazocca Mazzanti, has written me that now a member of the Touring Club de France, on presentation of his card of membership, can be admitted without paying customary duties into Italy.

For this and many other reasons which I can give it is very desirable for Americans intending to tour upon the continent to become members of the Touring Club de France, the cost of which is only seven francs, or $1.40.

I have no doubt that I can make arrangements so that members of the L. A. W. could have the same privilege of entering into Italy or those countries without paying custom duties. I leave the 20th of June to wheel through Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and France.

BOSTON, May 14, 1896. F. S. HESSELTINE.

TAKE YOUR WHEEL.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

The wheelman who is accustomed to using a light running American wheel, will meet with sore disappointment if he relies upon renting an English wheel after he has crossed the water. The English wheels average forty pounds in weight; they are clumsy and noisy and costly.

The American tourist can get his wheel safely across the ocean for two dollars and a half. Except for packing and unpacking, to protect the machine from the salt air, he will have no trouble with his wheel; and when he sees the ponderous vehicles his English cousins are riding he will thank his stars that he took his own wheel with him. In that's just the distance!

If the "Standard" says so,

choosing a wheel to take I should recommend a gear that is not too high for hill climbing, and a brake to protect a rider who enjoys a good "coast." Take rubber mud guards with you for the English mud guards are of leather, wide and heavy, and they flap noisily. Some kind of a mud guard in Great Britain is a necessity on account of the frequent showers.

I joined the C. T. C., and while I saved very little money by it I derived some satisfaction from its hotel list, for I always knew where to have my mail sent, and I always knew what the rates would be and could thus escape imposition. The C. T. C. hotels are a little cheaper, but they are altogether respectable.

Take your American wheel with you by all means, and use it, for the roads are no better in Paradise than they are in Great Britain

TOE CLIPS: PUT THEM ON RIGHT.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

Riders should put their toe clips on correctly. For some unknown reason, they are usually bolted to the pedal as though the end of a man's big toe was in the middle of his foot. Shoes used to be made that way, to the great profit of chiropodists, but the modern article conforms to the shape of a man's foot and brings the toe well toward the inside. So bolt your toe clips well toward the inside of your pedals. You will be surprised at the result.

It seems almost foolish to call attention to such a little point, but it is so universally overlooked that I mention it: not for the particular benefit of the racing man, but for the great and increasing army of sedate tourists that have discovered toe clips to be a great comfort on rough roads and when riding "hands off" to rest one's self by a change of position. G. RICHMOND PARSONS (No. 54,714).

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 14, 1896.

THE newly organized "Lakeside Wheelmen," of Geneva, N. Y., are building a cinder path between their city and Waterloo, the latter place to be connected with Auburn.

THE farmers of Lake County, Illinois, are said to be enthusiastic regarding the building of roads. The St. Paul Railway gives them gravel free, and all they have to pay is for shoveling from cars to wagons.

H. W. STONE, 106 N. Tenth street, St. Louis, writes: — "Since Wisconsin has not yet issued its road book, I wish some member of that division to give me best route from Minneapolis to Milwaukee, via Madison.

PUT active wheelmen in charge of streets and roads. They know the condition of the highways.

IF YOUR bicycle doesn't make you any happier or better you are riding it in vain.

BICYCLES AS BAGGAGE.

"A well known railroad official" is quoted in a Boston Sunday paper as saying, "the court has explicity defined what constitutes personal baggage, and nowhere in the court rulings are bicycles mentioned."

This statement is both correct and clever. The omission may be accounted for, however, by the fact that bicycles had not been discovered at the time the principal rulings were made.

"Whatever a passenger takes with him for his immediate necessity or comfort, or for the ultimate purposes of his journey, according to the particular class to which he belongs" has been held by the courts to constitute baggage.

The bicycle seems to come under that head, if anything ever did.

The gentleman says that one day last summer one hundred and forty wheelmen came to take a train at Waltham to escape a threatening thunder storm; that there was not enough room in the baggage car and some of the wheels were taken into the coaches. "You can imagine," said he, "the annoyance to which the train hands were put, and it appears to me to be only right that roads should receive some compensation for the extra trouble and added weight."

Here are the facts. The Fitchburg railroad had a train on its way to Boston. The expense of running it to Boston was a fixed quantity. The thunder storm caused one hundred and forty wheelmen to pay $23.80 for tickets, which sum was strictly clear profit and due directly to the dreaded thunder and rain. If these one hundred and forty passengers had trunks, the railroad must, under the common rules, take them to Boston, together with their owners, for the $23.80, but, being bicycles, the railroad charged $21 more, making the net proceeds of the thunder storm $44.80. The "added weight" of the bicycles was about 3500 pounds, or equivalent to twenty-four trunks of the weight which the railroads now carry with more or less cheerfulness.

One of the arguments which we most often hear against bicycles as baggage is the unexpected thunder storm. The above is an extreme case, is regarded by all as an emergency, and would in every instance be gotten along with good naturedly.

It is typical of all other possible bicycle epidemics, and may be summarized as follows:

All railroads now carry bicycles in baggage cars.

They never carry the bicycle except with a passenger who pays full fare.

Railroads do not hire more help nor pay more wages on account of the thunder storms.

In the case cited the railroad received justly and without any added expense $23.80, but because the baggage presented was not of a certain shape (even though it was much lighter), they collected, as we believe unjustly, $21.

Railroads do not provide any special means for storing bicycles, hence they have more or less difficulty in handling them.

Carrying bicycles as baggage would greatly increase the distance which wheelmen would go for pleasure. It would put money in the railroad pocket, and, when proper fixtures are provided, would be much easier for train men than the same number of trunks.

One hundred and thirty-two transportation companies in the United States now take bicycles as baggage, without extra charge.

UNION WAGES.

NIXON WATERMAN.

My board and clothes and a place to sleep
  Are all that I can earn.
I rise with the lark and work till dark,
  And save at every turn.
I strive, and yet all I can get,
  Though I grab, and grasp, and keep,
And house, and hoard, is just my board
  And clothes and a place to sleep.

My lot would seem a sorrowful one:
  But there are others who
Work twice as hard their gold to guard,
  For just these wages, too.
And smile or frown, or king or clown,
  Or genius rare or cheap,
Not one of the horde gets more than his board
  And clothes and a place to sleep.

UNEASY lies the face that wears a frown.

AN APOLOGY TO THE MONKEYS.

A correspondent suggests that we should apologize to the monkey tribe for our reference to "monkey men" on page 669. He says: "I can give you the names of a dozen gentlemen and ladies who refrain from taking up cycling because of the existence of the type of riders you portray."

There is much truth in what our correspondent says. There are a large number of people who would like to ride the bicycle if the average bicycle rider appeared to a little better advantage. This was particularly observed by the BULLETIN editor on a recent ride through the Boston park system.

The gentleman or lady who rides a bicycle because they believe it a good thing to do, and who have in mind health and pleasure only, have a right to be ashamed of many riders with whom they are obliged to be classed upon the streets.

We are glad to notice a very general tendency among the better class of riders to sit erect and look ahead rather than at the ground.

The "humped-back scorcher" may be all right in his place, but it is unfortunate that his place should be upon the public highways.

Perhaps some long-headed manufacturer may yet devise a handle bar which may be instantly changed from a high to a low position. Such an invention would undoubtedly do much to improve the general appearance of cyclists.

LET US CROW.

There's a time to laugh and a time to cry,
And a time for joy and woe;
There's a time to sing, or most any old thing,
But now is the time to crow.

The League of American Wheelmen has 698 more members to-day than it had at the close of its last fiscal year, when the membership was 43,977. This was then reduced by expirations of memberships, etc., to 26,058, — the number of members the League had at the beginning of its present year.

To-day its membership is 44,675 and is increasing many hundreds each week. Where will it be at the end of this fiscal year, March, 1897?

During the last week of June, 1895, there were 1,518 applications for membership received, which was much above all previous records. In the May 1, 1896 issue of the L. A. W. BULLETIN, 2,039 applications were published, and this remarkable record breaker was again broken last week when 2,363 applications were published.

Nearly every division of the League is making a notable increase in membership and power, and the organization is receiving recognition in the courts and State legislatures that were not dreamed of a year or so ago.

In the meantime, the good roads movement is growing and practically materializing as never before.

Are you a member of the L. A. W.? Are your wheel-riding friends?

TO ATTACH THE UNATTACHED.

It is suggested to the L. A. W. BULLETIN that if the secretaries of clubs which desire to sign more members would send out a properly worded circular to the local unattached L. A. W. members, as printed in the L. A. W. BULLETIN, it might result advantageously to both the clubs and the members.

We might add to this suggestion, that in a similar manner the unattached, in a given place, might get together and form clubs of their own. Possibly Mr. Potter's local organization scheme may cover all this a little later.

THOSE JAPANESE WHEELS.

"Truth crushed to earth shall rise again," but truth hasn't a monopoly on that sort of thing. Falsehood often shows a remarkable recuperative power.

The story about those twelve-dollar Japanese bicycles has been killed and buried many times, but it seems to thrive pretty well on that sort of treatment. Here's a copy of a letter, forwarded by a Baltimore member:

OFFICE OF THE COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS,
PORT OF SAN FRANCISCO.

MAY 2, 1896.

Gentlemen:—In response to your letter of April 25th, inquiring relative to importations of so-called Japanese bicycles, you are advised that no bicycles have been imported from Japan. The various articles which have appeared in the press about importations of Japanese bicycles, and the wonderful cheapness with which they are manufactured in Japan, are FAKE.

I have a friend who has just returned from that country, and he says that the bicycles manufactured there are clumsy, heavy machines, made mostly from parts of old second-hand American machines, and to see one of the Japanese riding one of these bicycles in his dignified manner is a most laughable sight. Yours is about the twentieth letter I have received from various parties on the same subject.

Respectfully yours,
E. B. JEROME, Sp'l Dep. Collector.

"TIPS."

What does the esteemed L. A. W. BULLETIN mean by saying, "Don't abuse the baggage men for neglecting your wheel. Try a quarter instead." We supposed that the League had lately been making it a chief business to defend cyclists from all costs in the transportation of wheels by rail. If it is expected that money must be used anyway, it would seem to be better to pay it to the companies direct than to bribe their employees. — Cyclist.

Our contemporary has touched upon a question of international importance. It would be better to pay the money to the companies direct if that would obtain the desired result, and let us hope that sometime it may.

It is presumed that when a guest pays for his room and feed at a hotel, he has complied with the conditions which insure attention. What are the facts? The bell-boy, who shows you to your room; the porter, who takes up your baggage; the chambermaid, who calls "to see if you need more towels"; the waiter, who takes his time, all expect to be "seen." You don't have to tip them? Oh, you don't. Well, that is true, but what do you get? The guest who is known as a "non-tipper" may sit until "he fain would fill his belly with the husks that the swine did eat," and he will see the fat drummer, who knows how, get his food in good shape even though he came in much later. It is n't a question of whether the railroad charges for taking bicycles or not, the baggage man is human (although sometimes you would n't think it), and he feels a little more interest in the passenger who has had the presence of mind to "grease the wheels of justice." It does n't cost the railroad a cent to take your bicycle, for the train is all "hitched up" and is going your way, but it does make extra work for the train men. Should they do it cheerfully? Why, of course, but, what is more important, will they?

Waverley BICYCLES.

Are Built in the Largest and Best Equipped Factory in the World.

It is a very evident fact that notwithstanding the market is flooded with bicycles of all descriptions, good, bad and indifferent, at almost any price a purchaser wishes to pay, the Waverly continues to grow in popular favor, as it has ever since its manufacture was commenced. The volume of sales are increasing every day, making for it new friends and more firmly clinching the old ones. Our agents report that the call for Waverleys is far in excess of their anticipations and that they anticipate a still further increase later on, as many riders who were induced earlier in the season to buy cheap or untried wheels, are beginning to realize their mistake, and it is a question of only a short time when they are sure to want a reliable mount, in which case their thoughts will naturally turn to the Waverley. The Moral — Any bicycle dealer can understand.

BAGGAGE OR EXPRESS.

We believe that railroad companies should not charge extra for carrying bicycles, but, if they must charge, they should certainly not charge a higher rate than is demanded by the express companies.

A Washington lady tells us that a certain railroad charged her $1.80 for taking her wheel in a baggage car, and she sent it back by express. It was called for and delivered, and the start and finish and the cost was but $1.20.

L. A. W. POLICEMEN.

It is suggested by one of our Philadelphia members that each city appoint a certain number of L. A. W. members as special policemen, who shall have authority to assist the regular police in suppressing the troublesome scorcher.

We second the motion, and look forward with much interest to the L. A. W. squad.

BICYCLE lantern parades are becoming the popular thing.

GOOD ROADS IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

The Good Roads Convention held at Concord last week was a great success in numbers and enthusiasm. The chief addresses were made by Gen. Roy Stone, Chief of the United States Department of Road Inquiry; Hon. Moses Humphrey, President of the Board of Agriculture; Mr. E. G. Harrison of New Jersey, Secretary of the National League of Good Roads; Dr. C. E. Harrington of Waltham, Mass.; Dr. Alonzo Towle, Freedom; Willard Bill, Jr., Westmoreland; C. H. Pettee, Durham, and others.

"The Bicycle Interest in Good Roads," was discussed by Leonard F. Burbank, Nashua, representative of State L. A. W. Splendid results are expected from the holding of the convention.

THE wheelmen of Chicago, and towns on the line to Rockford, Ill., over a hundred miles away, are arranging to build a cinder path connecting the two cities.

CHICAGO wheelmen may scorch on certain roads in Lincoln Park between the hours of four and six o'clock in the morning.

USE your ballots for making the roads good.

EVERY one will hope that good roads may become contagious and chronic.

HARTFORD SINGLE TUBE TIRES

When we began making Single-Tube tires, six years ago, we knew we were right. We knew that the simplicity and ease of repair of Single Tubes were sure to appeal to the riding public. There has recently been a rush of new tire makers into the field, and they all make Single-Tube tires, but we are six years ahead of them.

Hartford Single-Tube Tires

We have learned how to select the rubber and the fabric, and how to combine them. Our tires may cost more, but they're worth more.

GOOD MANNERS.

After an apparently very savage dog has nearly scared the life out of one, it is a small satisfaction to be told that the dog won't bite.

Of course the owner of the dog knows the animal won't bite; and therein he has the gleeful advantage of those whose hair turns white thinking he will.

And even though we know the dog has never bitten anyone, we cannot accept that as a positive assurance that he never will. He may make an exception to the rule in our particular case.

The expert, swiftly-gliding cycler knows he isn't going to run over the pedestrian who walks leisurely on, unconscious of the approach of the silent steed of steel until it is almost upon him. But the pedestrian isn't so sure of it, and he gives himself the benefit of the doubt.

With a tremendous start, that almost pulls his nerves out by the roots, he flees to a place of safety. And he doesn't like wheelmen.

Don't scare folks to death. It is about as bad as killing them.

ONE can get too much of a good thing. Ride your wheel with moderation.

PUT in a word for broad tires when you get a chance.

TRY to have your wheel benefit both mind and muscle.

SEC. 1. No person, except as authorized by ordinance of the city or order, regulation, license or permission of the board of aldermen, or other board of officers of the city thereto duly authorized, or except an officer or employee of the city and for some public purpose or use, shall drop, place or throw and suffer to remain, or cause to be dropped, placed or thrown in upon any highway, street, lane, square or other public place in the city, any ashes, cinders, glass, crockery, scrap iron, nails, tacks, wire, stones, gravel, paper, dirt, shrub or trees or trimmings thereof, post, pole, stones, earth from cellars, lumber or other building material, or any materials, obstruction, refuse, rubbish, or offensive matter of any kind.

Room 56, Equitable Building,
BOSTON, February 25, 1896.

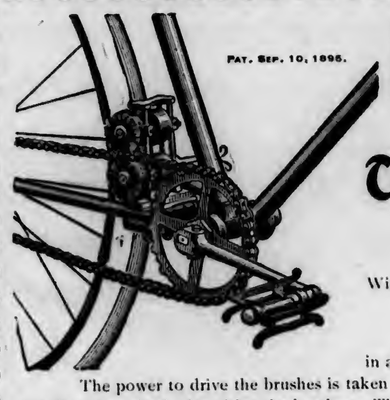
I desire to notify the trade that I am the owner of Letters Patent of the United States, granted to Pardon W. Tillinghast, of Providence, R. I., No. 486,915 of Nov. 29, 1892, and No. 497,791 of May 23, 1893, for improvements in pneumatic tires, which said Letters Patent cover the manufacture, sale and use of all single-tube or hose-pipe tires in the market.

The following firms and companies have been licensed to make and sell such tires, to wit:

The Pope Manufacturing Co.
The B. F. Goodrich Co.
The Hartford Rubber Works Co.
The Hartford Cycle Co.
The Boston Woven Hose and Rubber Co.
The New York Tire Co.
The Hodgman Rubber Co.
The Newton Rubber Works.

No other manufacturers are authorized to make or sell single-tube or hose-pipe tires, and dealers are warned not to purchase such tires of any other manufacture. Any person selling or using any such tires manufactured by any one not licensed by me will be liable to prosecution for infringement.

THEODORE A. DODGE.



What Will Happen?

Either the Tillinghast Patents will be sustained, or they will be defeated.

If they are sustained, every unlicensed manufacturer must pay to their owner all the profit he has made or by reasonable care might have made on his single-tube tires. By taking a license now, a manufacturer insures himself against this disaster, the price will remain where it is, and enought profit can be earned to enable him to make good tires.

If the patents are defeated, every one can make single-tube tires, and a few large manufacturers will sell them at a ten per cent. profit over a cost so low that no one else can compete without cheapening the goods. Result: no profit earned in manufacture; a market flooded with ill-made tires, and no wheelman assured that he can get back sound from a ten-mile spin.

Is not every manufacturer better off with a Tillinghast License?

Does Velocity Clean?

The Polleys Automatic Bicycle Chain Cleaner

Will clean the top and bottom of the chain, because the brushes revolve 3000 times in one minute, in an opposite direction from the way the chain is going.

The power to drive the brushes is taken from the wheel or tire of the bicycle coming in contact with the small pulley wheels that drive the brushes. This little machine is not intended to be kept on the bicycle when riding — a few turns of the crank does the work. The simplicity of the attachment also commends it to general use. One minute will do for the chain more than thirty minutes in a common way. Keep your chain clean and you will have an easy-running wheel. The Polleys Chain Cleaner is the kind that cleans. Every rider wants one. THE "READING NOTICE" HABIT.

BY KIRK BROWN.

Many papers seem unable to cope with the evil known as the "reading notice." A new chimney; a 6 x 10 addition to a 10 x 20 factory; the discharge of an employee (usually described as "severing his connection"); the hiring of another (always described as "consenting to accept") — in fact, any old thing is seized upon as an excuse to load the reading columns with a senseless lot of drivel that is absolutety valueless from any point of view.

If the papers throw their columns open to one advertiser they will have to do so for all, and the latter cannot be blamed if they make good use of the opportunity.

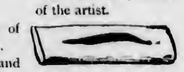
A self-respecting daily paper would not publish reading notices for its advertisers under any circumstances, and for the simple reason that they are of no value as news; they recognize the fact that a paper must be first of value to its readers — its worth to advertisers is a natural sequence. There is no reason why the same rigid rule should not be applied by trade papers. It would increase the readable value of the papers themselves, and result directly in benefit to each advertiser.

An appetite for free reading notices is as hard to cure as one for rum; a few well known advertisers in the trade are notoriously and woefully addicted to it. They do not seem to recognize the fact that if the matter is a good advertisement it is worth putting in their paid-for space, and if it is not worth putting there it is still more out of place in the columns of reading matter.

ADJUSTMENT OF BEARINGS.

The ball bearings ordinarily used on bicycles should be so adjusted that no side "play" is perceptible, but not tight enough to "bind." This is in reply to a number of readers who have asked whether the bearing should not be loose enough to allow the shaft to move slightly sidewise. In the language of a prominent bicycle manufacturer, "bearings should be absolutely tight and yet perfectly loose." Although seemingly paradoxical, there is a point, and not a very narrow one either, where the bearing may run perfectly free, and yet be tight enough so that no "lost motion" is apparent.

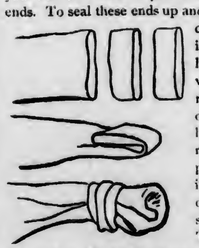
ADJUSTMENT OF CHAINS.



A bicycle chain should not be tight. No chain and wheels can be made which will run well unless there is a little "slack" to the chain. In fact, there is no danger of the chain being too loose so long as it cannot possibly get off the teeth of the sprocket wheels. If you have any doubt as to whether a chain is loose enough, roll the machine forward a few steps, and while it is still moving forward slightly take hold of the lower part of the chain, and unless it has the feeling of being perfectly loose, the adjustment is too tight. A chain should be kept well oiled in its bearings. But very little oil, however, should be allowed to remain on the outside.

Cured by the Laying On of Hands

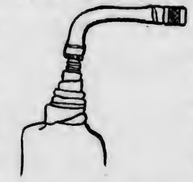
That a pneumatic tire should receive a gash large enough to put the hand through, and yet be put in ridable condition by the roadside without the use of tools or materials, seems almost beyond belief; but if the tire is a Dunlop Detachable it can be done, and done quickly, by any one from this description:



This illustration will give an idea of what the cut in the outer cover may be like; it was drawn from the tire on which this repair was made in the presence of the artist.

The inner tube was, of course, similarly damaged.

Remove the inner tube and cut out bodily the part in which the gash has been made, you will then have a perfect tube, but open at both ends. To seal these ends up and make the tube air tight cut off, from one end of it, two pieces about one-half inch wide, and you will then have two stout rubber bands; now fold over the end of the tube like this, and then tightly roll it up and hold in place as shown in this illustration by winding one of the rubber bands several times around it. Treat the other end of the tube in the same manner. You will now have a butt ended tube that will hold air as well as any that was ever made.



Now take your handkerchief, fold it up and lay it inside the cover over the gash, letting the ends hang over each side of the rim; put the tube in between the handkerchief and rim, so that when inflated it will force the handkerchief up against the gash in the cover. When putting in the tube, stretch it so that the butted or closed ends may pass each other for a distance of about two inches. Put the cover in so that the gash will not come at the same place as the ends of the tube. Inflate in the usual manner. Now fold the ends of the handkerchief, which are hanging out beyond the edges of the rim, up over the tread of the tire, and keep them in place with a few wrappings of twine or similar material.

When you have finished, your tire can be ridden until the outer portion of the handkerchief has been worn out. If you haven't a handkerchief take a sleeve or some other portion of your shirt, or even a piece of strong paper.

If the damage to the tire occurs right where the valve is, prepare the tube as before, cut the valve out around its base, put it inside one of the ends of the tube and wrap tightly with the rubber band. Take the rubber connection off your pump, screw it on to the valve, bend it at right angles and thrust it through the valve hole in the rim. The rubber connection will now serve as a valve, and after inflating the tire the end of the connection can be sealed up with a piece of chewed paper or a dab of mud, though if the air check in the valve is an extra good one this can be dispensed with.

This, of course, is a temporary repair, though it is better than a good many so-called permanent repairs that are made on other types of tires. The Dunlop Detachable Tire is the only pneumatic tire that can be repaired by the roadside when it has received such serious injury as this.

PROFUSE PERSPIRATION.

The summer days are here, and now
We're very apt to get
Hot perspiration on our brow
In great big drops of sweat.

The discussion regarding perspiration broadens in interest. The following opinions are culled from a large number of letters relating to the subject:

A St. Louis member suggests "a pore-pump with a belt rigged to the wheel, and depositing tank under the seat, provided with sprinkling attachments. It would be no trick at all to sprinkle a block now and then, using a fine spray. Suffice it to say, let us spray."

A New York member writes: "I purchased a pair of worsted (full) tights and a jersey, which replace underclothes and absorb the perspiration incident to a long ride or warm day."

"All old wheelmen," writes a New Jersey member, "will tell a sweater to avoid chills and 'that cold and clammy feeling,' by wearing wool next the skin the year round. A little unpleasant at first to some, but the only safe thing to do. The 'sweater' is very much like the Irishman's red flannel shirt. 'No matther how cowld and wet ye's are, youre always warm and dhry.' Try it next the skin — all wool, and not too light a texture, and be convinced. Long woolen stockings sewed on to light woolen drawer tops or all wool tights, completes the costume, with knickerbockers or bloomer pants as preferred. Warm in winter and cool in summer, and never chilly.

"Excessive perspiration or hyperidrosis," writes a member from Philadelphia, "is due to a relaxation of the vasor-motor system depending upon same debilitating condition. In the treatment of some, general tonics should be employed. Quinine, two grains three times a day, or hematic hypophosphates, a teaspoonful three times a day. Thin flannel should be worn next the skin instead of cotton. The skin may be sponged with very hot water or vinegar and water, (1 to 3). Excessive sweating may depend upon some organic lesion, and if it is at all debilitating a physician should be consulted."

Another New York member says, "that while fleshy people perspire more than thin persons, the freaks in the sweating line are always heavy drinkers, not necessarily of liquor, but of water, cold tea, lemonade, etc. I never used to sweat at all, until my physician told me to drink more water, which I did, and now I sweat freely and feel better; but I can check the sweating by refraining from any drink, except with meals. It is hard at first, but I believe will help some of the complainers."

"When arriving home steeped in perspiration," writes an Ohio member, "remove your clothing as quickly as possible, sit in a tub of cold water up to your waist, and rub the upper portion of the body briskly with a coarse towel, applying the water freely. The bath should not last over one minute. Do not rub the skin perfectly dry. Put on dry clothing as quickly as possible, and exercise lightly for ten to fifteen minutes until the blood is in a normal condition. Remember the more RAPIDLY you remove and replace your clothing the more effective the bath. If no bath-tub is at hand the simple rub with the coarse towel will answer the purpose as well; but use plenty of water and act with rapidity. Take this application daily for two weeks and the immoderate perspiration will disappear.

"Not knowing the weight of those members who suffer from excessive (?) perspiration," writes W. B., St. Louis, "I hazard the proposition that they are too fat; or to put it more kindly, that their weight for their height is more than normal. My understanding is that fat is chiefly a distension of the cellular tissues with water. Perspiration draws out this water and hence reduces fat. I venture this statement (with great fear of being 'jumped on' for saying it), that if a man is not over weight, as the expression is, he will not suffer from excessive perspiration produced by muscular exertion, provided he does not exercise in a temperature of over 150° in the sun."

"The remedy I would suggest," writes a Pennsylvania member, "is a cool tepid sponge bath immediately after rising every morning; then a thorough rubbing of the entire body with a coarse towel. Let the rides be short ones, not to exceed ten miles for the first two or three weeks (but ride every day) easily, but continuously, not stopping till you reach home (if perspiring) — then change the clothing at once, rubbing thoroughly dry before doing so."

LOUISVILLE MEET.

We learn that the "befrazzled and bedraggled spectacle known as the annual parade will be left off the program, and in its stead there will be a parade of uniformed clubs, well drilled and well dressed. No club of less than ten members present in uniform being permitted to enter the procession."

We are inclined to believe that this innovation will be appreciated.

It is also proposed to have a manufacturers' parade, which will doubtless be very interesting.

It has been suggested by Mr. Bassett that a portion of one evening be set apart for a reception and reunion of the veterans of the L. A. W. Only those who have been members for ten years or more will be considered eligible. It should, however, be an interesting portion of the program.

WHEN the clock strikes one, one should not strike, too. One should consider it meantime (mean time) and not join in strikes. No. 86,686.

Popular Cycle Tours

New York to Washington.

Having just returned from a trip awheel from New York to Washington with the New York Cycle Touring Club, and as this tour is one probably contemplated by many wheelmen during the coming summer months, I think it only fair to inform you for their benefit that unless a cyclist has plenty of time at his or her disposal, the route laid down in the L. A. W. road books is impracticable, and in addition is, for a portion of the route between Wilmington and Tolchester, over poor roads, which, during the season of drouth, are in many places impassable. Moreover, the connection by boat from Tolchester to Baltimore is very infrequent, except during July and August, and as the boat only goes once or twice a day, even during those months, to miss her necessitates a wait of from six to twelve hours.

The most direct route from New York to Washington, following the road book instructions from New York to Philadelphia, lies through Chester, Wilmington, Newark, Del., and Elkton and Havre de Grace, Md. I took this route last year, but will never do so again, as the road from Elkton, about eighteen miles beyond Wilmington to Havre de Grace, some fifteen or twenty miles, is impassable for much of the way, covered with sand ankle deep, and up and down mountains, while in addition the road from Havre de Grace through Cecil and Harford counties, Md., until one strikes the Belair pike, is rough and poor riding.

If one wants to take the trip from New York to Washington comfortably in four days, which allows for about fifty miles a day, one should stop the first night at Princeton, the second at Philadelphia, the third should be passed on the boat, an excellent one, between Delaware City, Md., and Baltimore, and Washington can be reached on the fourth day. Leaving New York at the foot of West 42nd street, take the Hudson County Boulevard, a fine stretch of macadam thirteen and a half miles to Bergen Point, then train over the Newark Bay bridge to Elizabeth, about ten minutes, and then through Rahway and Metuchen to New Brunswick, where a good lunch can be had at the Mansion House.

The seventeen miles from New Brunswick to Princeton afford one of the most beautiful rides in the United States, all good road, with the exception of about three miles near Kingston. Leaving Princeton the second morning, ride through Lawrenceville, five miles fair country road and six good macadam to Trenton, thence over a fair road five miles to side path along Delaware river, five miles to Bristol, where lunch.

Twenty-five miles from Bristol over good macadam road brings one to Broad and Chestnut streets in Philadelphia. Leaving Philadelphia the third morning, ride west over Walnut street bridge, and turn left at the college buildings to the Darby pike; good pavement all the way to Darby, and then fine macadam to Chester, thirteen miles. Then good road, but very hilly, through pretty country to Wilmington, twenty-eight miles from Philadelphia. The League Hotel in Wilmington should be avoided from our experience, as it has poor facilities and uncivil employees. From Wilmington ride in the cool of the evening through a most picturesque country through the town of Newcastle, sixteen miles, over a fair country road to Delaware City at the entrance of the Delaware and Chesapeake canal. Here the night boat of the Ericsson line can be taken at nine o'clock through the canal and Chesapeake Bay to Baltimore. This line makes special provision for the wants of wheelmen and runs well equipped and comfortable boats, charging nothing for wheels.

The roads between Baltimore and Washington, a distance of only forty miles, are simply in a disgraceful condition. We found them covered with sand and dust, and long stretches were absolutely unrideable. It is a marvel that the residents of both Washington and Baltimore, to say nothing of the wheelmen of those cities, allow them to remain in this condition. The route lies out Columbia avenue along the Washington pike, through Laurel, where lunch can be taken.

I am confident from the experience of this trip, now taken twice, that the route I have just described is the best between New York and Washington, and if our experiences will relieve any other wheelmen from the annoyances and delays we underwent, the purpose of this communication will have been served.

JAMES B. TOWNSEND,
President Cycle Touring Club.

LIGHT AND LAW.

S. RAYMOND KITCHIN.

In the town of Worcester lives a man,
And he is known to fame;
He introduced a lantern law,
And the wheelmen killed the same.

"Let there be light!" said this good man,
As the obnoxious law he vaunted;
So now he has the light he needs,
Though not the kind he wanted.

DETAILS WANTED.

It is suggested to the BULLETIN that some doubt is bound to exist in the minds of wheelmen as to who makes the best bicycle; who has the largest plant, who sells the most wheels, who builds the highest grade, etc., etc.

We think manufacturers might to advantage give interesting facts, rather than generalities. The number of wheels built, the size of plant, the number of traveling men and all that, do not necessarily prove that any given wheel is the best to buy. A first-class man, who fully understood the subject, might build a single bicycle which would be superior to any regular machine in the market. It is quite possible for a shop which makes but a hundred machines per year to turn out work quite equal to the best.

It is no disgrace to be poor, but it is sometimes considered improper to misrepresent. If a manufacturer builds but a paltry hundred thousand machines in a year, it would not be laid up against him if he were to admit his littleness, and not claim two hundred thousand. The BULLETIN this week is sent to 46,777 paying subscribers. We might claim more, but we are too honest, and besides, it would be easy to catch us at it.

A CRIPPLE CREEK (Colo.) member writes: — I generally swear by whatever appears in the BULLETIN, but when I read your statement that a woman will jump at a mouse, my credulity received a severe shock.

IT'S DEAD EASY.

If you would "literary" be, yet cannot write a line,
Don't weep, for if you cannot sing, why you can bark or whine.
It isn't necessary that you really own the brains
To pen the truly-polished things that others pen with pains.
Pose as a bilious critic and the writers, all, lampoon,
(Since time began the yaller dogs have always bayed the moon).
And when in your jacassic garb you have yourself arrayed,
Then tell the world about the awful "breaks" that Shakespeare made.

IT IS not unreasonable to predict that horseless carriage contests and exhibitions will be attractive features of the State and other fairs next autumn. The Rhode Island State Fair Association has already announced a series of prizes amounting to $5,000, to be given to exhibitors of horseless carriages at next September's exposition. There are to be races of this sort each day, and the display will embrace all known makes of motor road vehicles.

BICYCLERS have scored a point in New Jersey. They have even got the farmers to unite in petitions to the legislature to raise the taxes for building better roads. Not a State in the Union but could well afford to imitate New Jersey. It is good country roads and not more railroads that the people need. Bicyclists everywhere should unite in this movement. Bicyclists are numerous enough to have their influence felt, and they should not be slow in action. What is good for them will be a blessing to all classes — good country roads.— Chicago Inter-Ocean.

BICYCLE

JOHN THE BAPTIST.

It is always interesting to trace the relations of social facts one to all A few years ago the bicycle was a toy. A few people rode them — chiefly those who had nothing else to do. No man dreamed that here was a machine which was to push the nation forward a century. The farmer who damned the eyes, limbs, soul and body of the bicycler who scooted past his startled team, did not dream that this same rider was the forerunner of a new era of prosperity for the husbandman. Yet so it has happened. The necessity of a good road to the wheelman has brought about a movement which the farmer could never have inaugurated. Everywhere the clubs of bicyclers are acting in powerful concert. Everywhere the gospel of good roads is making converts. And the John the Baptist of that gospel is the bicycle. — Santa Cruz (Cal.) Press.

"A WATERMELON RUN."

Who ever has seen a horse fly or heard a bed tick should not be surprised to see a "watermelon run." We learn that such a run is to take place at Stockton, Cal., on Aug. 9, and that at least 2,000 wheelmen will "take part," from which we infer that it is a large melon.

A NEW YORK member thinks that if some of our poetical friends and tune-writers were to combine, some delightful and appropriate melodies could be produced for wheeling parties. "I have felt," he writes, "as I have been quietly speeding along a beautiful country road, in company with a party of friends, that the pleasure could be intensified by the occasional singing of, say, some bicycle glees. Of course, when under the strain in climbing hills or riding rapidly, one would find it difficult, if not impossible, to employ one's voice in singing; but, just as in a hay ride in the country in summer songs often prove a pleasant feature, so, for quietly speeding along a country road, I believe a song would be pleasing."

THE managers of the Consolidated R. R., have fitted up a large, light room, as a bicycle stable for wheels owned by the many clerks in the New Haven depot. There is great need of similar conveniences in many office and public buildings. The wise landlord will henceforth look after the interests of his wheel-riding tenants.

The humpbacked man.
He very seldom can
Tell why of friends he has a woeful lack,
Until some sad day,
When he has to bite the clay,
And his golden hair is mingled with the track.

J. G. H., Hutchinson, Kansas:—A number of attempts have been made to couple bicycles and ride them upon the railroad rails. We have not seen anything, however, which was entirely practical. The principal obstacle in the way of developing such a device is the very natural objection which the owners of railroads might raise to their use.

THE BIG THEATRE HAT.

Happy, happy Cincinnati! This, indeed, is gleeful news
That we lately in the papers have been able to peruse.
That you've risen in your anger — whilst poor we have only fumed —
And the cart-wheel hat of fashion in your theatres have doomed.

Yes, henceforward, as we gather, when you go to see a play,
No vast disk of straw or velvet will be flapping in your way;
No outrageous tufts of feathers, and no Brobdignagian bows
In your eyes will now be bobbing, or embarrassing your nose!

The bold actions of the hero will no more for you be blurred
By a nodding bunch of grasses or a wired and wobbly bird;
And you wil not have, henceforward, for the heroine to hunt
Through a crowded bed of flowers on the lady's head in front!

Then if lucky Cincinnati can this nuisance thus abate,
Let us ask, oh! how much longer will poor London have to wait?
How much longer must we sit on, as for far too long we've sat,
Wholly crushed beneath the shadow of that Upas-tree-like hat?

Is there no one that will aid us? Will no manager arise
Who from matinees will banish every hat of ultra size?
Or, say, is it wholly useless to again put forth the plea
That we have a right to witness what we dearly pay to see?

There are sometimes sanguine moments when we think that, p'raps, some day
One may even look for comfort — and may get it at the play;
That the time may not be distant when some manager may please
To arrange his stalls — oh, rapture! — so as not to cramp our knees.

When all draughts may be excluded, when the getting to one's seat
May no more entail such torture upon unoffending feet;
And when folks who, with their chatter, rudely interrupt the piece,
May be firmly, though politely, made their silly talk to cease.

But these fancies are but fleeting, they go quickly as they come,
And in place of them reaction sets in, sinister and glum,
For we know upon reflection 'tis the Fates' unchanging will
That in sadness and in grumbling we must take our "pleasures" still.

NO "HANDS OFF."

The authorities in Washington, D. C., have decreed that wheelmen in that place shall keep both hands on the handle bars while riding in the public streets. It must be an amusing sight to see a wheelman dismount, or ride into some door-yard, whenever he wants to scratch his head.

DO YOU read the L. A. W. BULLETIN? but of course you do. The man who won't see the above question is the one we want to reach.

THE Graham & Morton line of elegant steamers, plying between Chicago and the popular Michigan summer resorts, advertise "Wheels free." This line carries many thousand wheelmen every summer, and the management of it, being up to date, realizes the importance of doing business intelligently. This line affords one of the pleasantest outings for Chicago wheelmen.

IT'S A PRETTY THING.

"Best Routes In and Around Philadelphia" is a fine, substantially bound book, containing splendid maps and many charming half tones of points of interest. It's a book that no Philadelphia wheelman should be without. It is given free to any Pennsylvania member who sends in two new applications, or for twenty-five cents and one application for membership, or it will be sent to any L. A. W. member for fifty cents.

IF EVERY supervisor would ride a wheel over the roads under his charge, frequently, the highways would soon be lots better.

THE man who doesn't know, without argument, that good roads are the best for all classes, is hardly worth wasting time on.

BALLOTS AS BALLAST.

PROPERLY placed ballots will do much toward making the roads good.

"Where there's a will there's a way," and the first thing to be done is to place those in charge of road making who are in sympathy with the work and go about it intelligently.

This impression is growing among wheelmen, and the recent victories achieved in the courts and in the State legislatures are unmistakable proof of their power when united in a just cause.

Thorough organization on the part of the wheelmen is still the hope and strength of the good roads movement.

A recent number of the Medina (Pa.) American says that the bicyclers of Montgomery county will likely play a leading role in local politics this year. They are out for good roads, and if they don't get them they will know the reason why. It is estimated that there are on an average 25 bicyclers or good roads people in each of the 110 districts of the county. These will be organized in the most thorough manner. The chief duty of this good roads league will be to hunt the scalps of legislative candidates who still cling to the old-fogy notions about road building. It is claimed that 25 earnest workers in each voting district will wield a powerful influence at the primaries. What these bicyclers want are five members of the legislature who will support a good road law in the next session. The good roads people have issued a campaign button, and it has caught this town and other towns completely.

DO ALL the intelligent work you can for the betterment of the roads.

WATER is a good thing, but too much of it will spoil a road.

FIX the road and throw away the whip.

GOOD roads are best for man and beast.

A GOOD ROADS LESSON.

One of the strongest arguments for good roads is furnished by the recent experience of the town of Conewango, Cattaraugus county, New York. The town elections there this spring had to be postponed until May 14th on account of the utterly impassable roads. The town clerk was unable to get to the polling place at the other end of the town with the ballots, and voters were mired in every direction. — Buffalo (N. Y.) Times.

THE cycle path is a protest against bad roads, not a desire of the wheelmen. Give them good roads and they would not ask for a path. France has 130,000 miles of splendid roads. I have ridden all over that country and there is no cycle path. It costs France $18,000,000 a year to keep those roads in good repair. The assessed valuation of personal real estate in the State of New York is $5,000,000,000, yet there is no State appropriation for the maintenance and making of roads. — ISAAC B. POTTER.

THE Good Roads Convention and Bicycle Meet to convene in Galveston, Tex., June 9 to 13 inclusive, will attract 20,000 visitors, it is thought. Over 2,000 bicycles will parade.

ST. LOUIS has a new and able publication, the Good Roads Advocate, which will devote itself to the work of improving streets and highways.

LEO ROSETT:—Consult road book, and enquire of local consuls for best road from Cleveland to Chicago.

PROSPECTIVE LADY MEMBER:—You should join the League at once, for by so doing you will receive a road book that will happily answer your question.

J. F. C., Washington:—It may be true, as you suggest, that "Noah made the ark light," but when we consider that it would n't have floated if he had made it too heavy, his action seems justifiable. Could he have foreseen, however, the number of jokes which were to have been gotten off about his craft and its unique cargo he might not have made it at all.

CORRESPONDENCE

THE CYCLE PATH QUESTION.

There is at the present a divergence of views regarding the construction of cycle paths for wheelmen in various localities, and many in the League are arrayed on both sides, for and against.

It is proposed to introduce a bill to the next legislature of Connecticut, placing a tax on bicycles, the amount thus raised to be devoted to cycle-path construction. What will be the fate of the proposed action remains to be seen. In the meantime, it would be well to consider the subject before urging legislation.

A moderate estimate of the number of cycles in use throughout the State, belonging to citizens who would be called on to pay tax upon their wheels (the voting class), could be stated at about 15,000, perhaps. It is doubtful if such personal property could be enumerated belonging to minors. A tax is always odious, and wherever possible evaded. So much for that. Now as to path construction.

In the first place to be of utility and permanence the path must be outside the highway layout, else it would soon be destroyed by teams, when the roads were bad. Its location and construction must be determined by survey, ease of procuring material and privilege of way. Litigation ought to be avoided in every case. Material and ease of conveyance should be a factor in the proposed route. Cost should be made the main question in determining the layout. With these matters in view, the next question is, how shall the money raised by a general tax be applied? Will the commissioner (and we suppose a special board of officials must be created for the purpose), determine where the money shall be expended; or will each locality, (town or village, as under our Highway Improvement Act), ask for a portion to be used in its borders, with the result that an honest difference of opinion would be inevitable.

In the constitution of the Board of Commissioners there ought and probably would be representatives of the wheelmen, as well as practical men outside the wheel-users. Material suitable for the work, where available, should be used in preference to that which would have to be transported from any distant points; and the question would have to be pre-determined by legislative authority as to such kinds as might be used.

The fact that there has been a few of these cycle paths constructed is of no great importance in enacting a law which would be of general application throughout the State, as various questions are to be considered regarding locality, necessity for, desirability of, and so forth.

There is no question at all as to the utility of these paths in different portions of the State. The work of highway improvement is slow, and even where undertaken, is of little benefit to wheelmen, as in many cases, the expenditure has been limited and the improvements made on short stretches of road between villages, and too often where a packed meeting voting for the improvement has diverted the expenditure to localities which might have been left and main highways received the benefit. At the present time politics plays too great a part in road matters, and next to politics local jealousy is a factor in the work of securing good roads.

Dirt roads are too common, and stingy appropriations for local highways are the rule throughout the State, not only in the smaller towns, but in the cities. The probable future conditions of roads, unless a long period of time is considered, may be likened to the present because of reason stated. He is an optimist who can discover a roseate picture of smooth, easy highways in Connecticut within a generation.

So we give our vote for cycle paths where they will afford wheelmen comfortable riding between towns where only the old horse-killing, wagon-destroying, wheelwright and blacksmith-maintaining highways exist. L. A. W. 35,831.

MAY 18, 1896.

NEW YORK STANDARD WATCH CO.:

Gentlemen, — I am a "green" bicyclist. I took my first lesson three days ago, and my first ride yesterday, with one of your "Standard" Cyclometers on board. I banged into the first milk wagon I met — result, a broken wheel, a broken cyclometer and a broken head. I don't suppose your guaranty covers such fool riding as mine, so write to ask what you will charge to fix up my "Standard" Cyclometer, and how long it will be before it is returned. Yours truly,

He "don't suppose," but he will be disappointed. It is a singular sort of guaranty, for it covers cases of "fool riding," expert riding, any kind of riding; whether by a "green" bicyclist, or by one well seasoned; whether a milk wagon, or a wee pebble, or a bit of wet road is the cause of accident. We don't inquire. We don't care. If only the man himself is not so badly broken up that he can mail his injured Cyclometer to us, he will get another one in exchange as quickly as our shipper can wrap it and mail it, and it shan't cost the victim a cent.

There was never such another guaranty on any manufactured article, in the whole history of trade. Why? Because there was never such a Cyclometer!

The New York Standard Watch Co.

A VERY SORRY MAN.

Morris Gross, of Christopher street, Brooklyn, recently took up bicycling as a pastime and bought an old-fashioned ordinary or high wheel from a friend. Recently he put on his "bike" suit for a little spin, but some one had stolen the wheel from the vestibule where he had placed it. Later the wheel came back. It was brought by a small boy, with this note, which explains itself:

Sir: — I send you back the bicycle my husband stole from you. May it be accursed forever, and you and every one else that had to do with it. My husband is an invalid and he wanted exercise. He could not walk, so he took your bicycle for him to ride on. What was the devilish result? He broke his right arm, his left leg, and got wounds all over his body. MARIE CHONOFFSKY.

A PHILADELPHIA wheelman offers the following plan for suppressing the scorcher, who is such a source of danger on crowded streets: "Let the city appoint 'special' policemen, same to be members of our local cycle clubs, and also members of the 'L. A. W.' This would enable the city to supply without cost a force practically unlimited in numbers, who being reputable wheelmen, and interested in the proper protection of the sport, and riding as they would be in all parts of the city, it would, I believe, have a beneficial effect."

RIDE your wheel just as you please, but don't ride it so as to displease.

MAMMOTH CAVE.

One of the most attractive features of the great National L. A. W. Meet, at Louisville, will be the excursion to the world famous Mammoth Cave. It is expected that all railroads running into Louisville will take wheels as baggage on this occasion at least.

REGARDING the suggestion that red, white and blue be chosen the League colors, a correspondent asks, "would it be possible to have a special ribbon manufactured having the three ribbons interwoven with stars? For example, the red ribbon to have white and blue stars, the white, blue and red, and the blue, red and white stars; or better still, to have all three colors decorated with gold or silver stars?"

THE Buffalo (N. Y.) Times is giving royal purple badges, the official color of the L. A. W., to all wheelmen to be worn as an expression of a sentiment favoring the building of a cycle path in the city park. The relative number of cyclists and horsemen who visit the park are in a ratio of about 500 to 1, and the latter have a path.

THE city councils of Minneapolis and St. Paul have passed ordinances permitting wheelmen to build, by obtaining the city's approval, and without expense to the city, side paths for the exclusive use of wheelmen, the same to be under the supervision of the city's officials. A number of streets will be furnished with side paths at once.

SIDE PATHS.

R. Philip Gormully, chairman of the press committee of the National Cycle Board of Trade, is out with a circular letter, in which he strongly advocates the extensive building of separate paths for bicycles. There is much to be said in favor of such a proposition, and some arguments against it. Among the objections, we are told that it is not proper to use public money or public land (the highways), for the benefit of any particular class, and that we, of the L. A. W., should devote ourselves to the general improvement of all roads.

On the other side, it is claimed that wheelmen are now so numerous that they constitute a very large percentage of the "public," and are as much entitled to a separate road as is the locomotive or the pedestrian.

We believe that the strongest argument for special "side" paths is found not alone in the fact that it is a good thing for wheelmen, but that it is equally desirable from the standpoint of the horse driver. In crowded thoroughfares the benefit is a mutual one.

We believe that the objections to separate paths for wheelmen are not so many as is generally supposed. The principal one, so far as the writer has studied the subject, is that when the wheelmen have a separate road they lose much of their interest in keeping up the main highway, though the road question has become so well understood in many of the States that improvement is bound to go on even though the bicycle should stop.

The cost of a side path is but a small part of the cost of a road to stand heavy traffic, and in many localities the bicycle riders outnumber the horses. In most such cases it would seem to be an injustice to no one to use public money and public space for the construction of side paths.

The argument that roads should not be maintained with public funds for a particular class loses much, if not all, of its force when we consider that millions of the people's money is used for boulevards on which loaded teams are not allowed.

WHAT THE L. A. W. BULLETIN WANTS.

The L. A. W. BULLETIN has had several publishers; it has passed through the "valley of the shadow of death" on several occasions. Publishers have paid for the privilege of publishing it; publishers have been paid for doing the work; the League has done its own publishing: all sorts of schemes have been tried, but up to Jan. 30, '95, when it gave its last expiring gasp, the League of American Wheelmen never had what looked like a sure thing in the way of a permanent official organ.

When the present publisher approached the inanimate form of the frequently-defunct publication, and, gazing fondly into the ghastly upturned features, considered the practicability of a prompt and permanent resurrection, he did so against the advice of earnest friends. It was generally talked that the experiment was a risky one. The League's history shows that it has gained in membership in proportion as its Bulletin has been read, and that whenever it had no Bulletin its growth has been painfully slow.

At the start the present publisher believed that the organ of such an organization should be a financial success, and the result of that belief was a ten years' contract with the L. A. W., by which its members pay a little more than half the cost of the blank paper used; the balance of the expense and the profit, if any, must come from the advertiser.

The present cost of making and mailing the paper is fourteen hundred dollars per week, and this is increasing rapidly.

Its large special circulation makes it the most valuable advertising medium printed for all lines which pertain directly or indirectly to wheelmen. In order to get results for the advertiser, whose money we must have if we would succeed, we must induce people to read the paper. How can we do it? That is, after all, one of the most vital questions. The L. A. W. BULLETIN as now conducted is read, and we shall watch closely to see that such changes are made as will at all times interest the largest possible number of wheelmen. To this end we want criticism, not of the cowardly kind which is anonymous, not of the narrow, selfish kind that is the hobgoblin of little minds." — Emerson.

"A FOOLISH CONSISTENCY

There are, however, minds which do not allow consistency of any sort to interfere with their perfect freedom of action. A case in point: A rural resident, who confesses to never having seen a theatre, writes that he "has no use for" our theatre hat number, but suggests that if we want something of "real live interest," we should print a route from his village to another in an adjoining State. The interesting part of it was that the two terminals of the proposed route contained exactly seven League members.

"TAG! YOU'RE IT!"

The Illinois Division has an application blank with a description of the L. A. W. and its objects on the back. It is made of card board and punched at one end; through the perforation is a looped rubber band, by which it may be quickly attached to a handle bar.

The Illinois rider who leaves his wheel unattended is pretty sure to find one of these suggestive souvenirs attached to it. It's a good idea.

"MONEY BACK?" WHY, CERTAINLY!

Our attention is called to a letter published in a New York daily, in which an L. A. W. BULLETIN subscriber complains of the matter contained in our May 15th number, and asks the New York paper if he "can get his money back." Just why he should expect information from such a source we do not know. We take pleasure in announcing, however, that he may again clasp to his heart, not simply the unexpired portion, but the whole entire twenty-five cents, if he will make application at this office (12 Pearl street, Boston).

Should Mr. Langdon do this it will add a third name to our "resigned" list. One gentlemen rudely resolved to deny himself the L. A. W. BULLETIN because we advertised beer, and another because we ventured to insinuate that a merciful God would not be likely to condemn his own children to endless torture.

We would be more than glad to please everybody at once if it were possible, but it cannot be; all people are not built alike. We can only hope to strike a good average.

Dark clouds of pessimistic doubt may at times hide the light from some timid soul, but, all the same, the tendency of the L. A. W. seems to be of a more or less hopeful nature. So long as two thousand new members come to us each week, and all previous records are constantly being broken, we must ask for the exercise of at least ordinary human charity, and always remember that any L. A. W. BULLETIN subscriber who is dissatisfied with his investment may at any time have the amount refunded on application.

We know that we ain't perfect,
Cause hardly any is;
But man to man, as best we can,
We're tendin' to our biz.

REPAIRING A TIRE "SHOE."

To repair an inner tube is easy. To repair the outer cover or "shoe" is still easier, but only because it does not have to hold air. To make this repair just "to the Queen's taste," however, can best be done by an expert.

Small, portable vulcanizing outfits are in the market, and are very desirable for mending large cuts. In the absence of any special appliances, a cut shoe may be mended by stitching across the wound on the inside, using a "ball cover stitch," or a piece of rubber coated canvas may be cemented on the inner surface. The outside may be made presentable by means of rubber solution, but only after the canvas is made whole.

"DELAYS ARE DANGEROUS."

This especially applies to delays in mailing copies of the BULLETIN to our readers, and the danger is to the publisher. If a BULLETIN subscriber has ordinarily received his paper on Friday, and on a certain occasion it does not arrive at the accustomed hour, he is very apt to send a communication to this office which, in some instances, might properly be written on asbestos paper. If he could only see the tears of anguish that sometimes fall down our classic cheeks, as we realize the fallibility of human effort, he would, perhaps, wait until the next day before writing.

The BULLETIN circulation is large, and is getting larger. The increase, applications and renewals, in a week are often more than the total circulation of some of our less (or more) fortunate contemporaries. This increase can scarcely be appreciated by those who are not entirely familiar with the "game." Our gross gain for the week of May 15 was over four thousand names, with about eight hundred expirations. The setting-up, taking out and re-arranging of a mailing list of this magnitude is no easy job. It is attended to to the best of our ability. We are constantly trying to improve our methods, but absolute perfection is not to be hoped for. If you do not receive your BULLETIN within a day or two of its accustomed arrival, notify us by all means. Meanwhile, we ask you to believe that we are, at all times, doing the best we can.

ROAD RACES.

It is not generally known that the L. A. W. is on record as having officially denounced road racing, and also as having requested its members, and particularly its officials, not to take part in any road race. Racing upon the public highways, with bicycles or anything else, is clearly illegal everywhere, and the L. A. W. cannot be expected to sanction that which is contrary to the laws of our country. A number of instances have occurred lately in which L. A. W. officials have taken part in road races. In all such cases the proper steps have been taken to prevent a recurrence of the mistake.

WORSE THAN A HIGH HAT.

A Philadelphia gentleman writes, that "a tall hat at the theatre is balm and nectar compared with the lot of a small man who rides on the rear seat of a tandem with a giantess in front." We don't know who it is, as no name is signed, but we suspect that it is Dick Kane as he is a small man and is always kicking about something.

DON'T always try to be as mean as the other fellow. Give a little more than half of the road if thereby you can save trouble.

After all, the looks of anything count for a good deal. The pretty girls generally get the earliest invitations to the picnic.

It pays to be as handsome as we can.

"Beauty provokes thieves more than gold."

But though our faces be plain or ornamental, we should try to "look pleasant."

Did you ever, as you watched a lot of "sweaty," dust bedraggled bicyclers returning from their long Sunday or other runs, really yearn to go and do likewise?

Does such a sight really inspire you to ride a wheel, as they do? Do you think they "look pleasant?" Don't they look just as though they had been at work?

Would n't you feel more like taking a century run if the ones who do take them would come home with more of rest and not so much sweat on their faces. And are n't you glad the L. A. W. does n't compel its members to make "runs?"

A great many like it. Sometimes you could n't guess it by their looks.

THE delightful novelist, Opie Read, in one of his stories, says of a sheriff who went to arrest an Arkansas outlaw, "The only thing that prevented the sheriff from biting the dust was the fact that a hard rain had fallen the night before." Alas! rain is too often the only dust preventative.

THOS. H. PENMAN, Amesbury, Mass., referring to a letter in a recent issue of the L. A. W. BULLETIN, says he finds the following misleading statement: "'The English wheels average forty pounds in weight; they are clumsy and noisy and costly.' If your correspondent refers to wheels for hire, he is probably correct. The English bicycling trade having received such an enormous impetus of late that agents cannot meet the demands for wheels, and the bicycles for hire are naturally the ancient, noisy, clumsy, weighty wheels he complains of. As a matter of fact forty pound wheels have not been manufactured in England for three years back. The '96 roadsters weigh twenty-two, twenty-six and thirty pounds fully equipped, and cost from $45 to $100.

IT IS safe to say that all of the newspaper and magazine artists of the country are not riders of bicycles or close students of the methods used in constructing the wheel. They draw the frames of bicycles in a manner never dreamed of by wheel makers, and change the parts of a wheel about till its own mother would n't know it. But in these days of idealized purple cows and pink grass and other poster idiosyncracies, it may be the proper thing to draw a bicycle as no man ever saw it on this or any other earth.

When girls rode on their wheels,
They used to wear their skirts so long,
Down to their very heels.

But now they say that "times are changed,"
For every girl we meet
Wears bloomers or has bikers on,
And in them looks quite neat.

KEEP COOL.

The weather is very warm, but that does not excuse our getting hot at every little circumstance that arises. Our mail for a week or more has been filled with hot shot from cannons that have no excuse for being loaded. Some of the secretary-treasurers are after delinquents with a sharp stick, and their prodding stirs up a great many that need arousing, and also a great many that have the right to sleep. Delinquent notices are sent out from the mail list, and it very often happens that men are dunned who have already renewed. The division officers provide for this by a notice in very large type to the following effect:

IT IS POSSIBLE that many who have renewed will be dunned, as many of these notices will go out from checkings made several days previous to sending. If you have renewed, pay no attention to this notice.

This would seem to be sufficient: but it is n't. We are getting hundreds of indignant letters by every mail, and, to put it mildly, we are catching "Hail Columbia." We view all of these things with calm equanimity. The cannons are fired at us, but they are not aimed at the right mark, and so they don't hurt. We are very calm under the assurance that we are acting as a buffer to several earnest, hard-working fellows who are doing good service and who should have consideration, not abuse. The spike that they put in the cannon with the notice quoted above should be sufficient to silence every friendly gun. The waste-basket yearns to receive a delinquent notice when a member has renewed. Let it be fed.

It is very hot. Let us all keep cool!

Fraternally,
ABBOT BASSETT, Sec'y.

THE FIRST SUNDAY OUTING.

Those who are disposed to decry Sunday wheeling should remember that the first Christian Sabbath was the occasion of a Sunday outing, and a discourse on the way by the founder of Christianity.

No one would now venture to doubt but that, if Cleopas and his companion had possessed bicycles, they would have ridden them that spring day on their journey of three-score furlongs to Emmaus.

It is out amid the growing things, where every blade and flower is reaching out to its noblest aspirations, that one feels that he is in closest communion with the Creator. S. W. BALCH.

RHODE ISLAND BICYCLE BAGGAGE BILL.

The full text of the Act passed by the Legislature of Rhode Island, is given below. It was an amendment to the Baggage Law on the Statutes, and in effect defines baggage to include one bicycle for one person. The original law imposed no penalty, and it was deemed unnecessary to add any in this instance, as the railroads did not oppose its enactment. There is no reason to believe that they will seek to evade it, and there is ample remedy without a penalty. An action for damages would lie if a railroad wilfully refused to carry a wheel without charge.

For the passage of the Act in so successful a manner — not a vote was cast against it — full credit should be given to those who worked so actively in its behalf: to Representative Batchelor, of Woonsocket, for vigorously fathering this Act in the House and Judiciary Committee and pushing it to vote there; to the chief consul of this division, for taking up a bill certain of defeat as drawn and putting it into form that disarmed opposition, and for his untiring care and attention in the affair; to the genial Secretary of State and his efficient assistant, Mr. Parker, for their invaluable services in smoothing the way for its prompt and easy passage; to Representative Studley, of Providence, for securing the suspension of rules necessary to transmit it at once from the House to the Senate; and to Senator Woods, of Providence, for getting it through the Senate without reference to the usual committee. All the persons named, except Representatives Batchelor and Studley, are members of the L. A. W. And due appreciation must be had for the sensible action of the railroads and their counsel.

NELSON H. GIBBS,
Sec'y-Treas. Rhode Island Division.

AN ACT

In amendment of and in addition to Chapter 187 of the General Laws entitled of "Railroad Corporations."

It is enacted by the General Assembly, as follows:

SEC. 1. Section 9 of Chapter 187 of the General Laws of "Railroad Corporations" is amended to read as follows:

SEC. 9. Every passenger upon a railroad within the limits of this State, shall have the privilege of taking with him upon any train on which he is a passenger, personal baggage not exceeding eighty pounds in weight, without any charge on the part of the railroad company transporting the same, except the railroad fare of such passenger; and bicycles are hereby declared to be, and are decreed to be, baggage, within the meaning of this section, and shall be by such railroad companies transported as baggage, subject to the same liabilities, provided, however, that no railroad company shall be required to transport more than one bicycle for a single person, and no such passenger shall be required to crate, cover or otherwise protect any such bicycle.

SEC. 2. This Act shall take effect from and after its passage.

Passed May 14, 1896.

ELECTRIC ROAD FRANCHISES.

The following is from a paper read at the Supervisorial Convention at San Jose, Cal., on May 11, by Honorable Supervisor Hirsch, of San Francisco. He is the representative of about 40,000 wheelmen in California and a charter member of the Olympic Wheelmen and also a member of the Olympic Cyclists:

"I am opposed to the granting of electric railroad franchises on country roads. I believe the electric road should purchase its right of way as has been done by the steam railroads. It is wrong to give up the highways for such purposes, as they both destroy the road bed and make travel dangerous. If franchises must be granted electric roads, then the condition should be imposed upon them 'that they keep the entire roadway over which their cars pass in good condition.' This would lift a burden off each county granting such franchises, insure good roads and be a reasonable recompense for the valuable franchise granted.

"The question is often asked me (no doubt it will be asked of you), what will the city man, the wheelman, do towards defraying the expenses of building good roads? And I have always answered 'we will favor a general tax levy on the entire State for this purpose, for we feel that, as the cities are dependent on country prosperity, the means of easy access between cities and all given points of the country must insure the cities' prosperity.'"

PROMISES AND WORK.

We are often asked by new members what the League has done for wheelmen. As a great amount of good work has been done and as a large portion of our membership is made up of people who may not be familiar with the old time history, it will be in order for us to recount some of the more important acts which stand credited to the L. A. W. This will be done in these columns within a few weeks.

"Our club has a press committee," writes a New York member, "whose duty it is to prepare weekly articles of interest to wheelmen, and which are frequently of general interest for publication in a local newspaper. The paper publishes those articles gratuitously and willingly. Would it not be useful and advantageous if wheel clubs generally would make similar arrangements, when practicable."

Bring a respectful, organized pressure to bear on your road supervisor if he fails to make the road right.

Be good-natured. Madmen are poor guides.

THE BY AND BY OF CYCLING.

BY WM. GEO. OPPENHEIM.

In the by and by of cycling an additional member will probably be added to the President's cabinet, who shall be known as the Federal Commissioner of Highways.

Under his charge shall be placed all the railways and highways of the country. . . . Roads will then be constructed and kept in repair by the government, which shall then have the same interstate jurisdiction over roads and railways as it now has over the waters of the United States.

We may then see highroads scientifically constructed and kept in uniform repair by a government official who will not be affected by the operation of local interests or the influence of local prejudices.

Probably the tricycle, fitted with an electric motor or primary battery, with a leather top and sides, similar to those of a buggy, and a comfortable cushion, will be the cyclist's wheel of the by and by.

Probably this tricycle will weigh one hundred pounds, and will be used to transport the members of the family from their homes to business and shopping districts and return.

Probably then the steam engine of to-day will rank as a discarded invention. Quien Sabe?

There is no reason to believe that electricity — that most potential factor in the everlasting mysteries of creation — will cease to produce what we now deem to be wonders, but which in the by and by of cycling will be regarded with no more surprise than we now feel in receiving telephonic message from Chicago on our office desks.

Laboratories now take the place of fallow lands, and pestle and mortar act as reaper and mill.

A thing of steel with handle bars and chain, elastic tread and lamp by night has pedalled past the horse, and a creature which has served man well for ninety centuries, will soon limp uselessly away, and with him will go the fields which maintained him.

No need for the millions bushels of oats, since this better than horse will not eat those which can be raised, nor of hay, since the animal for which it will be grown will grow too rare to need them.

Probably then wheelmen will be provided with water bicycles, and will go to Coney Island and Far Rockaway by water, and to Montreal on electric cycle sleds. Why not?

Nobody is surprised to see Lohengrin boats (built on the bicycle plan) paddled along the Central Park lake; and there probably is not so much difference between such a Lohengrin boat and one of the iron steamboats as there was in Robert Fulton's time between his first steamer and the ocean greyhound of the present day.

Probably at that time wheelmen will have learned the rule of the road: to keep to the right, except when passing a vehicle going the same way.

Probably in the by and by of cycling we will all have learned not to wheel after a hearty meal, and to use flannel next to the skin even in hot weather.

Probably in the by and by, 108th street, from the Boulevard to Riverside Drive, 34th street and 42nd street, from river to river will be asphalted; and the circle at 59th street and Eighth avenue redeemed from its disgraceful condition.

Probably the successor of Gen. Collis will put smooth tracks along the East and North river front, and find a way to utilize the old reservoir to Yonkers. Stranger things than these have happened.

Oh! for a Maecenas — a cyclists' Maecenas — who shall write to the future chief of the New York Board of Estimate and Apportionment, as follows:

"Gentlemen:—I have deposited the sum of $100,000 in the X. Y. Z. bank, which is to be used for the purpose of asphalting certain streets in the city of New York hereinafter named; this sum to be used to defray the expenses thereof. "Respectfully,

"A FRIEND OF CYCLISTS."

I wonder whether this will strike the eye of a Moses, if not a Maecenas, who will help helpless New York cyclists to macadamize the deserts and quicksands of some of our New York city roads.

Probably in the by and by of cycling another such anomaly will not present itself as a member of the committee of a cyclists' federation, opposing one of the professional objects and wishes of the federation; though probably even then there will be some people who find delight in putting metaphorical pins in the universal arm-chair of humanity.

Probably then we will have an Armstrong, that is, a man of strong arm, of cheery heart and silver tongue, to advance the interests of cyclists, and who will then be sandwiched, as he is now, between haloes and dithyrambs.

Probably then there will be Potters who will fashion and mould laws, and design ways to overcome the machinations of law committees and the evil designs of railroad interests.

Probably in the by and by of cycling, sterling men and gentle will be found from Townsend to Frobischer's Straits, who will have the best interests of wheelmen and women at heart, and who will work unremittingly to accomplish desired ends.

Probably when that time has come all cyclists will ring a "merry bell," and proclaim the millennium of "happy days" at hand.

IN CASE of doubt, blame it on the bicycle. The disposition to make the bicycle bear all the ills of society is not confined to this land. Here's an evidence of it taken from a French paper:

"AN OLD MAN KILLED BY A CYCLIST."

"Yesterday morning . . . the corpse of an old man was found. . . . The body was brought to the hospital and examined by the doctors. . . . As the dead man bore on his left hand a long and deep wound it is supposed that he was killed by being run over by a bicycle!" Shades of Lecocq!

MAD MR. MURPHY.

"I think we know our business," said Director Murphy, of Alleghany, to a Pittsburgh Times reporter. In the same interview he confessed he did n't know his business by saying:

"If a cyclist is caught riding faster than an ordinary walk he will be arrested. Anywhere from four to six miles an hour is about the proper speed. I don't remember just now whether the ordinance reads four or six miles." Mr. Murphy takes an active part in arresting wheelmen whenever he gets a chance. If he "yanks" them for riding five miles an hour and the ordinance says four, he does wrong; and if it says six miles an hour, he does wrong when he does not arrest them for riding at a five-mile rate. It is easy to guess that Mr. Murphy does n't ride a wheel, and hence does n't know much about the thing he is trying to regulate. In refusing to let bicycles go where carriages have undisputed right in the parks, this Alleghany official labels himself so conspicuously that the fool-killer will have no trouble in finding him. And the Alleghany wheelmen, if they organize as they should, and no doubt will, can have no trouble in locating such law makers when the time for voting arrives.

STREET SPRINKLING.

So last night, when there was an attempt to prevent the slopping and ruining of our improved streets by the hair-brained hose-squirter, the council, after a great struggle, decided that it shall not be. We make people pay for improved streets, and then tax them to keep them in order, and then refuse to prevent people from making a nuisance of our improved streets, and, by formal action, as much as say that they shall puddle and slop the streets to their liking. It is an interference with the proper cleaning of the streets, particularly with asphalt streets. The wetting not only rots the pavement, but makes a paste of the dust which, when dried, can not be taken up by the sweeper, and so the contractors cannot make good their performance, can not, in other words, give us clean streets, because of this universal and improper wetting of the streets by the folk who top off the day by the entertainment of holding the lawn hose for an hour. To be sure they may give themselves rheumatism, but then the punishment does not fit the crime. We hope our council will be able in time to rally and stagger up to the situation, and so keep our streets as they ought to be kept. We need some metropolitan notions as well as metropolitan streets. What use is there in having blue china if we can not live up to it?—Indianapolis News.

PAUL REVERE, JR.'S RIDE.

BY NIXON WATERMAN.

(With apologies to Longfellow.)

Listen, my lovers, and you shall hear
Of the midnight ride of Paul Revere,
On May the thirtieth, Ninety-six;
Hardly a youth that is "up to tricks"
But will always remember the day and year.

He said to his Love, "If your father, still,
Refuses to grant our prayer, tonight,
At the hour of twelve, on your window sill,
You will place a lamp as a signal light,—
One, if you stay, and two, if we flee;
And I in the lane below will be,
Ready to ride to the parson, wise,
And win forever the gracious prize
Whose love shall be my Paradise."

Then he said "Good night!" for a little while,
His face lit up with a hopeful smile;
He gave no heed to the "pit-a-pat"
Of his heart, nor little things like that.
He watched the moon rise over the bay,
And the river that lazily went its way,
Bearing along a light canoe
In which there nestled a blissful two
So close you could scarce tell which was who.

Meanwhile, his friend, as a sweetheart should,
With a plea and prayer and a sigh and tear,
Was trying to win her father's ear.
But he would not listen to aught she said,
Though she strove by every means she could;
And she turned away, devoid of cheer,
To seek, as her father thought, her bed.

She climbed the stair to her moonlit room,
And hastily gathered the precious things,—
Some half forgotten engagement rings,
(There 's many a bud not born to bloom,
So strangely woven the woof of Fate!)
Some pins to fasten her hat on straight,
A few curl papers to crimp her hair,
And then she paused and waited there
From her shaded window looking down
On the roofs of the silent, sleeping town,
In the moonlight seeming doubly fair.

Meanwhile, impatient to know his fate,
Down in the lane by the garden gate
Back and forth went Paul Revere.
He tried his tandem with all his weight,
And tested the wheels, both front and rear.
He whirled the pedals swiftly round,
He saw that the frame was strong and sound,
But mostly he watched with anxious eye
That chamber window, dim and high,
Half hid behind the swaying trees,
That softly rocked with every breeze.
And lo! as he looks on the window's height
A glimmer, and then a gleam of light!
He clasps his saddle; again he turns,
And lingers and gazes, till full on his sight
A second lamp in the window burns.

A hurry of wheels in a village street,
Two shapes in the moonlight, a flash in the dark,
And beneath, from the pebbles, in passing, a spark*
Struck out by a wheel flying fearless and fleet:
That was all! and yet, through the gloom and the light,
The fate of two beings was riding that night;
And the spark struck out by that wheel, in its flight,
Kindled them both into flame with its heat.

* It is probable that this "spark" was of the parlor courtship variety, and was not caused by the rubber tire.

It was a long letter, but the above extract will show the sincere interest which the colored riders take in matters bicycular.

The following is sent us by a chief consul:

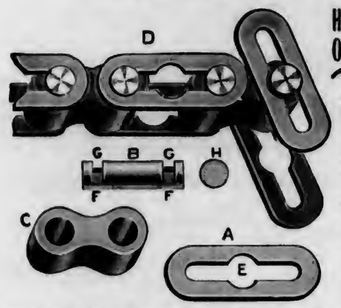
"THE HAND WRITING ON THE WALL."

The manager of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company has given orders to the chief draftsman to at once prepare drawings showing the best methods of storing bicycles in baggage rooms and baggage cars.

This is a very hopeful indication, and we feel sure that all railroads will at no distant day provide satisfactory means for storing wheels. When this is done the bicycle-as-baggage will not be the bugbear that it is to-day.

The front wheel encounters the "biffs" and the "bings,"
The bruises, the bumps and the hollows;
And the rear wheel encounters the very same things,
For it, of course, naturally follows.

"ALL flesh is grass," but with the deaf man it's "hey?"



"FOLLOW us and we 'll wear diamonds," said the front wheels to the rear ones.

LESS gravel and constant attention is very much needed now. One man with pick, shovel and hand cart would do more for our pikes now in one day than ten loads of fresh gravel. — Dayton (O.) Herald.

CAPTAINS OF CYCLING CLUBS, ATTENTION!!!

We will express you one o' the Baldwin Chains free on receipt of a list of the addresses of your club members; also state size wanted.

THE BALDWIN ADJUSTABLE CYCLE CHAIN

HAS THREE POINTS OF SUPERIORITY.

Strength and Durability. The pin is not headed as in other chains, but is a stud which is hardened equally with the block. This reduces the wear to a minimum, and adds to the strength of the chain. A season's hard use will lengthen it scarcely 1-4 of an inch.

Ease of Repair. If the Baldwin breaks on the road, any rider can repair it immediately with the tools ordinarily carried in the saddle bag.

Adjustableness to Wear. Anyone can adjust this chain to perfect pitch by a simple but effective method, after it has been lengthened by wear. This can be done with no other chain. By this process both chain and sprocket-wheels are preserved, friction is reduced, the chain will not run off the sprocket, and it will last as long as the wheel.

The studs cannot turn round nor work loose, and the chain does not weigh more than others. It fits any sprocket with the standard one-inch pitch.

We have 1-4 inch and 3-16 inch in stock. Local agents wanted everywhere.

Dear Sir: — When I was charged with having faked a race or races last August, I made the statement that those charges were concocted by you, inspired by your hatred of me.

THE BICYCLE AND THE TRAVELING MAN.

Have the traveling men of this country ever thought of the possibilities of the bicycle in connection with their business? We presume some of them have, but have dismissed the idea of using it as a means of locomotion in getting over their territories. The idea is worthy of their serious consideration.

This is the age of wheels, truly, and while some of the "boys" may think we have "wheels" to suggest their using the bicycle instead of the railway train to cover their routes, yet, we assure them, that we are in "dead square" earnest in the matter. The bicycle is already being used by a number of traveling men in Minnesota, and the thing is practicable and feasible in any prairie State like Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Nebraska or Texas. A large number of traveling salesmen carry no samples. The majority of them carry samples that are easily handled and light enough to strap to a bicycle along with their small grip. To the man who makes thirty-day trips in a small territory, covering small towns close together, like a grocery salesman, the bicycle presents the easiest, quickest and cheapest method of travel. The man who is compelled to carry a sample trunk can send his trunks ahead of him on a local freight train, have them reach his town as soon as he does and save many dollars on excess baggage.

Right here is where the commercial traveler's interest in the Good Roads movement asserts itself.

Address, CYCLE SUNDRY CO.,

Indianapolis, Ind.

The traveling men of the country cannot urge on the good work of securing Good Roads in this country too earnestly. It is directly to their interest to do so. It means many more dollars in the pockets of the country merchant, and that means heavier sales for the commercial travelers. It also means that it will make it possible for them to use the bicycle instead of the railroad in every State in the Union.

Just now the traveling men of the country are asking a reasonable concession from the railroads in the shape of a 5,000-mile interchangeable mileage book. The chances are they will not get it until the roads are compelled by law to issue such ticket. A general movement on the part of the traveling men of the country towards the adoption of the bicycle, and the freight train for baggage, would bring the railroads to a realization of the fact that a very large percentage of their passenger revenues come from the traveling men. This sort of a movement will assure concessions from the railroads quicker than all the logical arguments that can be used with them. Railroads are only controlled by two things — cowardice and cupidity. They fear legislation and can't stand a loss of patronage without squealing. An universal adoption of the bicycle in all territories of traveling men where it can be used will cause a howl to go up from railroads that will reverberate from Tadmor in the wilderness to Yuba Dam.

Think it over and let us hear from you. — The American Commercial Traveler.

NO ONE has the right, in any manner, to mark or placard trees, bridges, fences, rocks or anything else, the property of others, without first obtaining the consent of the owner. It has come to pass that in the streets of this village, glaring signs face the visitor from every pole along the way; and throughout the county generally, the traveler who has perhaps come far to visit the Berkshire Hills, famous for their charming drives and views, turns his eyes from advertisements of medicines for spavined horses, to have them rest upon advertisements for poor, ailing humanity. Enterprising methods of advertising are many times all right, but when these methods are in violation of the laws of the Commonwealth and in disloyalty to the rights of the people, it is full time we should call a halt. — Great Barrington (Mass.) Courier.

WAGON repairers grow beautifully less cheerful as the roads are improved.

AT a recent meeting of the Galveston (Texas) Good Roads League, it was decided to ask each wheelman to plant at least one tree along the roads, an arrangement to be made upon the plan in vogue in the public schools on Arbor Day. It was decided to push this matter at a subsequent meeting.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A VETERAN.

BY THE LATE HENRY BENTLEY.*

First Paper.

It does n't seem so, but it must be fifteen years since Wickland, Perrigrew, Dr. Brush and myself were sitting on the porch of one of the hotels at Oak Bluffs, where, suddenly, there swept around the corner two or three young fellows on "wheels," from which they sprang lightly, and leaning them against the steps they walked briskly by in their new breeches and disappeared in the hotel.

We all stepped down and examined this new and rather strange means of locomotion, and after reseating ourselves the Doctor said in a quiet way, "That's how I intend to come out and visit you some day when you least expect it, Fred." Then we all laughed loudly, for the Doctor lived seven miles from me and the road was both rough and tough.

Good Roads had not then done any missionary work, and to the one lonely wheelman of that day it might be truly said, "his way was hard." Now the idea of a rather short, thick-set man of about forty-five years of age and not naturally spry and athletic, ever riding one of those "things" seven miles over one of the meanest corkscrew roads seemed so ridiculous to the rest of us, that for some days we laughed freely and merrily at the Doctor.

We tried to cheer him on, however, and among the encouraging reasons given him were, that if he took a "header," his neck was so short it would not be likely to get broken; he was short and thick, he would not need more than a 50-inch, and if he did tumble his adipose tissue would largely favor a gentle reception by mother earth.

Our little holiday passed, and one would have supposed was forgotten, as no allusion was ever made to it by any of the party, all of whom were similarly employed, and generally met daily at lunch hour, or about that time. It came to pass, however, after some weeks, our friend Perrigrew was no longer regular in his visit to our corner, and the Doctor also appeared to have business which called him away at irregular periods, but generally late in the afternoon.

Now I do not claim to be as innocent as a lamb, nor so guileless that I never look for a little insiduous artifice in my fellows, so, one afternoon as I was looking out of my window, I saw Perrigrew coming down the street on the opposite side and meeting the Doctor away they went up the street. At this hour of the day we were wont to meet and take a little lunch, or a smoke; but for a while past the "charm" seemed to have been broken, and Perrigrew and the Doctor no longer lent their wit and wisdom to the common fold. When those two cronies departed up the street, a strange feeling came over me, and a vague remembrance of the Doctor's saying at Oak Bluffs that he intended to ride one those "things" to my house at no distant period to see me. Great Cæsar and all the Popes! Would it be possible that those two old chums were going to fool my dear friend Wickland and myself, too?

*Mr. Bentley, whose death occurred at his home in Philadelphia last year, was one of the first prominent, substantial citizens to take up bicycle riding. He was one of Philadelphia's best-known and most highly respected merchants. The several articles regarding his experiences on the bicycle, when wheel-riding was a new thing, were prepared for the editor of the L. A. W. BULLETIN a short time before Mr. Bentley's death, and were recently found among his papers.

The more I thought about the Doctor learning to mount and also ride that neck-breaking looking machine, and the strange absence of himself and Perrigrew from day to day, at such times as they were usually accessible, it caused me to take a look in some of the daily papers, in order to see if there might not be some place where one might take a few lessons in this new art. Yes, there it was.

"Young men will be taught how to ride the bicycle. Something new and captivating. Bicycles furnished on which to learn, and terms reasonable. Apply to John Brix, fourth floor of the old tobacco warehouse, Third and Wood streets."

I quickly made up my mind that Mr. Brix should see me before eight o'clock the following morning, because it was quite unlikely from the nature of their duties that my friends would be around there at that early hour. So about 7 A. M., I began pounding on the outside door of the rear stairway leading to the upper floor, from a window of which fluttered a pasteboard sign, indicating that Brix was ready for business. No person was visible about the place, all the doors seemed to be locked, and it looked as if the whole building was tenantless. Directly, however, a window sash was shoved up quietly, and a head projected in a curious and inquiring way, as if in wonder what was going on down-stairs at that early hour. His hair stood out as if he had hastily turned out of his bunk after an alarm of fire.

"I say old man are you the gymnast and acrobat who teaches your brother how to acquire the necessary agility to climb on top of one of these new things called 'bicycles,' and stay there a little while and then get off again without breaking one's bones?" said I.

"Hold on a minute," said Brix, for this was the "professor" himself, and sure enough the old door swung open and there he was before me, barefooted, and with thin, blue overalls and shirt only covering his lank and bony frame. If any person has ever imagined how Abe Lincoln must have looked when he was a "rail splitter" this would fit Brix to a certainty. "Excuse me a moment," said he, as we reached the top of the stairs. "I sleep up here where I am handy to my business, and as it's a new kind of a thing, a fellow has to pull himself together pretty close to pay rent and keep the wrinkles out of his jacket."

Now my idea was to find out, quietly, and without exciting comment, whether Perrigrew and the Doctor were enrolled on his list as "learners," so I said, "Professor, do you think a man of my age, say about forty-eight years, whose weight is two hundred and seven, could learn to ride one of these things, and not run too great a risk of getting badly injured?"

"Why," replied his lanky highness, "you ain't no forty-eight be you, for sure? Well, I'll bet you ain't any hummin' bird, if legs is anything to go by. You've been brought up on stronger feed than honeysuckle or morning glory juice. Why my grandmother is seventy-five years old, and I'll bet you ten free lessons on one of these wheels that I can teach her to ride one of 'em in a week. Now you see it makes a lot of difference whether any one's got a taste for a thing or not, as to how fast they are going to get along in it. Grammy always was one of the kind o' people who always see ahead in whatever they undertake and never give in.

"There's my mother, now, while she ain't more 'en fifty-five, I would n't undertake to break her in, for she's too slow and would n't take any chances. Now, my friend, if I can't teach you to 'mount' and dismount and ride gracefully in ten lessons there's to be no charge; and I'll give you a 'starter,' free right now!"

Before commencing this desperate business, I must first know whether my friends Perrigrew and the Doctor were on Brix's list of students, and if so, at what hour they came for their lessons, as it would never do to be caught by them. Professor Brix must also be posted as to my possible adventure. Professor, said I, how many have you now whose names are on your list? Promptly, out of his little desk came a small journal and, opening it, he said, "here they are, four of 'em," and to my surprise, but delight, two of those were my friends whom I had suspected.

This settled it and down went my name, a fictitious one and badly written, together with a false address, for I feared my friends might see the book and so be informed that I was there also, even though I managed to avoid meeting them there. And here another spectre arose before me. Suppose I were to take a "header" and break my neck or fracture my skull? What would the professor do with me and where would my loving wife look for me if I came not at the usual dinner hour? This was horrible to think of, and I could not try even to make a "mount" before I took the professor aside and told him the whole story and what I wished to do, viz.: to have him give me lessons unbeknown to my friends, and at such times as they would positively be absent, and that he would take extra pains with me, and that I would make it all right with him. The thing was settled on the spot and my correct name given to him on an extra slip of paper in case my friends should get sight of the list of learners. And now the fun began for me, in that old tobacco warehouse with its low ceiling and many supporting timbers, standing always in my way as I attempted to "mount," and into which my old, rickety "wheel" was bound to plunge at every turn, and skin my knuckles or shins and sometimes both.

To keep my wheel on the outside of those supporting timbers (some ten or twelve in number), while making or rather trying to make the circuit of that old warehouse floor, was fully equal if not worse than an average trip across the English Channel in the winter. To that legion of riders whose experience extendeth not to the ancient Bone Shakers the constant tendency of which was to "shut up" on its rider and pinch him into two P's, Pain and Profanity, or even to the more modern type, antedating the present "Safeties," the large wheel, from fifty to sixty inches in diameter, let me say, that it was no trifle for a "plug" of forty-five or more years and weighing two hundred and seven pounds to pitch head formost off a fifty-two inch wheel and land on an old, knotty floor, seasoned for fifty or sixty years, or in a vain effort to save ones self from "groveling" to pitch into one of the old floor posts and slide down it ungracefully, with a skinned shin and a sliver or two in one's hands.

The rickety wheel or two which were the sole possession of Professor Brix, and the skill exercised by our patient and never tiring instructor, was a great incitive toward proficiency in riding, no matter if a thundering crash upon that undulating and knotty floor caused him to fly to the rescue of the unfortunate rider and also to gather up a "buckled" or otherwise disorganized wheel. My sole companion in this "school," fortunately, was a drug clerk of slim and delicate proportions, and whose avordupois was about half that of mine and his years still less, but he was very kind and thoughtful for he always had a supply of liniment, court plaster, bandages, etc., which, if I mistake not, he made use of for himself, fully as much, and I think more than he kindly furnished me with for my bruised and skinned body, legs and arms. Days wore on and the professor informed me that I was doing "superb" and much better than my two friends who came daily in the afternoons. This I kindly took as a little "taffy" from Brix, but I made up my mind that if the Doctor and Perrigrew, or either of them, ever rode out to see me that I would be prepared to ride along side of them back home again.

Days went by and my improvement was so satisfactory that the professor thought I ought to happen in on them some day unexpectedly, or in some other way delicately inform my two friends that I also was an aspiring wheelman, as my riding was fully as good as theirs and thus we could have the advantage of "giving each other a lift." So I informed Professor Brix that I would take occasion to quietly inform my two friends that I suspected they were taking lessons, and if they acknowledged it and brought me to his bicycling laboratory to take some lessons also, he must not know me at all and take great pains to induce me to learn also. The scheme worked finely and my two friends owned up that they were already riding well enough "to go on the road." At this information I was apparently startled and at once agreed to join them and go to see how the thing was done. The professor was introduced to me and duly "went through the motions." He assured us all that I would be successful from the first and he would give me a "starter" right there and then, which he did, and after making several desperate plunges among those too familiar posts, I finally straightened up and went around the old warehouse floor several times very steadily and jumping off said "Well, boys, if this is all there is of learning to ride a bicycle, I don't think I'll need any further instructions and I am going to get one right away!" The boys saw the joke instantly and then we all had a good laugh and have laughed at it many and many a time in the years that have passed since then, although I am the only one of the trio who has for fifteen years past clung to the handle bars of many kinds of wheels and still continue to do so. Several friends joined us, and for several years the pleasure, healthful exercise and jolly good times we had, have, alas! never, since our gradual disintegration, been equalled by any other single or combination of pleasures.

TRADE NOTES

Every subscriber to Good Roads should read carefully the ad on page 796. The Hatch Patch for Punctured Tires, a new and important invention: there is merit in them.

GOOD ROADS
A Monthly Magazine devoted to the Improvement of the Public Roads and Streets

BILLIONS IN IT.

NO DOUBT there may yet be mossy-minded persons who fancy that the Good Roads movement is largely a matter of sentiment born of impractical theories.

There are others who think that the agitation for improved highways is being done for no broader purpose than to please bicyclists, who were the first to see the necessity for better roads and the far-reaching benefits that would accrue therefrom.

The leaders of this, the most important industrial question before the nation to-day, are working to educate the masses up to a higher, broader standard of viewing the subject.

The Good Roads movement is based on the most substantial of practical business reasons. Cou'd anything be more convincing than the following facts furnished by Arthur Kirk of Pennsylvania, appointed by the engineers' society six years ago to act on a committee to prepare a better road law.

Referring to his inquiry to ascertain what the road law of Pennsylvania now is, he said: "I was surprised to find that 'Hooten's directory of the laws of Pennsylvania shows that previous to 1872 there had been 705 special laws enacted relating to common roads in Pennsylvania, while the titles of acts relating to plank roads and turnpike companies fill 78 pages in Beitel's digest of special laws containing only titles to 2,865 special laws relating to plank roads and turnpike companies; 780 laws relating to toll bridges, and 264 laws relating to ferries, making a total of 4,614 special laws relating to public highways and authorizing the collection of money for their use." He continued:

"For instance, I mention as a sample of these laws, Allegheny county had 31, Bradford county 37, Butler county 13, Chester county 53, Potter county 40, etc.

"A prominent objection to my proposed road law is tnat it will cost so much to pay high salaries to so many high-priced engineers, and other expenses. Let me call your attention to the cost of the present system. Of course, each of the 4,164 laws would have to be drawn up by a lawyer and would cost anywhere from $5 to $100; then a lobbyist would have to be hired to secure the passage of each Act, and the time of the Legislature in passing each law. I think we may count that each of the above laws cost the State not less than $200. This will amount to $922,800. To this we may add $1,000,000 as the cost of road laws since 1874, and call the mere enactment of laws in the State relating to roads a cost of $2,000,000.

"Then think of the untold sums of money that must have been paid to 2,865 plank road and turnpike companies and 780 toll bridges and ferries as toll to these chartered companies scattered all over the State and authorized to collect money for their use. This expenditure of money has been going on for years; an average of at least 50 years, and I think we are safe to estimate this loss at $1,000,000, making $50.000,000.

"Then we must take account of money levied as road taxes in every township in the State, of which there is no published record; but many men well acquainted with the subject have assured me that it amounts to between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 every year. Estimating it at $4,000,000 per annum for 50 years we have $200,000,000 that the present road system management has cost.

"Two hundred millions in worked out taxes, $50,000,000 paid plank roads, etc.; $2,000,000 estimate of passing road laws, makes a total of $250,000,000 the cost of the present roads, as they now stand, the worst roads in any civilized country in the world that I know anything about."

This represents the loss of a single State. Multiply by the number of other States. Ask your doubting friends if the good roads movement really means anything worth while.

THE Garfield (Washington) Enterprise says that Craig mountain, on the Nez Perces reservation, is ostensibly the most popular camping-out resort in the Northwest at present, if reports be true. A man who arrived from there a few days ago reports that there are one hundred and fifty wagons stuck in the mud on that mountain and that the owners are camped beside their vehicles, waiting for the mud to dry up. New teams arrive daily and attempt to get around the mud holes only to hang up in a new one. They are constantly coming, but seldom going.

KEEPING up the repairs at the proper level will continually shape the road bed, and one load of gravel will do the work of more than ten loads as heretofore dumped in the centre. The usual custom upon well-kept roads is the constant employment of one man with tools and wheel-barrow or hand cart, at $1.25 per day — calculating the working days possible in a year as 240 days — to every five miles of pike. — Dayton (O.) Herald.

Lookout!

Just now bear in mind that, wherever you go,
There's danger close lurking about;
For the trees are now rapidly shooting, you know,
And, besides that, the bull-rush is out.

F. R. PETERS, 4620 Morgan street, St. Louis, Mo., would be glad to receive aid in mapping out best wheel route to Cleveland, Ohio.

You, in your self-made glooms repining,
To brighter vistas turn your eyes.
You cannot see the stars a-shining
Unless you look toward the skies.

Once on a time the old men went
About with low bowed head,
But now the youths, on scorching bent,
Oh, they 're bowed down instead.

A SAFETY SEXTETTE.

"AS THE twig is bent, the tree's inclined." The public school teachers are to read to the children in their charge the ordinances in relation to throwing rubbish in the streets, and in general to impress upon them the importance of preventing the annoyances those ordinances are intended to check.

Before the season opens,
Chiropodists should go
Along the deeps and cure for keeps
That awful under tow.

THE wheelmen of Atlanta, Ga., have decided to begin a crusade in favor of better roads. The movement is backed by many leading citizens.

WITH the single exception of the venerable pastor of the First Baptist church, every one of Plainfield's (N. J.) twenty ministers is a wheelman.

THE New York State Circuit Race Meet at Saratoga Springs, June 23, will be one of the great bicycle events of the year.

He knew her beauty was "put on"
When first he saw, alack!
In his despair, her golden hair
A-hanging down the back
Of a chair.

THE Los Angeles Investor shows that Los Angeles tax payers have furnished $496,000 for roads in six years, and yet there is scarcely a decent stretch of permanent road in the county.

AND good sidewalks are worth having, too.

QUERIES AND ANSWERS

J. T. Whitcomb:—Address your State division secretary-treasurer for information pertaining to your State maps and road books.

DR. BELLE ESKRIDGE, Chicago:—Do your gentlemen friends wear high hats while seated at the play? If not, why not?

REUBEN:—Riding fast on a country road is not, necessarily, "scorching." A steamer in mid-ocean can run at the top of her speed, but she ought to slow up in the harbor.

M. S. S., Pittsfield, Mass.:—The length of crank gives additional leverage in exact proportion as it is increased. In the case cited the machine having the 8-inch crank would propel the easier.

J. M. P., Alabama:—The question of whether a heavy rider has any advantage over a lighter one in coasting may never be definitely settled, so many conditions enter into the calculation. We have seen many cases where the lighter man made the longer distance.

CORRESPONDENCE

HOW TO PRONOUNCE IT.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

As to pronunciation: "cycle" alone is "sigh-cle" in the mouth of everyone, learned or ignorant; "cycloid," "epicycle" and a large number of other terms all have the syllable in question, pronounced "sigh," and there is no reason for the other pronunciation being allowed, save that the editors of late dictionaries, finding the word a new one, generally pronounced bisickle, have admitted it to the dictionary with the popular pronunciation.

No. 80,913.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

The word cycle comes from the Greek word "kyklos," which signifies a circle in space. Thus Homer speaks of a circle that hunters draw around their game (Od. IV, 792), and also uses the word to denote the rim of a round shield (Il. XI, 33). Herodotus uses "kyklos" in speaking of the moon's disk (VI, 106).

The word "circle" does not come from the Greek at all, but from the Latin "circulus," which is the same as the Greek "kyklos" and our English "circle." Cicero in his book De Natura Deorum, says: "Circulus aut orbis qui Kyklos graece dicitur (N. D. II, 18, 47), "a circle or art which in Greek is called 'kyklos.'"

Already Homer employs the word "kyklos" as signifying "wheel" (Il. XXIII, 340, and Il. V., 722). This is the only correct derivation of our word "cycle." The prefix "bi" comes from the Latin "bis."

L. A. W. 77,739.

AN ENGLISH EXPERIENCE.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

A recent experience in regard to English ideas of bicycles may be of some interest to L. A. W. readers.

I took my own wheel with me. It was carefully wrapped, but put in an open crate. As we were landing a wild steer broke loose, dashed in among us, and knocked over the crate containing my bicycle. On opening the crate I found that the creature must have trodden upon the valve of the front wheel, which valve, acting on a lever, had split the rim completely through. On taking it to be repaired I found that wood rims are quite unknown in England, metal ones only being used. The only thing I could do was to have a new wheel with a metal rim substituted for the original one.

Just before leaving America I had had my wheel re-tired, and, by a mistake, single tubes were put on instead of the double ones which I had ordered. There was no time to rectify the mistake before leaving, and every one said: "You can easily have it done in England. Rubber and labor are both so cheap there, that it will cost you very little." Rubber may be, and labor is cheap, but "tyres" (as they spell the word here) are not. The price for any make is from eighteen to twenty dollars, exclusive of the expense of putting on. Moreover I have yet to find a man who considers it possible to put a double tube "tyre" upon a wooden rim. With one accord they all declare that no wood rim will stand the strain. In vain I have represented that in the United States every one rides wood rims, and that fully half of the cyclists use double tube tires. Neither fact nor argument will convince an Englishman who does not wish to be convinced, and I find that I must either ride a single tube during my stay, or make up my mind to have a metal rim substituted for the wood rim on my hind wheel.

I see that a company has been started to introduce wood rims in England. Englishmen being nothing if not pig-headed, I would not give much for the company's chance of success.

While my wheel was undergoing repairs, I hired another wheel at fifteen shillings per week. It weighed thirty-five pounds, but was really not bad, running easily and being a good hill climber. But all the English wheels are clumsy in appearance, as are most other English things.

WHAT! LESS THAN A PAGE?

A correspondent takes the pains to clip from our May 1st issue all the reading matter which did not relate to cycling and "it makes nearly a page." He says: "What the average League member wants to know is, how is Johnson getting along in Europe, and also, what is the relative position of the principal riders as to winnings."

We cheerfully admit that there must be a number of L. A. W. members who would like to have the L. A. W. BULLETIN space filled with that sort of news, but the man who has to meet the large, cold, clammy facts connected with the practical getting out of the paper says that such a course would ruin him in six months.

There are a large number of papers devoted to racing news, and we have not lately heard of any of them refusing subscribers.

Any subscriber to the L. A. W. BULLETIN who for that reason or any other, is dissatisfied, may have his money refunded on demand. We are not only willing but anxious to do this in any case where the paper fails to satisfy a given yearning.

We realize that tastes differ and are glad they do, for if everybody thought as much of the L. A. W. BULLETIN as its intrinsic merit would warrant, we would have to sit up every night instead of every other night as at present.

We know that there must be thousands of families into which this paper comes as a ray of joyous hope, and where its absence means sour biscuit.

Should we rob all of these of their weekly "jag of joy?" No! a thousand times, no! It is better that the racing man try to remember what happened to him rather than inflict it on countless readers who pine for a different sort of intellectual nourishment.

A SOFT SNAP.

Old Dan'l Horner lives on a corner
Of roads that teamsters all dread,
And when stuck in the mire, they often require,
Old Dan'l's horse hitched on ahead.

It pays him so well, we are sorry to tell,
That he lives without working his place.
It 's a good thing for Dan'l, but yet there 's no man 'll
Dare say it is not a disgrace.

WHY PROFANE?

We almost wish we might truthfully deny having received a letter from a lady, residing on a fashionable boulevard in New York City, in which she charges the many wheelmen who pass her home with uttering divers and distressing profane words. But candor compels us to admit we have such a letter in which is the query, "What is there about wheeling that is so conducive to profanity?"

We do not believe there is anything. A man who swears while on a wheel would do so in a carriage or a smoking car. It is the person and not the wheel that is to blame.

It may be true that there is a period in the early experiences of every bicyclist when the wheel itself may be held in a measure responsible for the utterance of hot, hasty words, spoken without due deliberation. These words usually closely follow certain impromptu and wholly unpremeditated movements, seemingly instituted for the purpose of finally determining which shall be the rider and which the ridee.

A man must be perfectly self-possessed to pass through the early vicissitudes of bicycling without saying something that would look perfectly absurd on his tombstone.

Any man who can grovel in three inches of dust and gravel in a desperate hand-to-hand combat with a viscious, untamed bicycle, which persists in kicking him in the short ribs long after it has him down, and not say something vigorous as soon as he gets his throat clear enough to speak, is a real hero. A woman who retains her composure under the same circumstances is a heroine.

Job was accounted a right patient man in his time and neighborhood, but we should bear in mind the fact that there were no bicycles in his day. Had he ever tried to master a wheel we fear his reputation as a man of unlimited patience would have been knocked into smithereens. Let no man boast of his strength of will power unless he has learned to ride a wheel without giving voice to those words which we cannot reproduce in print, for obvious reasons.

Clipper Prices.

If the pleasure of saying that your bicycle "cost $100" is worth that much, you may be right in paying the money; but if you want a bicycle for practical business use, there is no reason in the world why you should pay more than the price asked for Clipper No. 24 or Model B. The Clipper is sold at the lowest price at which it is possible to sell a thoroughly good bicycle. Those who go below our prices are almost sure to get undesirable quality. There is a quality point below which it is unsafe to go, even in bicycles. What looks like economy is sometimes the worst of extravagance. If you want the highest quality, the finest finish, the latest fads, the most expensive construction, the truest bearings, and the most costly equipment possible to embody in a bicycle, and are willing to pay the price, you will invest the difference and take the Clipper Light Roadster. If you want a wheel for every-day, knock-about use, one less expensively finished, and with no expensive fads, invest in a Business Clipper.

AMERICA "TRUSS"

America Cycle Mfg. Co.

73-75-77 FULTON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Under certain circumstances, and especially if it be in the gloaming, when the many forms on the neighboring stoops are almost imperceptible, one is prone to give audible voice to those thoughts which he will subsequently have to live down or else change his place of abode to some part of the country where he can begin life anew. This change of location should not be made until the wheel is thoroughly mastered.

The letter above referred to is not the first intimation we have received relative to this disposition on the part of wheelmen, and we almost blush to add, wheelwomen, to say those words which it were better to forever leave unsaid.

We have it on pretty good authority that a deacon in Philadelphia called his wheel a "dad-gasted contraption of the Evil One," while one of Chicago's bloomered belles called her wheel a — * * ! ! — * ! ? — — — * ! ! Even in Boston, where improper language is considered by many to be almost a capital offence, a Back Bay beauty, on falling from her wheel for the thirty-ninth time, said to it, "You are indeed an unfelicitous invention and I opine my happiness would not be perceptibly impaired were you eliminated from the universe."

This goes to show that a person will say those things on the spur of the moment, when he or she thinks he or she is alone, that would not be said at another time or place.

Just why it isn't fully as satisfactory to think these things in the asbestos-lined halls of thought as it is to utter them and have them float away in every direction like discarded angel cake cast upon the waters, to return after many days and finally have to be eaten, we cannot say; but such, we believe, is generally admitted to be the case. We regret that many things are as they are. It is really no fault of ours.

We are at a loss to know why wheelmen, in passing the home of this lady who writes to us from New York, should be profane. We do not know why they should be so foolish as to encumber their vocabulary with worse than useless words at any time. The gift of speech is for the minting of those coins of sound with which to buy the good and gracious thoughts of our fellow beings, and to impart to the . the impressions held in the treasury of the mind.

Every profane wheelman discredits the intelligence of all the others. We believe there is no good reason why a wheelman cannot be a gentleman. In fact the wheel is believed to be an uplifting force.

To be a gentleman is even greater than to be a wheelman.

That the horseless carriage has come to stay

CHAINS AND SPROCKETS.

An Iowa correspondent says: "A customer leaving a wheel for repairs, wanted the chain and sprocket marked so that the same link of chain would be put back on the same tooth or sprocket wheel. Do you think this is necessary, and does it contribute anything to the ease of running of the wheel?" Our correspondent further says that he "found the sprocket revolved fifty times before the same tooth and link again came in contact."

This is one of those cases where the customer was uninformed as to the mechanical facts. The only case in which the same tooth and link could co-operate even occasionally, would be where the number of teeth in the sprocket wheel was an exact divisor of the number of links in the chain.

In the case mentioned there were probably fifty links in the chain, and it was necessary for every one of these to come consecutively in contact with a given tooth of the sprocket. A similar condition of things would be found in the majority of cases.

We do not consider it an advantage in any event for gear teeth of any kind to continuously co-operate if it can be avoided.

In making heavy mill gearing it is customary to avoid such co-operation by the insertion of what is called a "hunting tooth;" that is, an extra tooth in one of the wheels so that every tooth will in turn come in contact with every tooth on the other or co-operating wheel. The object of this is to avoid the undue wear caused by two parts which might be soft or defective. The rule holds good in the case of sprockets and chains, and we do not believe it an advantage to have the same tooth and link come in contact oftener than is absolutely necessary.

The horseless carriage may be a winner.
We hope that it will, of course;
But the surest thing for the average beginner,
Would be a carriageless horse.

WHETHER a thing pleases or distresses us depends on our opinion of it. And by the bye our opinion may be faulty.

When you meet anybody, turn out to your right. When you overtake anybody turn out to your left if you intend to pass them. This is the rule for all vehicles in this country.

IN COMMENTING on the statement that there are a large number of people who would like to ride the bicycle, if the average bicycle rider appeared to a little better advantage, a Buffalo wheelman says: "It seems to me either that such people are not sincere in their desire to ride the bicycle, or that they are beset with false pride. If the average appearance of the wheeling public is to be raised, it must be largely through the presence and example of dignified riders. People who abstain from the pleasures of cycling simply because certain other people make a grotesque appearance on wheels, benefit nobody, and least of all themselves."

A CHEST PROTECTOR FOR HORSES.

The accompanying cut illustrates a bib or breast apron for horses, which has proven a very successful advertising devise for the L. A. W. Its chief merit is its appropriateness.

The idea was suggested by Mr. Potter, of New York, and has been put into shape at the L. A. W. BULLETIN office. We have had a number of orders for them already from State divisions, where they will be used on horses whose work keeps them in the more populous centres.

We have an arrangement for the manufacture of them which enables us to send them at the low price of fifteen cents each. Single samples will be sent by mail, postage paid, on receipt of price. This is made of thin cotton duck, and serves the humane purpose of keeping the flies off the horse's breast, a point, by the way, at which it is difficult for the horse to defend himself even when not "checked" very high.

In winter they will be made with a thick lining and used as a protection against wind and cold.

The horse has always wanted Good Roads, and now the L. A. W. enables him to say so.

A JAG OF JOY.

JOHN W. KELLETTE.

"Oh!" said the happy wheelman, "how nice it is to feel,
The gentle breeze of balmy spring on a $100 wheel.
To see how we 're progressing, as members of the League,
To ride a hundred miles or so, and then show no fatigue.

"From the L. A. W. BULLETIN, suggestions rich we reap,
And knowledge which we gain from it is always sure to keep,
So pay your dollar like a man, and then you 're sure to feel,
That you 're a full-fledged member; so push the work with zeal."

BICYCLES AND GOLD FILLINGS.

The convention of Dunkards, recently held at Covington, O., declared against bicycles and gold filled teeth. The bicycle question was given considerable time. The first query, "Is it advisable to own and use a bicycle," was decided in the negative, upon references drawn from Scriptural passages in Luke xv., 16, and Romans xii., 2. The first quotation is as follows: "And he said unto them, ye are they which justify yourselves before men, but God knoweth your hearts; for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God." The syllogism is stated as follows: "That which is esteemed among men is abomination; the bicycle is esteemed among men; therefore the bicycle is an abomination." The other query, "Is it right to have the teeth filled with gold?" gave rise to a very interesting discussion, which terminated with the decision that gold as a matter of adornment in teeth should be eschewed, notwithstanding the argument of a member that it mattered not so much what went into the mouth as what cometh out. No Scripture was quoted in this argumentation.

WAITING FOR THE MILKMAN.

"Once upon a time," a new housewife who had gained her knowledge of things at a cooking school said to her happy husband, "Oh, Algie! You know that milkman who sold us such lovely milk the other day? Well, he called again to-day and I bought ten gallons of it; enough to last us a month! Wasn't I thoughtful?"

It is possible some of the residents of Augusta, Me., buy milk in the same way. The illustration published herewith would indicate that with such roads it must be impossible for the milk wagon to get around oftener than once in a while, even though it be managed by "Rush" Bros. Our correspondent says:

I blush to say that this picture was taken in this city of Augusta and within a radius of three blocks of our State Capitol, and but five blocks from the business heart of the city. We have miles of asphalt, brick and wood paving, but the side streets, for economical reasons, are yet mud holes. I have one of them to cross every day, within one hundred feet of my home, that I think will be a principal witness against me, when the charge — Profanity — is called up at judgment.

We have had a municipal election lately, and the City Fathers were interviewed before it took place, and they are very polite and anxious as to our good health.

I hope to see the mud holes eliminated, and the L. A. W. and Good Roads in possession of the land.

LISTS WILL CLOSE ON SATURDAY.

Mr. Wilbur F. Wakeman, general secretary of the A. P. T. League, of New York, requests all New York wheelmen who are interested to use their influence by letter and otherwise to the end that Seventh avenue may be asphalted from Central Park to the Battery.

A RUBBER TIRE ORGANIZATION.

Col. Dodge recently entertained in New York a number of gentlemen who are interested in the manufacture of rubber tires, at which meeting steps were taken to form a permanent organization "so that tire manufacturers may come together with a full knowledge of what is wise for the interests of all concerned."

It is said, however, that nothing was done toward the formation of a trust or anything resembling a trust.

NOTES ON PHOTOGRAPHING.

BY C. D. CHENEY.

Observations of the good (and bad) roads illustrations appearing in the BULLETIN, prompts me to make the following remarks which may be apropos, and I assure you are not intended as criticisms.

If these views were made for the sole purpose of illustration, and the subjects were previously studied to obtain the best results for the purpose, the illustrations would be far better and more "telling."

Allowances must be made for the lack among amateurs of lenses suited to the work. Most of their lenses being of short focus to suit the requirements of average amateur work, whereas, for illustrating, lenses of ten inches focus for 6½x8½ plate as the minimum up to fifteen, give better detail and proportion.

Then, to begin, do not try to include a view of the surrounding scenery, houses, road, fences, etc.

If you are going to photograph the old oaken bucket, do that, and leave "the deep tangled wildwood" and the "mill that stood by it" for other views.

One mud-loaded and be-mired wheel of the wagon as the centre figure will carry the beholder to the spot in imagination quicker than the whole wagon full of self-conscious patients posed for the occasion.

If the contributor will take the trouble and the time to make a study of a characteristic scene, many points will suggest themselves in the way of natural arrangement and poses, and any amateur with some originality in the soul, can produce catching and yet truthful road views.

At the season when "the roads are bad," the light is not likely to be the best for photographing them, but it may be suggested that "dull" days be not chosen if any choice can be had. If no choice remains but a gray day, then the hour when the view is taken is of less importance, but in a bright day with the sun shining, much greater effect can be obtained by choosing a time when the light falls very obliquely across the wheel tracks and ruts, — say early forenoon and late afternoon, governed somewhat by the lay of the land. When gunning for bad roads views do not think of landscape; too much in the picture diverts the attention from the real object. Avoid over-exposure. No. 64,365.

To serve the Devil in."

Now it is beginning to look as though they would steal the Devil's livery rig to ride to Heaven in.

An item is going the rounds to the effect that, instead of preaching against the wheel, a Plainfield, N. J., minister has arranged for a congregational bicycle run for Saturday afternoon. Half the men in his congregation and many of the women ride bicycles.

A church "social" on wheels has a cheerful sound about it. It won't be so convenient for whispering the latest gossip, nor for playing an innocent game of Copenhagen; but an ever-changing panorama of hill and dale, field and forest, and the open sky will make up for such loss. Further discussion of how "perfectly horrid" Sister So-and-So wears her hair, and how many times she has re-trimmed her hat, may have to be dropped entirely for a study of the manifold beauties of nature. Such important issues as whether there are sixteen or seventeen strings on a full-grown celestial harp may be forgotten under the preaching of the great teacher, the Universe.

It really seems as though the church social on wheels has come to fill a long felt want.

But, mind you, there are still other possibilities in the field of religion for the sacred safety bicycle, which only a year or two ago was thought by some to possess a cloven hoof or a cloven tire, or something of that sort.

To THE many uses of the bicycle is to be added still another, as outlined by the St. Louis Republic. It now appears that it is to be brought into play in saving souls, for Rev. Frank G. Tyrrell, pastor of the Central Christian Church, Grand and Finney avenues, and four zealous young members of the congregation, who, like Dr. Tyrrell himself, are bicycle riders, are making arrangements to take a trip on their wheels and hold religious services in the small towns through which they may pass.

The exact route and the details of the trip are not yet settled, but according to present arrangements, the party will consist of Dr. Tyrrell, Arthur Garrison, H. S. Reavis, Thomas Murphy and John W. Austin. They propose to leave about June 15, go first to St. Charles, Mo., and from there make a tour of the State, returning to St. Louis early in July.

The riders will be as lightly equipped as possible. With a few extra articles of clothing, a song book and a bible strapped to each machine, these nineteenth century evangelists will wheel their way from village to village. A song service will be held here, and a prayer meeting there. Doubtless the newness of the manner in which it is proposed to travel will attract the attention of men who have not been inside a church for years.

While Dr. Tyrrell believes the plan a good one, he has felt some hesitancy in undertaking it for fear that some would not look at the work in the right light. He is now in Des Moines, Ia., delivering lectures, and the details of the trip will not be settled until his return.

When Mr. Reavis, one of the originators of the idea, was seen last night he said: "Unless something unforeseen happens, I believe the trip will be made. We shall all get a vacation about June 15, and we think we can spend it in no more pleasant and useful way. We shall not attempt to camp out, but shall pass each night in some village or farm house. I am sure Dr. Tyrrell does not wish to draw any attention to himself or create any sensation. If the matter is looked at from a reasonable and practical standpoint, I think it is plain that the idea is an excellent one. We have been thinking over the matter for some time, and I believe definite arrangements for the tour will be made so soon as Dr. Tyrrell returns."

"MAY BE."

BY A CRANKY BACHELOR.

The ladies may know what is best for them to wear. It seems preposterous that a man should presume to tell them. They may know what sort of apparel is prettiest and most becoming. And then, again, may be they don't.

May be the tight-laced corset is just what is needed to finish up and round out the imperfect work of the deity.

May be the fashioner of Eve planned upon having somebody start a corset factory close to the garden of Eden, so as to complete the work of making "the human form divine."

May be the Venus de Milo is bad form after all and a figure like the one represented in the accompanying design, might look real cute if divested of the milliner's and dressmaker's cunning, and carved in stone. We can't tell. Nobody knows, for the sculptors never dreamed of making such a thing. The fashion makers do that. They are not artists, of course, but "sassiety" bows to their dictates and says "it's all right."

God didn't make horses with docked tails. The artists do not so paint the noble and beautiful animals. The livery-stable roustabouts decide that docked tails are the proper caper, and "jukes" bow to the edict.

May be the Maker intended horses should have

May be the "bustle," of several feet in extent, was called into being by an all-wise Providence to show the world how a woman should have been formed in the beginning, had there been surplus ribs and dust enough to have completed the work.

May be the flaring hoops, the Grecian bend, the pull-back, the train, puffed sleeves, etc., etc., were all designed to show what improvements might have been made in creating a woman.

May be tight-lacing, high-heeled shoes, bare shoulders, etc., etc., are just what are needed to insure good health for women, whom a careless designer created without these accessories to beauty and happiness.

BABIES ON BICYCLES.

The Illinois Humane Society, in its effort to stop the practice of carrying children on bicycles, is liable to get into court. We are advised that a Chicago lawyer proposes to test the validity of the assumed right of the society. He says they cannot interfere with his fatherly desire to give the baby the benefits of the bicycle.

The result of this test case will be watched with much interest by all wheelmen.

We have often been shocked at the apparent chances taken by parents in this way, but have yet to hear of any serious accident occurring.

Whether it is right to stop a practice that brings so much joy to parents and children alike is doubtful.

It is argued that the optic nerve of the child is liable to be strained and that there is danger of brain disturbance from the rapid passing of vehicles, and this leads to a horrible suspicion, but—no! the bicycle has not been in use long enough so that the gentlemen composing the Illinois Humane Society could have been carried on it in their infancy.

Yes, reinforcements have come slowly and surely to the front; starting in with 16 B. W. G., years ago, we have finally reduced the tubing to brown paper thinness, thereby reducing the weight of the finished result very materially

Frames were always breaking when 16-gauge tubing was used because they were not reinforced; or when they were, the reinforcing was very unsatisfactorily arranged

With our X-CLUSIVE REINFORCEMENT we have demonstrated that frames can be built on featherweight lines and, by skilful reinforcing, become eternally strong

BOOK NOTES.

BICYCLING FOR LADIES, by Maria E. Ward, is a profusely-illustrated book of 200 pages. It tells all about cycling and pictures its every phaze and position. If anything, it tells too much, for a careful perusal of it would require considerable time and a comprehensive knowledge of mechanics in general. But it is thorough. Its illustrations show a lady under all the varying conditions of wheeling and gives her facial expressions from the moment she first thinks of buying a wheel to the proud day when she can ride as well as the best of them. With this book and a wheel and an open lot or roadway, any lady can learn to ride a wheel independent of the rest of the world. And a woman does like to be independent. The book is published by Brentano, and book-sellers offer it for $1.50.

IT HARDLY ever happens that there is an impending crisis but what some one comes along and "shoos" it away. Lots of people have been wanting to go wheeling through France, but have hesitated about doing so because they cannot talk French. And well they may falter, for it's a sad thing to ask for a loaf and get stone in a strange land, where one is sometimes compelled to say his prayers and go to sleep without knowing the points of the compass. It is rather difficult for a stranger to find his way about a foreign country merely by the sense of smell. An American travelling in Europe misses half the fun if he can't tell the natives about the

SOME BICYCLE HINTS.

The Buffalo Express prints a few words of advice as to the means to be pursued to get the fullest enjoyment from a wheel.

Don't ride with a soft tire. Keep it pumped as hard as you can; the wheel will ride easier and will last longer.

Don't ride with a loose bearing, nor yet with one too tight. Five minutes' running on a poorly-adjusted bearing may ruin the best wheel.

Don't try to do tricks in a crowd. Many a good machine has been smashed because some smart Alec thought he could ride hands off.

Don't be afraid of oil—you can't get too much of it on a bearing, or a chain, either, for that matter.

Try a little soap on your chain if it seems to run hard. It is better than graphite.

Don't drink beer. It effects the leg muscles.

Don't coast in the night—nor in the daytime, except when you have a straight road ahead with no crossings or car tracks.

Don't ride a saddle that hurts. There are good ones on the market.

Don't let rain-drops dry on your nickel. Every spot means a rust-spot.

Elbow-grease is the best nickle-polish.

Clean your wheel after every run, and at all other times when you think it needs it.

Keep to the right and avoid collisions.

Slow up when crossing a car track—your wheel will last longer.

Go slow around corners, unless you have an accident policy.

Don't ride a wheel if you cannot be a gentleman.

There are hoodlums enough in the ranks now.

Remember that women and people climbing hills have the right of way.

When riding with a female companion, keep on the outside and give the woman the curb.

Don't carry a child on a baby-carrier unless it is borrowed or you have more children than you need.

Don't make fun of a girl in bloomers. How would you like to wear skirts?

Try a cold plunge after a country run.

Don't wear a boiled shirt in hot weather.

Get your saddle high enough. If too low, your knees will get cramped.

WE DON'T THINK.

Benjamin H. Ridgely, the United States consul at Geneva, has sent to the secretary of State a sketch of the wheel, with a letter describing it. The bicycle differs from the modern safety in this respect only: The pedals are placed over the forward wheel and the rider sits in a natural posture and has a support behind him like the back of a chair. The bicycle has pneumatic tires, diamond frame, sprocket wheels and chain, and all other features of a modern machine. The rider, instead of pedaling up and down, and leaning forward so that his back resembles an interrogation point, pedals forward and backward, and sits back comfortably, like a man in a reclining chair.

It is claimed for this machine that the position which the rider occupies is not only infinitely easier, but that by means of the support for the back. his forces are far more effectively utilized and with considerably less fatigue. His position is held to be the normal position of a man sitting, and the bicycle is, therefore, called "La Bicyclette Normale."

The inventor says that the principle of his machine is the utilization of the force, very little known, which is furnished by a point of support for the back. Without this support the only force a man has is his own weight. On the other hand, if his back be well supported he has in each leg a force more than treble his own weight, and which is, in fact, equal to the weight he is capable of carrying combined with that of his own body. The construction of the normal bicycle is intended to make use of this considerable amount of wasted force. The point of support is the back of the seat, by means of which the rider's body is thrown back and his legs lifted up, owing to the position of the pedals. The body is thus placed in a normal posture, hence the name of the machine; the body is upright or leaning slightly backward.

The normal bicycle, the inventor says, presents the advantages of greater safety, perfect comfort, healthy position, a greater power over the machine, greater speed, both uphill and on level ground, and less fatigue. It is also claimed for this bicycle that being much lower than the ordinary safety bicycle, it is much easier to mount.

WHEELMEN AND THE STREETS.

Every day there are accidents on Chestnut street, and other crowded thoroughfares growing out of the reckless riding of persons upon bicycles. When the cyclers are out in force their precipitate and noiseless movement involves serious danger, particularly for women who wish to cross the street, or to enter or get out of street cars. Several persons were run against or thrown down yesterday by youngsters on "bikes." This is outrageous. It should be understood that the pedestrian has the right of way. The "bike" has come to stay; but it must stay in its place.—Philadelphia Record.

True; but where is its "place?" This is coming to be an important local problem. There are, probably, not fewer than 25,000 wheels in daily use throughout Philadelphia, and their riders have as much of a right to the privileges of the highways as any other class of persons that behave themselves and observe the law. Their number is daily increasing, and the time is not far distant when it will be necessary to adopt some special code of municipal regulation for assuring them the enjoyment of their privileges, as well as for protecting the public from the didoes of the careless or the inexperienced.

It would be well if a committee of councils and a committee of the Wheelmen's Association were to put their heads together and go carefully over the whole question of adapting this great modern convenience, no longer a thing of luxury, but almost a necessity to thousands, and yet still in the infancy of its introduction, to the daily concerns of a great city.

Every principal street to be laid out hereafter should have a cycle path; so should the roads in the suburbs and those in Fairmount Park, while the streets in the populous or busy parts of the city should be so regulated as to offer them the greatest facilities compatible with public safety.

In a few years there will be more "bikes" than all other kinds of vehicles put together on our streets. —Philadelphia Bulletin.

THE OHIO WAY.

About the only way to do anything is to do it. This isn't a new thought, but it is just as true as ever.

The Good Roads Committee, of Dayton, Ohio, enrolling among its members the mayor of the city, the president of the city council, the president of the Board of Trade, police commissioners, Board of City Affairs, the chief of the fire department, the city civil engineer, the county treasurer, the president of the Montgomery Co. Agricultural Society, Gov. Thomas, of the Soldiers' Home, and many other prominent men of experience and travel, has presented the following petition to the commissioners of this county.

To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners.

Gentlemen:—We are aware of the fact that you need no argument to convince you that our main thoroughfares to the city, known as special pikes, need immediate attention. The question only is how and where to begin. We therefore recommend the following for immediate action: For the next thirty days that three men and one cart be put on every pike, beginning at the city limits, raking off loose stones, digging out boulders and leveling the roads. We would also recommend:

1st. That all loose stones should be raked off, and all boulders that crop up should be removed.

2nd. That the road should be leveled with the centre only slightly higher than the sides, so that all water will drain off naturally.

3d. Where chuck holes or wagon tracks have cut through the foundation of the pikes they should be opened out, cut straight, square edges, and a foundation of stone rammed in and covered with gravel.

4th. Where fresh gravel is put on it must receive daily attention with road roller and rake, removing all stone larger than a hickory nut. All new gravel should be screened from larger stones before hauling.

5th. Proper tools should be furnished by the county commissioners, road rollers, scrapers, gravel seives, hammers, rakes, picks, shovels, stone hammers.

6th. Screened gravel or broken stones should be placed along the road at intervals of not over a quarter of a mile, to be used for repairs.

7th. Aside from any additional work that may be needed on any road, every one of the fifteen special pikes entering the city should have the daily services of one man with pick and shovel, wheelbarrow or cart, to make and keep up repairs especially on the five miles of pike nearest the city, where the traffic is greatest. That the name of the section pike commissioner be placed on a sign board on each section along the pike.

The Ohio Division, L. A. W., will hold its State meet at Dayton in July, and it goes without saying, that the city streets and roads in the surrounding country will be ready to receive the wheelmen. In the meantime any other city that really desires to be bright, prosperous and happy, would do well to BICYCLISTS, FARMERS AND ROADS.

Recently The Truth found occasion to speak for the bicycle in cities, and especially in Scranton. It is of the bicycle outside of Scranton, in connection with the work of the League of American Wheelmen in striving to secure good roads throughout the country, that we now speak. It has been the fashion in many quarters to abuse them for this, to decry their selfishness, to declare that in asking for better roads they are adding to the burdens of the farmer — when, in truth, they are doing their utmost for his benefit.

General Miles, the commanding officer of the United States Army, in an address in Chicago some time ago, speaking of the dispatches sent by bicycle mounted soldiers from Chicago to New York in the course of experiments made to test the value of a bicycle corps in the army, said: "These young men passing from here to New York have not only been splendid bicycle riders, but they have been discoverers. They have discovered what is the trouble with the farmer. It is not the tariff or coinage, the money or the currency, the markets or the railroads. It is the roads. That is the trouble with the country. If I were in politics I would discuss that subject, and I would let the farmers in the country know what that trouble is."

He added his strong conviction of the need in this country of good avenues to afford travel and intercourse with each other, and declared that roads, good or bad, furnish an indication of respectively the better or lower grade of civilization in any country. New York and Pittsburg papers have recently been printing maps of the highways around these cities for a distance of fifty miles or more, showing the roads that have been put into good condition alike for the cyclist and the farmer. How many such could Scranton show. — Scranton (Pa.) Truth.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A VETERAN.

BY THE LATE HENRY BENTLEY.*

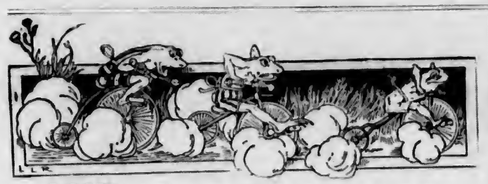
Second Paper.

Some of us rode hundreds of miles, across the country, in the early day, when the sight of a bicycle would bring people from their work in the fields to the road side as fast as their legs could carry them. Operatives in factories ran to the windows and doors as we passed, gazing with wonderment at such strange looking mechanism and its peculiar propulsion.

My old friend Perrigrew, his son and myself were passing through the manufacturing village of Mattawan, probably a year or so after we first "took to the road," and as my hair was entirely white at that time and I was riding slightly ahead, a "smart" girl called out from one of the crowded doorways, saying, "There goes the grandfather, the father and the son," at which we laid down on our handle bars and spun ahead, leaving the gaping and laughing crowds to their various reflections.

"Say," called out the keeper of a country tavern, who was sitting on a wooden bench on his "stoop" as I was riding leisurely by, on a much-traveled road up in the mountains in edge of eastern New York and Massachusetts one hot and sultry morning in the latter part of the summer of 1880, "do you know what I think of you?"

"No," I called back, "but while you are about it, please tell me."



"Well, I think you are a d —— d old fool."

After having ridden what was considered at that early bicycling day "pretty considerable," that was the first time anybody had offered me anything approaching an insult, so, as two friends were with me on this trip and they happened to be slightly in the rear and not yet in sight of my hotel keeper, I speeded up a little and turning my wheel rapidly, came up along side his "horseblock," leaned my wheel up against the same, and skipping up the steps walked rapidly towards him with a frowning countenance and the gleaming eye of a first-class pirate, as if I were to engage in a first-class "bout," when he sprang to his one good foot (the other being what is generally known as a "club" foot) and, raising both hands, loudly said, "Hold on mister! I take it all back, I didn't mean any disrespect; only I never seen such a thing as you've got there before, and it kind of upsot me."

"Friend," I said, "I excuse you; we wouldn't hurt a cripple any way, and the fact is I think you are rather plucky anyway to stay here and see three such monstrosities as we are coming along the road, the like of which, you say, you have never before seen."

We all three thought, under the circumstances,

*Mr. Bentley, whose death occurred at his home in Philadelphia last year, was one of the first prominent, substantial citizens to take up bicycle riding. He was one of Philadelphia's best-known and most highly respected merchants. The several articles regarding his experiences on the bicycle, when wheel-riding was a new thing, were prepared for the editor of the L. A. W. BULLETIN a short time before Mr. Bentley's death, and were recently found among his papers.

that our old friend had a perfect right to be doubly surprised. He had never before seen a bicycle, and I am quite satisfied that he had seldom, if ever, seen a more disreputable-looking subject than I was, with my sweat-stained corduroy breeches, faded and dust-covered flannel shirt, a copper-colored face and badly-worn shoes,—having been "out" for some days. My two friends were a trifle more respectable looking, and they had no gray hairs.

Because of my being the "antique" of the party, it fell mostly to my lot to be spokesman and chief engineer. As the morning was warm and the road dry and dusty, it was "resolved" that we "take something" before we set out again; so I said "come in old man and get behind your bar. We propose to dampen our tonsils slightly."

Getting in his "business" place, our friend with the one short leg said, "Well, guest, what will it be?"

Said I, "have you any lemons?"

"Yes."

"Sugar?"

"Yes."

"All right; then make us three lemonades."

One of the first things our friend commenced doing was to break up some ice.

"Don't put any ice in those tumblers" we said, "only ordinary water, sugar and lemon juice." This being done, we enjoyed it very much, but the old man looked at us in such a quizzical way that I could not help saying to him, "well friend, you seem to be thinking of something again. What is your mind wondering on now?"

"Well," said he, "gents, I would n't say a word to offend you, but if you must know, it 's this: I think that d—— d weak tea to run them things on," alluding to our wheels.

"Now, friend," I said, "what would you recommend our taking?"

"Why, some whiskey, or put some in your lemonade."

"Oh," we all cried out, "why, old man, you 're crazy; we can't stay on top such things as we ride, if we did that. Perhaps before we went a mile, one or more of us would be under our wheels, instead of on top of them, and then what? Why, a coroner's inquest, of course, held at your hotel; you, the cause of the disaster, followed by a law suit probably; you mulcted in damages, etc. Without doubt, there will soon be many riders on this pleasant and picturesque route, but, old man, don't recommend anything to our fellows stronger than coffee, tea, milk, chocolate, lemonade or good spring water!"

"See here, now," said our hotel keeper, "what kind of a set of fellows are you, anyway? Is this some kind of a temperance racket, or what? May be you 're agents or something of some temperance concern; anyhow I hope it won't get to be fashion to ride on such things if people that rides 'em can't take anything but temperance drinks." And so we left our old friend, I fear with a heavy weight on his mind regarding this, possibly, new factor which was to interfere with his future profits, by compeling countless numbers of people to imbibe such fluids as would leave their brains both level and logical instead of muddled, distorted, and quite unable to guide the uncertain and treacherous steed rolling underneath.

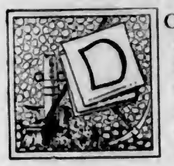
Once, in the early days of wheeling, I was riding south of Hudson, N. Y., on the road from the "Blue Store" to Red Hook on my way south, and the "going" being mighty rough and clayey north of the first-named place, I got behind and was obliged to ride late. As lamps were not as common among "us fellows" as they are to-day, it was tough and slow getting along over those miserable highways in the dusk.

Just as the darkness became quite positive, I was straining every nerve to "make" a steep knoll ahead of me and, with head down and body thrown well forward, I had just reached the summit when I saw an old horse jumping aside in the road-side ditch, and attached to him a rickety wagon, and in the same a regular "haggard," whose alarm was fully as great as that of his horse. Coming upon this horse and his equally old driver, (who I am confident was pretty "full,") it may be imagined that our surprise was mutual. The old man straightened himself up as best he could and pulled away on his disconcerted beast, while I had already dismounted and stood in the ditch on the other side of the road and called on my old friend to go ahead.

After getting his horse quieted down he sang out, "Who be you?" I replied that he ought to be able to see that I was a man.

"No, you ain't any man, either. You 're the devil you be, for nothing short o' that 'ud scare that old mare."

"Well," said I, "old, man go on." "Go on, yourself," he sang out. So away I went down the road, and as I wheeled by the hind wheels of his wagon, I heard him say in a subdued tone, "Well, I'll be d——d." And so darkness separated us, but I doubt not that the old man had a tale to unfold when he reached his quiet little domicile.



The reader must not forget that the things I am chronicling occurred in parts of the country rather remote from large towns or cities; but, for that matter, when one looks back fifteen years the wheelman, in the "back country" especially, was equal to the passing of an old-fashioned caravan. What a crowd of people from the little village, gathered about the country inn, when weary and dust-covered we "tied up for the night" there, and how everything was criticised and how many questions asked! And then in the morning, when we were preparing to start out, all other business seemed to be suspended for the time. Glorious days those! How many reminiscences of jolly times and pleasant recollections, even though the very wayside cur howled and yelped at our phantasmagoria of gyrations, and the very children ran away in fear!

A PHILADELPHIA member writes, that in the early part of January, this year, Director of Public Safety Beitler appointed a number of riders to act as special wheelmen police, and they are now riding in that capacity daily.

THE wise man sits in the corner; the fool in the centre of the room.

DOUBTLESS the reader has already paused to admire the illustration on the front cover of this number of the L. A. W. BULLETIN. A League member, in sending it says, "It is an amateur photograph of a little piece of road in front of my house, in Dutchess County, N. Y. It is a fair sample of our roads. We have a wheel club of twenty riders, ten of which are of the fair sex."

Every one is lived upon by his surroundings. Tennyson says, "I am a part of all that I have met." It is worth while to think of the difference in the influences exerted by such a beautiful road as the one above referred to or a mudway of grief on the minds of children who grow up beside such highways.

To be reared in a home beside a good, broad and beautiful thoroughfare, where the world goes happily by is a real heritage. The dweller by the muddy way must have muddy thoughts.

The community immersed in mud is a good one for a youth to get away from and stay away from. But a pleasant home by a smooth, shady highway is a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

GOOD ROADS SUGGESTIONS.

Mr. Gustav Kustermann of Green Bay, Wis., proposes to have the State Legislature follow the plan whereby $600,000 is raised annually for educational purposes by a mill tax. He would have a quarter of a mill added to this, which would provide $150,000 annually to be devoted to the construction of roads. Figuring the cost of roads at $1,000 per mile, of which sum the State would contribute one-half and the town the most benefited the other half, there would be 300 miles of good roads built every year in Wisconsin. Even if the cost per mile should be greater than $1,000, a very considerable number of miles would be built each year, so that at the end of ten years Wisconsin might have a very greatly improved system of roads. Mr. Kustermann's suggestion seems to be a practical one that would accomplish the end proposed as well if not better than any yet offered. Not the least meritorious part of it is that the taxation proposed is so small that it would not weigh on any one.— Milwaukee Sentinel.

GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT.

The wheelmen of Montgomery county seem to be leading the van of the Good Roads movement. They are organizing now in plenty of time to make that a leading issue in the county political campaign. As they will have with them not only their own important voting strength, but the assistance of all owners and drivers of teams who appreciate the value of Good Roads, they will probably get what they want without much loss of time.— Lebanon (Pa.) News.

MASSACHUSETTS has appropriated the sum of six hundred thousand dollars to be expended on the highways this year.

DURING the recent session of the Maryland Legislature a law was passed making it a misdemeanor to throw anything that would injure a pneumatic tire in any street or road, the fines, ranging from five to fifty dollars, to be paid into the road or street fund.

THE wheel is recommended for convalescents. Lots of men ride who do not appear to be able to sit up.

HIS REASON.

The reason I married her, said White,
Was simply this, she sat
Directly in front of me one night
At the play and removed her hat.

The act was significant to me,
And the thought possessed my mind,
That the woman who did such a thing must be,
Unselfish and good and kind. — Ex

The difference 'twixt a lady and a railroad 's very plain,
For the latter does n't mind it when you step upon its train.

THOUSANDS of persons hold inane conversations, who would better hold their tongues.

Whoever now a statute heaves,
At theatre hats, himself deceives;
For, while he frowns, the wily Eves
Laugh at him in their mammoth sleeves. — Ex.

IN GLASS HOUSES.

Maude to the theatre goes
And sits behind a hat
Which has enormous bows—
And Maude denounces that.

Meantime with rage complete
And gutturals low and flat,
The man behind Maude's seat
In cussing Maude's big hat.
—Chicago Record.

A maxim, on handbills, more business might draw,
And thus you 'd cut ice with a circular saw.

The preacher offered as his text,
"He giveth his beloved sleep."
His hearers proved it though they vexed
The speaker with their slumbers deep.

"Go 'round the world?" But few can do it;
The most of us, we just go through it.

QUERIES AND ANSWERS

No. 77,840:—See the New York Road Book.

G. M. W., Kansas: Some day you may visit a town where there is a theatre; then you will understand it.

"A MEMBER," New York:—It is easy for a paper having one-tenth of the L. A. W. BULLETIN circulation, to print and mail it in one day. The last of our edition is mailed Saturday P. M. Why a New York subscriber should not receive it in the first mail Monday, we cannot tell, unless it is that the mail carrier sits down and reads it, in which case we can only commend the carrier for his appreciation of a "good thing."

C. M. J., Rockford, Minn:—The weight of a rider should be distributed on both wheels of a bicycle about equally, in order to get the best results. As wheels are built, however, from sixty to seventy per cent. of the weight is on the rear wheel, except in the case of the racing man, whose weight is often more than half carried by the front wheel. By all means, sit up straight and let the weight come where it will.

E. E. M., New York: If you will send address we would be glad to write you.

J. E. H., New York: No, the theatre hat number was not of great consequence, but it was so much more interesting than the story which we had formerly been obliged to return to you that we still feel that we were fully justified in publishing the one and returning the other.

"No. 90——" Brooklyn: Your letter was very poorly written, but we were able to decipher enough to show that you were out of temper when you wrote it. You are freely forgiven so far as we are concerned, though the post-office department might not be so generous. You might do well to remember those wise words of Plutarch, "Lamentation is the only musician that always, like a screech owl, alights and sits on the roof of an angry man:" also remember that a man who deserves the name will not expect much consideration for a letter to which his personal cowardice prevents the signing of his name.

Is your bicycle a joy to you? If not, it is your fault, very likely.

Be neither profligate nor mean,
For they are counted wiser
Whose course is laid half way between
The spendthrift and the miser.

CORRESPONDENCE

WEAR THE ROYAL PURPLE.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

Why not urge all L. A. W. members to wear the L. A. W. colors, royal purple, on their machines, and thus let non-members know the strength of the organization. The buttons are not prominent enough, and this season when every other man you meet has a political or bicycle button in his coat, it is hard to tell the difference.

H. G. BRADBURY, No. 102,372.

WHAT HE GETS.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

When we ask a friend to join the L. A. W., the ordinary answer is, "What do you get for your dollar?" Since last Decoration Day I have a very inducing answer, to wit: A friend and myself arrived on Decoration Day on our wheels at Port Jervis, and went to the hotel designated by the L. A. W. tour book. We had supper, a room for the night and breakfast. On leaving we were presented with a bill for $2.00 each, but upon showing our League tickets, the clerk changed the bill from $2.00 to $1.15 each. Do you see what we get for our dollar, without speaking of the other things?

NEW YORK, June 2, 1896. No. 81,308.

SHOULD INCLUDE STEAMSHIPS.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

I don't suppose the Armstrong, and similar bills of other States, compelling railroads to carry one wheel, if offered, for each passenger free, includes the steamship lines also; but I write to see if you can tell me through the BULLETIN why they do not or why such laws are not proposed. I've paid 65 cents extra for wheel between this city and Providence, R. I. E. T. CARRINGTON, No. 75,729.

NEW YORK CITY.

A SPECIAL TAX.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

The BULLETIN has propositions for a special tax on bicycles to pay for bicycle paths. Now some of your members would like to know if horse owners are made to pay a special tax to pay for the paths that have been built for their benefit. If they do not, why should bicycle riders pay a special tax? It seems a case of prejudice, to be cured by wheelmen voting in such a manner that their influence may be felt. The ordinary road, if kept in proper order, is good enough for wheelmen.

ROADS VERSUS PATHS.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

I have vivid recollections of more than one experience with "hogs" who happened to be driving horses at the time; however, their discourtesy was not due to the fact that they were horsemen, but it was simply "the nature of the beast."

In reality the word horseman includes a very large class; in fact, directly or indirectly, it is the great American public, for we are all more or less dependent upon horses to transport the necessities of life.

Possibly many are in the habit of carrying such little trifles as a barrel of flour or a ton of coal on their wheels, but down here in Jersey we are horsemen enough to let that animal cart such things for us.

The reason why owners and drivers of horses are not more in favor of better highways is mostly due to ignorance.

Wheelmen realize the condition of the roads because they are doing the work themselves, and not only see but feel its advantages and disadvantages.

A horseman must notice the condition of the road, but he don't feel how hard the horse pulls.

What is needed now is a campaign of education.

One mile of good stone turnpike in a community will do more to advance the cause of Good Roads than a dozen miles of cycle path, so don't let's build selfish cycle paths, which at best can be of use to but part of the traveling public.

I expect some day to "join the innumerable caravan that moves to the pale realms of shade," and when I do take to the shades, unless the motor-hearse has arrived upon the scene, I shall then be willing to plead guilty to the charge of being a horseman of the deepest die, but for the present I am satisfied to be an advocate of "Good Roads," and can get along without any dye.

Closter, N. J.

"What is so rare as a day in June?" We give it up.

HERE'S YOUR "WHY?"

The wheelman dearly loves the horse,
And seeks to make the road
A hard and smooth and level course,
Where he may draw his load.

"What makes the wheelman love him so?"
We answer in reply,
Just ride a wheel, and then you 'll know
The very reason why

I KISSED HER BROW.

NIXON WATERMAN.

I kissed her brow: her winsome face,
A picture of divinest grace,
Upturned to mine. Her wondrous eyes.
Like lamps of love from Paradise,
Shone through their lashes' filmy lace.

O happy time! O happy place!
I held her in my fond embrace,
And, while I heard her tender sighs,
I kissed her brow.

From brow to lip — a tiny space,
But O, 't is easy to debase
A rosy mouth that, otherwise,
My heart would, O so dearly, prize;
She 'd eaten onions — woeful case!
I kissed her brow.

W. C. Ackley, a member of the New York Division, warns riders not to try the new bicycle path (?) to Patchogue, L. I. He says citizens of Port Jefferson and Patchogue who told them the path was all right on Memorial Day had no regard for the truth, as the path consists of ploughed ground and sand dunes. It took five hours' hard work to go sixteen miles. He advises all riders not to listen to the "fairy tales" of the natives, but to stay away from the path.

"The prudent man looketh well to his going," but the foolish man has to walk back home and push his wheel.

THE "BOGEY-MAN."

A great deal of trouble is borrowed in the United States every year, but only a small part of it ever gets ripe enough to pick.

From the bassinet to the sepulchre mankind is forever crying before it is hurt; and it is more or less that way with women.

The fierce, blood-thirsty "whifflewaffle" that hides in the dark haymow never really devours the farmer's boy when he goes up there in the dusk of the evening to throw some clover to the horses, but it scares the boy till his eyes stand out like door-knobs, and his legs are sort of trembling like.

Pinned right down to the facts, that boy knows there is nothing in the mow to hurt him, just as well as he knows where all the melon patches, for miles around, are located; but, somehow, when he goes up there in the gloaming, he begins to think how lonely his folks would be should anything awful happen to him, and he takes every precaution to keep them from being distressed.

Boys who are so brave they would just as soon sleep on the front side of the bed should be closely watched as they grow up. They are abnormal.

Captain Kidd was that sort of a kid. He died very wealthy, but with an unusually high temperature, which some say remains so to the present time. We do not assert this as a fact, however.

It looks almost ridiculous to one who has been born and brought up among cows to see a swell young lady from the city, with a prepared complexion and drugged hair, shake her skirts at the gentle kine she meets in the road, and exclaim well nigh at the top of her voice, "Lie down, sir!"

There seems to be a universal understanding and agreement among people who can't tell a bovine from a milk weed that the bite of a cow is fatal. No one will ever be able to disprove this assertion until a cow bites somebody; but a diligent inspection of over seventeen million of death certificates failed to find a single one where the cause of the taking off was attributed to a cow's bite.

All of this goes to prove that people can see danger where it isn't just as readily as where it is. It also behooves us to do all we can to prevent people from apprehending danger. To try to keep people from thinking they are suffering or are going to suffer from any cause, would be a Christian kindness. In fact, it would be Christian science. Enough of it applied with a little cold cream of reason might prove efficacious in allaying the distress occasioned by the imaginary burn of a prospective fire that, according to some writers, will be burning even after the Boston subway, and the Grant monument at New York, are finished.

And the thought should be borne home to every rider of a bicycle who goes about scaring women and children, and old and infirm persons, who are so thoughtless as to sometimes try to cross a street without burrowing through under the pavement, or waiting for the invention of a practical flying machine.

As a matter of fact, there are but few persons run over and killed on the crossings by bicyclists. But the number who are momentarily sure they are going to be is legion.

In the name of the League of American Wheelmen, ride around others as you would have others ride around you. Don't see how close you can come to them; see how far from them you can go. Try to keep them from even apprehending danger.

Don't be a "Bogey-man."

SALUTE THE FLAG.

Members of the L. A. W. are, as a rule, patriotic citizens — men and women who love the country which shelters them. This feeling of patriotism finds expression in the universal respect that is shown the "red, white and blue."

The mere mention of the old "star-spangled banner," sends the blood in a quick ebb and flow to the very finger tips. It is suggested that League members (whose head gear admits of it) should uncover their heads on passing the American flag. We second the motion. Those in favor will please "doff the cap."

George Washington knew how to make
A name to brag about;
And with his axe it did n't take
Him long to hatchet out.

STRAIGHT GOODS

To give the buyer exactly what you agree to give him — exactly what he has a right to expect from the way you present your case — and to give it to him at one price is "straight goods," honest dealing. The maker who has a flexible price (bargains away his goods) is discriminating against one buyer in favor of another. That maker either has no confidence in his goods, his profits are too high, or he has n't got the courage to sell an honest article for an honest profit. More likely his goods are not such as would inspire confidence, and he knows it. This kind of a maker is not honest with himself, and a man who is not honest with himself might now and then "slip a cog" in his dealings with other men. New Clippers are honest bicycles, sold at one price, an honest price, by people who have confidence in them. No cut rates on Clippers; every one treated alike.

ONE OF THOSE TOWNS.

Reynoldsburg, O., if reports received are to be credited, is trying to write its name well toward the top of the list of fool towns. Of course such a town has mud holes in its streets, and when a visiting wheelman, in turning out for them, touches on an infrequented and weed-grown sidewalk, the excited inhabitants pounce upon him with sticks and stones, as well as with the law and its steep fines. It is like thrusting a pole into a hornet's nest.

The chief consul of the Ohio Division, L. A. W., will pay his respects to this mad, moss-back burg, and then it may afford better roads and better treatment to deserving wheelmen.

Reynoldsburg stands as a type of mean towns. Communities have their predominant traits just as individuals have. There are places whose people are looking for trouble. Their every morning prayer is, "Send us this day some mean, narrow, spiteful incidents that we may distress somebody."

They begin quarrelling at the breakfast table. They put vinegar, instead of cream, in their coffee. They try to eat something that will disagree with them. They want to feel mean. They love to scowl and sneer and scold. It's a great joy to arrest a visiting wheelman, who, not knowing the character of the town, innocently rides into it. A wheelman who would knowingly ride through such a town, should be put in jail for life.

Ever since Adam was a boy there have been little brindle dogs to chase after everything that goes by at a faster pace than the sleepy surroundings are accustomed to.

And there are little brindle men and little brindle towns that love to bark at the heels of every innovation that comes along at a smarter pace than they are familiar with.

Just now it is the bicycle they are chasing after. They want to bite it with a fine or a tax or something. They wish to find something evil in it. They are yearning for evil things. A new joy and blessing to the race would fill them with regret.

They 'll know better sometime. Even clams are subject to the law of evolution.

THE NATIONAL MEET.

The Louisville Evening Post has issued a neat little pamphlet giving interesting facts about Louisville parks, and how to reach them, State laws, city ordinances, etc., also pointing out a number of the principal country roads, and giving a map of Jefferson County. It contains also an application blank to be used in joining the L. A. W. It is called a "Cyclers Guide," and will be sent for a stamp by addressing the Evening Post, Louisville, Ky.

HE WANTS TO HELP HIS WIFE.

A correspondent asks how he can assist his wife on heavy grades and yet ride separate machines.

We are also asked as to the advisability of coupling two bicycles so as to make a "sociable."

Two safeties may be connected side by side, and such an arrangement has the advantage, to a beginner, of eliminating the task of balancing. However, the propelling power required to drive the coupled machines is much more than if they were used separately. This is due to the fact that although the frames are coupled, the pedals are not and cannot be, and hence, the riders do not apply their force in unison.

One rider may assist another by means of an elastic cord; the process is called by sailors "towing." An ordinary non-elastic cord or line may be used, but a strong strip of rubber which will "give" a few inches, or even a few feet, is much better. The amount of strength necessary is about the same as found in a strong pair of suspenders doubled, and in the absence of anything more convenient, a husband cannot better show his devotion than by taking off his suspenders and using them for this purpose. The complete tow line should not be less than ten feet long.

Sweat, sweat, sweat,

THE L. A. W. EMBLEM.

Should the League emblem be used by any one for any purpose other than the legitimate business of the League? is a question often asked. There are a number of articles in the market known as the "L. A. W." this or that, and in some instances the emblem is used on the goods or packages. We are not aware that any official permission has ever been given for such use of our winged wheel, but we do not hesitate to say that we believe it to be a good thing for the organization, when considered from an advertising standpoint.

Whether a person who is not an L. A. W. member should wear an L. A. W. badge, is another matter, though even that might be in the line of increased publicity with no resulting harm. League badges are in the market in a thousand forms, and may be purchased by anybody. Morally, however, a non-League member cannot properly wear one.

No League privileges should ever be given except on presentation of the current ticket.

NO MORE LEAKS

"Anti-Leak" is put inside of any tire by any rider through the valve-tube. It coats the inside of the tire and instantly closes all punctures made thereafter. Does not injure tire or impair resiliency, and when your tire is punctured you never know it. "Anti-Leak" sent prepaid for $2.00 per can, holding enough for two tires.

THE WAY TO VOTE.

The Good Roads Club, of Atlanta, Ga., has instructed its secretary to write to all the candidates for the position of county commissioners, asking that they forward the club a written statement of their views in regard to roads.

And why not? What are commissioners for? The position is not a particularly ornate one and hence it should be of some practical use to the public.

A good system of highways throughout a county would be of more real benefit than anything else commissioners could propose.

Voters have a right to know a man's ideas concerning this important question before putting him into an office he is not calculated to properly fill.

Don't buy a pig in a poke. Don't vote for anyone who isn't willing to do all he can, within reason, to lift his community out of the mud.

Ballots make good ballast when properly utilized.

BICYCLE RACK FOR BAGGAGE CARS.

Gen. Supt. Collins, of the Wisconsin Central lines, has recently devised an arrangement for carrying bicycles in baggage cars which consists of a series of stalls in which machines are placed, and over the top of these stalls is a platform for the storage of trunks.

It is interesting to know that the principal railroads are beginning to study the question of bicycle storage and we believe, that when this question is properly understood the bicycle will cease to be the objection to baggage men that it is at present.

It will be remembered that the Wisconsin Central road is the one which recently broke away from the combine and decided to carry bicycles as baggage.

CYCLE SHOWS FOR '97.

The Cycle Board of Trade has referred the matter of shows for next winter to its executive committee with a recommendation that no show be held before February.

It seems to be generally agreed by manufacturers that the cycle show helps the local trade in the town where it is held, but that on the whole it is a disadvantage and costs a lot of money which, of course, the retail buyer must pay eventually.

YOU PUSH THE BUTTON

(IF YOU CAN).

A New Haven man has devised a "board walk," something like Mr. Bradley's board walk at Asbury Park, except that he has a straight row of electric buttons over which the cyclist may ride his wheel, the trick being to press as many as possible of the buttons. The result of the effort is shown on an indicator. The idea would seem to be an interesting one, and it will add one more to the numerous "traps to catch a dime," which are "ready set and baited all the time" at the average sea-side place.

Waverley BICYCLES.

The Pioneer High Grade at a Fair Price

Less than four years ago the first Waverley Bicycles were offered to the world at one-third less than other high-grade wheels. This was followed by yearly reductions in price of every other prominent make. Quite significant, is it not? It is a question of only a short time when there will not be a high-grade wheel sold above the price of the Waverley, for no bicycle at a higher price can successfully compete with it, because it is impossible to build better. Every part is made from the finest material, and every device is practical. Nothing has been overlooked necessary to entitle the Waverley to the distinction of highest of all high grades. RULES OF THE ROAD.

Nearly all rules are subject to exceptions. Our attention is called to the fact that there is often more room to pass on what is considered the wrong side. Of course there are many cases in which the rules, if followed, might lead to trouble.

It is a good thing to be legally right, but it is a better thing to be alive. In all cases where there is a possible doubt as to which is safest, "meet to the right and pass to the left," but if to do right looks dangerous, and there is lots of room on the other side and no question about it, the rule may be violated. Such violation, however, is apt to leave the responsibility entirely on the violator in case of an accident.

L. A. W. CANADIAN TOURISTS.

RE TOURISTS' BICYCLES BROUGHT INTO CANADA BY MEMBERS OF THE LEAGUE OF AMERICAN WHEELMEN.

Tourists, bona fide members of the League of American Wheelmen, who come into Canada with their bicycles (not new), may be entitled to delivery thereof without making the deposit referred to in Memo. No. 812 B., if they will produce and leave with the Collector or other Officer of Customs at the place and time of entrance, the certificate or ticket of membership for the present year, in said League, and shall fill up and sign, in triplicate, a Collector's Permission (Form C. 6) on the face of which shall be written a full description of the bicycle, stating the makers' name; the name or style, and number of the bicycle, and whether it is a man's, woman's, or boy's; the retail value of the bicycle, the full name and address of tourist, with the number of the certificate or ticket of membership; the date within which, and the Port where the bicycle will be re-exported.

One copy of the Collector's Permission shall be given to the tourist, so that in case the bicycle is exported at a Port other than the Port of Entry, such copy shall be delivered up to the Collector or other Officer of Customs at the Port of Exit, who shall endorse thereon a certificate that such bicycle has been delivered to him to be re-manifested out of Canada, or that the same has been actually exported therefrom, and then forward said Permission and certificate to the Collector of Customs at the Port where the same was issued.

In case said bicycle is exported within the specified time and the evidence thereof is furnished in manner aforesaid, to the Collector of Customs at the Port of entrance, he shall transmit to the tourist's address, by mail, the certificate or ticket of membership, so lodged with him; but in case such bicycle is not exported within the specified time or the evidence of such exportation is not furnished to the Collector of Customs at the Port of entrance within fifteen days thereafter, the Collector shall forward, without delay, to this department, one copy of the Collector's Permission (Form C. 6), together with the certificate or ticket of membership of the tourist, lodged with him.

This concession which is made only to members of the L. A. In other words, should a member of the L. A. W. fail to keep his agreement with the Canadian customs authorities, this organization would be held for the amount of the unpaid duty. My confidence in the integrity of our members warranted the assurance given. Fearing, however, that unworthy persons might join the League for the sake of evading the payment of duties, and that we might thus be called upon finan-

AH, THERE! "MR. LANGDON."

A gentleman of the above name (we refer to him as a gentleman to show that there is "no frost") wrote to a New York daily some very unkind things about the L. A. W. BULLETIN. In our issue of May 29th (page 780), we paid our respects to him and referred to him as "Mr." without giving his initials. This was out of respect for his family, just as Bob Ingersoll refers to the mistakes of "Mr. Moses." We have received letters from several New Yorkers by the name of Langdon, who are innocent of any offence and they think we should have given the initials.

As we are unable to find the clipping which contained the evidence of Mr. Langdon's indigestion, we cannot uncover him. Will some kind-hearted reader please forward the full name and address of the gentleman above referred to, so that we may do the handsome thing by him and at the same time relieve others of the same name from the cloud that now hangs over them.

A Form of Notice which we Hope May Become Contagious.

The L. A. W. members of Harrisburg, Pa., will meet at Wm. M. Hargest's office, Room 3, second floor Trust Building, Tuesday, June 9th at eight P. M., to organize a Harrisburg L. A. W. Asso. Highway improvement, excessive street sprinkling, etc., will be discussed.

ROAD SIGNALS.

"Why not have a system of signals similar to those used by steamboats," writes a L. A. W. BULLETIN reader.

We see no objection to it, but as we are already past our twenty-sixth birthday, we do not hope to see such signals universally used and understood by all road users alike. However, the result would be worth the effort.

are worn to prevent the traveler from sinking into the soft surface of the snow.

If teamsters could prevent the sinking of their wagons by wide tires, and thus haul double the load in all cases, they would at once adopt the broad tread. The trouble is, however, that most roads will hold up the narrow tire for a time; and as the road doesn't belong to the drivers, the evil is perpetuated until the wheelmen come along and institute legislation.

A MARVEL OF ART.

The Jenkins Cycle Co., Chicago, makers of the "Napoleon" bicycle, have issued a mammoth souvenir book regarding their wheel and a few kindred interests, incidentally, but principally devoted to a history of the career of "Napoleon from Corsica to St. Helena, with an introduction and descriptions by John L. Stoddard, and three hundred and thirty reproductions of famous paintings." Those lovers of things beautiful can become possessors of one of these souvenirs—two dollars covers all the expense.

It seems to me I 'd like to go
Where bells don't ring nor whistles blow,
Nor clocks don't strike nor gongs don't sound,
But where there 's stillness all around.

Not real still stillness; just the trees'
Low whisperings or the croon of bees;
The drowsy tinklings of the rill,
Or twilight song of whip-poor-will.

'T would be a joy could I behold
The dappled fields of green and gold,
Or in the cool, sweet clover lie
And watch the cloud-ships drifting by.

I 'd like to find some quaint old boat,
And fold its oars, and with it float
Along the lazy, limped stream
Where water-lilies drowse and dream.

Sometimes it seems to me I must
Just quit the city's din and dust,
For fields of green and skies of blue;
And, say! how does it seem to you?

THE wheelmen of Philadelphia are exerting their influence to bring about the exercise of more care and uniformity in the sprinkling of streets. Excessive watering is an evil many cities and towns are afflicted with. Proper organization and work along intelligent lines will overcome it.

His powers in control,
Is like a vine that spreads about,
But will not climb a pole.

GOOD roads come through education.

THE prominent place cycling has attained is made very apparent by the twelve-page section of last Sunday's Chicago Times-Herald, wholly devoted to wheel interests.

IT ISN'T the road's fault it is so bad. It wishes to reform, but no one will assist it.

THE BOYS KNOW WHY.

WHY do the boys all leave the farm,
To dwell in cities where
They miss the everlasting charm
Of purest country air?
Why do they throw away the bliss
Of perfect health and hie
Themselves to prisons where they miss
The open fields and sky?

Well, may be it's because the boys
Are not web-footed, so
A liquid road shuts out the joys
They really yearn to know.

A boy don't care to sit at home,
Nor does he care to swell
A crowd like this just coming from

D. R. MARSHALL.

There is a little town up in New Hampshire, whose mountains, green valleys, forests, lakes and streams are all that the eye could wish. It is a place to gladden the heart of tired man. It is a gem among gems.

Its roads — How about its roads? Fortunately they are naturally rather hard, and consequently the main thoroughfares are rideable, but when they are "worked," the repairs are made by throwing on soft earth, and the soft stretches are enough to make the wheelman sit up nights and "cuss." At the foot of the hills the sand has washed down and made beds where the farmer's horse stops and groans in spirit, and the wheelman, who rides down at a good speed, lies down and vainly tries to express his feelings.

On the cross roads, where are the most charming shady nooks, and glimpses of magnificent scenery, there are long stretches where the wheel tracks are worn deep and narrow with high grass between which are impassable for bicycles.

This town is rather liberal, as country towns go, in its appropriations for roads; and if repairs were made differently; if only materials were used, at slightly greater cost, which would pack hard; if the ridges on the cross roads were cut down by the road machine, it would soon be a wheelman's paradise, and the summer girl and her best young man and her sisters, her cousins, her aunts, her parents and grandparents, would quickly find out that here is the place they have long yearned for, and they would fill up the farm houses and the hotel and village cottages until they could hold no more.

This town has already been discovered. Its fame is not world-wide, but its lovers are widely scattered. In summer they add materially to the incomes of its residents and make joyous the streets of the village. Fifty per cent. of them will ride wheels this year. Will they continue to come where they cannot enjoy their favorite pastime?

Will this little town learn the lesson in season, or will it wait until some other town with not half its natural attractions, but with better roads, wins away the summer visitors it now has? No. 88,022.

Cycle tours are of interest, and the description of Mr. Townsend's tour from New York to Washington, in your issue of the 22nd, gives some good points as to change of route from that he refers to in L. A. W. Road Book. I think, however, the article is incomplete and apt to be misleading, deterring many from making the trip through to Washington, as he has overlooked that there are other routes between Philadelphia and Baltimore and between Baltimore and Washington than the most direct, which are also mentioned in the Road Book, if one would look for them.

It is another instance of the old adage, "The longest way 'round is the nearest way home." As all wheelmen who travel this part of the country know, the roads nearest the shore line between Philadelphia and Baltimore are rough or sandy, and about the worst in the State.

The route named in the Road Book through Kennett Square and Lapidum is preferred, and if a little more time can be taken, the Lancaster pike from Philadelphia to York, and thence via Hanover and pike to Baltimore, is a desirable route to take. Before reaching Baltimore, if Washington is the destination, the road from Westminster, Md., to Washington is more direct, and Baltimore can be taken in on the return.

Now as to the route from Baltimore to Washington. No one thinks of taking that Washington pike route via Columbia avenue from Baltimore, when the route via Ellicott City and Sandy Springs is very little longer, about forty-five miles only from Baltimore to Washington, and the road much better.

The much talked of boulevard between these two cities has not yet materialized, but with the completion of the Electric R. R., now being constructed by this route, will, it is thought, bring with it a nearer prospect of a good cycle road or path between the two cities.

In connection with these comments, it might be well to note that the Ericsson line boats run from Philadelphia to Baltimore, via canal from Delaware City to Chesapeake City, and can be taken from Philadelphia early in the evening or at Delaware City later. The steamers from Tolchester run twice each day from the first of June till September, carrying excursionists to and from Baltimore to this resort, so that this route can be relied on for three summer months at least. I trust Mr. Townsend will not take it amiss that I have ventured to correct the impression he gives, that the route taken by the Cycle Touring Club is the best between Philadelphia and Washington. As far as New York to Philadelphia, I have no doubt the route is most favorable, but inquiries made of local L. A. W. officers or members would have given them better roads, I think, than those described as the best afforded in Maryland.

ROADS AND SIDE PATHS.

BY THE FIRST L. A. W. SECRETARY.

"Lo! from the tombs a doleful sound!" may be the heading which you will give this communication, from one who is proud to have been one of the founders of the L. A. W., and its first secretary, but who is probably looked upon as a "back number" now, and as too near his tomb to offer advice.

I have been a faithful reader of the League's various organs from the first, and never with more pleasure and profit than under its present management. I have often thought of writing in approval of its suggestions, but finally your editorial favoring bicycle paths in our Boston parks calls me out, showing that it is easier to oppose than to approve. (It is this that makes editorial life so pleasant! Few express their approval, but all are critics.) As a veteran wheelman of almost twenty years standing — or balancing,— I beg to remind wheelmen that special privileges are usually gained with some loss of general rights, and that absolute rights are safer to hang by than favors granted.

When we began to ride wheels (five feet high and weighing one hundred pounds, my young friends!), in 1877 and 78, the drivers of horses, feeling, as they always have, that the roads belonged to them, told us that we had no business in the road, that we belonged on the sidewalks, and it was actually an open question for a time which part of the "King's highway" we could use. Thanks to Chas. E. Pratt, Esq., the father of the League, the position was taken and maintained that the bicycle was a vehicle, and it was the first duty of the League,— and indeed one of its reasons for being, — to establish that it had as much right in the road as any vehicle, be it a wheel-barrow or a four-in-hand. The wheelmen of to-day little know with what labor and expense our rights to the road were established. Eminent counsel were engaged, legislative acts, city ordinances and court decisions were obtained, and circulated for the use of wheelmen whose rights were threatened, and it was by this early work of the few hundreds of cyclers of that day that the happiness of the millions who now ride the wheel was made possible.

Let your loyalty to the League to-day repay the debt you owe it for its labors then — a debt due from every person who rides a wheel. Had we taken up with any such bait then as "special bicycle paths in parks," we should have been confined to them, and the pleasures of touring, the opportunity which the wheel gives to the cramped city resident to get out into the country, and to enjoy the sweet sights and sounds and smells of nature would have been lost.

I fear, even now, that the result of obtaining special paths will be a strong feeling by drivers of horses that we do not belong with them on the good roads which we have done so much to create and to the extension and improvement of which we should bend all our energies, not selfishly, but for the use of everybody everywhere.

I cannot but feel that this demand for paths comes largely from the few who want to "scorch" and that it will be no benefit to the many who ride for higher pleasures and who would feel as unsafe on bicycle paths as they can possibly be on crowded parkways.

The "scorchers" would make the paths a terror to all riders who ride at a legal pace and obey the laws of the road. And this brings me to the greatest danger to cycling to-day. We MUST OBEY THE LAWS OF THE ROAD or we shall lose the right to the road. I wish that you would print in bold faced type in every issue, "TURN TO THE RIGHT WHEN meeting, AND TO THE LEFT WHEN passing ANY PERSON OR TEAM. RIDE ON THE RIGHT-HAND SIDE OF THE ROAD." This or something like it ought to be printed on every League ticket and on its stationery and made prominent. I would like to see it made a pledge necessary to admission to the League. If the L. A. W. does not make cyclers obey the law, State law will.

If we obey the laws and stick to the road, to the right-hand side of it, and keep on encouraging GOOD ROADS, we shall need no special paths.

Yours for the L. A. W.,

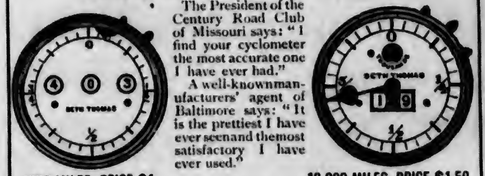
HOW IT WORKS IN NEW JERSEY.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

The Penn. Central R. R. charges for bicycles; the New Jersey Central R. R. does not. These roads run parallel along the Jersey coast to Long Branch, Barnegat Bay, etc.

These tickets are interchangeable; you can take either line as you fancy. For several reasons, that is not necessary to specify, the P. C. R. R. is rather preferable to the N. J. C. R. R., but the fact that the last gives the wheelmen the privilege of carrying his wheel as baggage, has biased me in favor of going by that road, although I do not carry a wheel.



One day last week we counted eight passengers on the N. J. C. R. R, whom we knew, who were giving their preference to this road on this ground and on no other. The P. C. R. R. is generally considered the most liberal managed road of the two, but their action in the matter of wheels has induced hundreds to go by the N. J. Central road, and they give expression to their preference to the most liberal road on the Jersey coast.

The Jersey Central pursues this same policy on its other branches, — viz: The N. J. Southern by the steamboats, and on its line to Easton in Pennsylvania.

TOW-PATHS FOR BICYCLES.

Superintendent of Public Works, George W. Aldridge, who, more than a year ago, suggested the possibility of utilizing the tow-path along the line of the New York State canals for bicycle purposes, is one of the most loyal members of the New York Division, L. A. W. He still believes that the tow-path forms the best bicycle path to be found anywhere, and he believes that it can be made of practical use by wheelmen, without in any way interfering with the regular navigation.

Following up his suggestion in this matter, Superintendent Aldridge has issued orders to the superintendents of repairs along the whole line of the canals, to do what they can to place the banks in condition for wheeling purposes, without interfering in any way with their regular duties. In carrying out these orders the superintendents will be working in the interests of the regular patrons of the canals, since it means better roadways for the hauling teams. At least, that is the way Mr. Aldridge looks at the matter.

In making the extensive improvements under the $9,000,000 law, Mr. Aldridge believes that by keeping the wheeling interests in mind, the banks can be put in such shape as will make them equal to cinder paths purposely constructed for wheelmen.

This is a matter that the present experiment may have some bearing on. Heretofore wheelmen who have used the tow-path of the canals have been looked upon as trespassers. The superintendent's order to his subordinates on this point is of such a nature that the wheelmen will be looked upon as having rights. The order practically amounts to throwing open to the wheelmen six hundred and twenty-two miles of side paths.

For much of the distance these tow-paths form the only level stretch of road through that section of the State where they pass, and the country traversed by them is by far the most picturesque to be found in the State.

A GOOD ROADS PLANK.

One of the planks in the platform adopted by the Republican State Convention at Bangor, Me., June 2, is as follows: "Improved highways, a movement for which has been inaugurated by our State Board of Trade. Good Roads mean improved facilities, enlarged intercourse, increased revenue and better citizenship. We earnestly recommend such careful consideration and the passage of such laws as the importance of this matter demands."

THE better the roads the more "go" a community will have about it.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A VETERAN.

BY THE LATE HENRY BENTLEY.*

Concluding Paper.

Coming down a mountainous road, some ten years since, there suddenly appeared coming toward me a poor old horse and wagon, with a sickly-looking boy of ten or twelve years, who was driving, but, who, on seeing me gliding toward him, set up a loud outcry. As the road was a lonely one and lined with melancholy hemlocks, I saw the poor little fellow was frightened, so I jumped off and, laying my wheel down, strode forward, and with gentle and assuring tones soon dried his tears.

"Mister," said the poor lad, "I'm very nervous, for I've had the fever and I ain't very strong, and seeing you on that big wheel I was afraid you might hurt me. Won't you please let me hurry home, 'cause I know mother 'll be looking out of the window for me?"

Poor child, thought I, and, putting into his hand a dime, told him to hurry along to mother. How often in past years have I thought of that pale face and attenuated form who was so alarmed at my appearance among the rocks and stones of the Fishkill mountains, and I trust he and his mother have both sought some place less infested with spotted adders and desolate surroundings.

The hills of northern and western Massachusetts were always pleasant to me, even in those days long before Good Roads preached its forcible sermons, or the average intelligent farmer had more than a dim idea of the badness of an average country road. How soon was all this to be changed by gentle, quiet, but resistless enthusiasm of the wheelman! What a change one who rode along those roads twelve or fifteen years since may see if he rides over them now, and yet how much greater the change will seem in as many years more! Because the sons of the farmer, and often the head of the family, himself, has his wheel; the daughter, who perhaps teaches some "district school" a mile or several of them distant, can, in the morning mount her wheel, and go to her daily duties and return home at the close of the day's labor, and thus possibly save the price of her board which she would otherwise have to pay out to others.

Improved roads is the order of the day all over the country, and while we old riders have long since observed a great and general improvement in them wherever we go, it will soon be the case that the grandfather, the father, and the son will all have their wheels, and probably the grandmother, the mother and the daughter, also. The mother and the daughter are already in line, and I hope the grandmother may "get there," too.

Horseback riding has always been considered as one of the most salutary forms of exercise, and in the far past a learned physician recommended the outside of a horse as being good for the inside of a man. As for myself, up to about the period of my taking hold of the wheel, I never thought that the back of a horse could be improved on as a means for a gentle tonic and pleasurable exercise; but after a brief interval the horse was tabooed, and ever has been since, by myself, as well as countless others, except before the family carriage or for necessary business purposes.

* Mr. Bentley, whose death occurred at his home in Philadelphia last year, was one of the first prominent, substantial citizens to take up bicycle riding. He was one of Philadelphia's best-known and most highly respected merchants. The several articles regarding his experiences on the bicycle, when wheel-riding was a new thing, were prepared for the editor of the L. A. W. BULLETIN a short time before Mr. Bentley's death, and were found recently among his papers.

For health we must have both reasonable exercise and pure air. In what other manner can one so well get this combination as on one of the many kinds of safeties, and in quality beyond criticism? When I look back forty-five years, and see myself walking from five to ten miles across the country, in order to attend some little evening jollification peculiar to those days, because all the horses had to work every day and they could not be used, I wonder how we stood it. True, it may be said, that if the bicycle had then been brought out, save for three or four months of the year, the highways were in such shape that it would have been, generally speaking, useless on them, such was their horrible condition.

Even a careless observer can see what our highways are likely to be in ten or fifteen years from this time, judging by the influence the wheelmen have already exercised over even the dumbest country "road master," within five years past. This functionary, perhaps, has a son or two who have chosen to invest in a wheel instead of a horse and buggy, and so have some of their friends and neighbors, and as they grind their devious ways over and in the ruts, mud holes, gullied hillsides, and among the loose cobbles of country byways, they universally declare that this kind of road making "has got to stop!" And so it comes about that now every time a new "road master" or overseer of highways is to be selected, the "boys" see to it that he is a man who will use his best efforts to really improve the roadways; and while even the most disinterested rider may never give thought of the farmer, as he rolls by on his silent steed, nevertheless the quiet and resistless influence of the wheel is gradually and surely increasing the value of most farm land by causing a great improvement in roads, as well as promoting intercourse between families, especially the younger members of them, thereby affording a healthy and pleasurable excitement which will go very far towards making thousands of young men, and women also, more content with that lonely country life which has sent so many to our cities to their final disadvantage.

The pleasant little country inns and country cross-road stores will again welcome the bicycler, who must have calling-places, as he rides away in search of strange scenes and novelties. He must be a dull man, indeed, who, living at all remote from

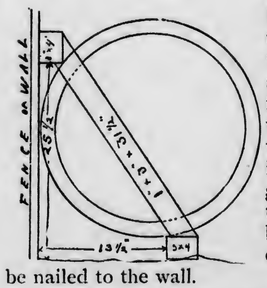
A HIPPOCYCLE.

A correspondent of an English paper believes that in the hippocycle a great advance has been made toward a machine that will be to the horse what the bicycle is to man. The machine is equipped with four 40-inch rubber tired wheels, the two rear wheels being drivers, the forward wheels steerers. The machine is so designed that the horse will propel himself and the vehicle, and there will be two riders, who will do the steering and governing.

The method of transmitting the power from the horse is by a revolving endless platform built upon two chains supported by rollers, the construction being identical with that of the horse-power treadmills and with that in small flourmills and wood sawing yards.



In the hippocycle the horse will be as much at rest when going down hill as if he were at home in his stall. Over good roads a speed of fifteen to twenty miles is said to have been made by the hippocycle.

A SIMPLE CYCLE STAND.

Richard W. Jones, of Brooklyn, who is a member of Potter's loyal twelve thousand, sends us the accompanying drawing of a simple device for stabling the unstable safety. It hardly needs any explanation. As will be seen by the sketch, it holds the bicycle against "backing out" of its stall and also holds front wheel straight with the machine. We would suggest that 2 x 4 inches would do for the ground timber, while the upper one might be still smaller, or the diagonal braces might be nailed to the wall.

THE trustees of Geneva, N. Y., have appointed twenty-five L. A. W. members as special officers, whose mission it will be to put a stop to bicycle scorching. This city claims the credit of being the first to inaugurate the plan of appointing L. A. W. policemen.

GLORY ANNA.

I have seen the dazzling beauty of the swiftly flying wheel;
I have seen its air filled tires and its bars of brightest steel;
And I know just how its rider, as he flys along, does feel,—
As he goes riding on.

CHORUS:—Glory! glory! hallelujah! (repeat twice) As they go riding on.

I know that they are happy, happy, happy all the day;
I know they feel like singing "Yankee Doodle" all the way;
I know they are rejoicing that they did not stay away,—
As they go riding on.

CHORUS.

So come, my brothers, sisters, all, and let us have some fun;
Come far out in the country bright for just a little "run";
We surely shall reach home before the setting of the sun,—
As we go riding on.

IN SOME communities a rut is permitted to remain in a road for a whole season, when a few minutes' work would fix it. It should be somebody's work to look after these things.

LAST YEAR 37 towns in Connecticut began the work of macadamizing their roads, and this year it is estimated that more than 80 towns will be engaged upon such improvements. The towns begin in a small way, the average length of road reconstructed last year in each town being from half to three-quarters of a mile. The State, the county and the town each pay one-third of the cost of the work, and the State's appropriation is $75,000, while three State commissioners supervise the work. The proof of the popular satisfaction with the system is the increase this year in the number of towns adopting it.

A Matter of Form.

JOHN BECK.

The rule holds good, I reason it,—

Would be the belle of the season (nit).

"LOVERS' LANE."

NIXON WATERMAN.

OUR "Lovers' Lane" is fairer far
Than all the garish highways are.
For in its shade is naught to mar
Shy Cupid's principality;
And when, upon our tandem, she
And I are there, it seems to me
Superfluous would heaven be
But for its immortality.

The mystic whisper of the breeze,
From all the clover-scented leas,
Where busy, honey-laden bees
Their winter sweets are gathering;
Tells of the cradles in the sky,
The nests amid the branches high,
That happy birds with joyous cry
Are very softly feathering.

Oh, "Lovers' Lane," oh skies of June,
Oh, blissful heart with heart in tune,
And splintered light of sun or moon
Amid the branches shimmering!
If, when the winter days are near
And fields are sad and skies are drear,
She will not then my story hear,
My dreams will all go glimmering

THIS is the month of roses and other pretty bloomers.

A STREET sprinkler is no doubt a good thing when it is 'nt a pour thing.

THE lover who with his sweetheart rides a tandem has something nice to look forward to.

A SADDLE that does n't fit is n't fit to ride.

IS A knickerbocker girl to be praised for her gentlemanly appearance on the wheel?

IF YOUR saddle is n't easy, sad 'll be your journey.

ROAD MAPS.

There can be no question that the most desirable map is the one which furnishes in the plainest manner the information required by the tourist without giving a lot of unnecessary lines and information which tend to confuse.

When the tourist wishes to travel from one point to another, the easiest map for him to understand and the one which for the time he will value most highly is the map which shows the road he should go and that only, hence such books as those issued by New York State, entitled "Fifty Miles Around New York," Buffalo or other places, are very eagerly sought for by riders. The value of such maps is coming to be appreciated by advertisers who are issuing these single route maps in connection with an advertisement calling attention to their business.

One of the latest comes to us from Lincoln Holland, local consul at Worcester, Mass., and gives the route from Boston to Worcester and intermediate points.

Maps of this kind should be made to show all cross roads, giving the names, and in many instances it is practical to say what towns they lead to.

Given a complete road map, it is a very easy matter to lay over it a piece of tracing paper or cloth and trace so much of it as is needed for a given route. From such tracing, by the photo engraving process, a plate is easily and cheaply made.

It's Full of Hats.

There 's a saying we hear, that is faulty we fear,
And we ought to permit it to drop;
For it 's false when we say while attending the play,
"There is plenty of room at the top."

WIDE TIRES.

S. M. HARRIS.

It seems to be generally understood that something must be done to improve our country roads. But the question now is, What shall we do?

I live about six miles from Rochester, N. Y., and am constantly driving between my home and the city, and so I am not only very much interested in the question of road improvement, but have also had abundant opportunity to observe the effects of weather and traffic on our present gravel and earth roads, and I have recently been very much impressed with the great improvement effected in the condition of the roads simply by the use of wide tires on loaded wagons.

The city of Rochester has adopted an ordinance compelling the use of tires four inches wide on all wagons designed to carry one ton or more. It therefore often happens that some of the wagons with wide tires that are used in the city come out a few miles into the country. The consequence is a marked improvement in the roads near the city, which, on account of the heavy traffic on them, have always been in much worse condition than those further out in the country. These wagons with wide tires, instead of cutting into the road, leaving ruts and holes to catch and hold the water until it soaks in and softens the whole roadbed, actually improve the road by rolling it down hard and leaving it smooth, so that any water that falls on it soon runs off, and does no injury. If such is the effect of a few wagons with wide tires, what would be the result if all wagons carrying heavy loads were constructed in the same way? I am fully convinced that nothing that can be done would work so much improvement to our roads with so little expense as the use of wide tires. Where once tried, I think the wayfaring man, though he be a member of our State Legislature, could not help but see the great advantage to be derived from their use.

The idea of State aid in making road improvement is very popular among farmers, who seem to think that they will get good roads in this way without any trouble or expense to themselves. But even if expensive roadbeds were constructed they would soon be ruined unless the use of narrow tires was prohibited.

It seems to me, therefore, that the first thing that should be done is to enact State or county laws compelling the use of tires at least four inches wide on all wagons designed to carry a ton or more that is used on our public highways. After this is done we can go ahead and make all the improvements we can afford to, with the assurance that the work we do will not be rendered useless within a few years.

Objection is often made to the use of wide tires that they will not run in the ruts, and therefore make the wagon run hard. But if all wagons had wide tires there would not be any ruts. A wagon built with tires wide enough to keep the wheels from cutting into the road will obviously draw more easily than one that ploughs through the mud instead of running over it.

In England this use of wide tires has been general for a great many years, and to this fact is largely due the magnificent condition of the roads there. Why are we so slow to adopt this easy and cheap method of improving our roads?

Let us "get out of the rut," and hereafter roll over smooth roads on wide tires.

THE assessors have done the right thing in taxing the bicycles, and it meets the approval of nearly every wheelman. The board found in their rounds that there are between 600 and 700 bicycles in town which is a much smaller number than was supposed by many. A uniform tax rate has been decided upon and every wheel will be taxed for $50. As the rate is $17 on $1000 this year, it will not cost the wheelmen over 85 cents per "head." The bicyclists will feel much more independent now that they are to be taxed and the town will be more in duty bound to look out for their interests in the shape of good roads, etc. — Westfield (Mass.) Times.

WHEN it began to be apparent that the bicycle was to come into general use as a form of recreation, there were those who predicted that it would seriously injure other forms of outdoor sports. This has been proved to be a mistake. In fact just the contrary is the case and, instead of abating, it has stimulated the interest in baseball, cricket, golf and other field sports, as it has provided a pleasant and sociable way of reaching the place of contest. — Exchange.

CORRESPONDENCE

CONCERNING SOAP.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

In the L. A. W. BULLETIN of June 6 we notice "Some Bicycle Hints" taken from the Buffalo Express, in which this occurs:

"Try a little soap on your chain if it seems to run hard. It is better than graphite."

Anyone familiar with mechanics and lubricants, will understand that while soap is under some conditions a good lubricant, the retention of it on metal surfaces usually means rust. Furthermore, soap on a bicycle chain will saponify the oil on the pivots, and while it, as the Buffalo Express hints, may in a slight degree hurt the sale of graphite, it will many times more hurt the man who has invested his dollars in a bicycle.

Furthermore, among the hints quoted by the Buffalo Express occurs this one:

"Don't let rain drops dry on your nickel. Every spot means a rust spot."

As soap largely contains water, and more or less free potash, every spot of soap means rust as surely as a drop of water does, and it will attack the unprotected steel even more than it will the nickel: therefore, wheelmen should be cautioned about using soap, especially if it happens to be kitchen soap.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

Would it not be a good idea to have the L. A. W.'s official indorsement extended to the proposed bicycle registration and tax law of Philadelphia, provided, of course, that the same be so amended as to require all "cyclists" to place their photograph and personal description, etc., on file at the "Rogue's Gallery," and to enter into a covenant with the city, agreeing to ride at a rate of speed not greater than one mile an hour, and to display conspicuously an identification tag large enough to be seen and recognized at a distance of at least ten miles, and to guarantee the faithful observance of the same, by giving to the city a bond of twenty thousand dollars? WHAT WIDE TIRES DID.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

Some time ago, while out, shortly after a hard rain, and trying to pick out a path wide enough to ride in, I met a long line of two-wheel dump carts and wheeled scrapers, belonging to a contractor, some forty in all. Before they passed it was impossible to ride in the road, after they passed the riding was really good. "Reason," all wheels had 4-inch tires and rolled the surface instead of cutting it. We have a movement on foot here to try and interest the farmer in this line. If forty wide tired carts will do the above, what would be the effect with all wagons so equipped? Answer: elegant roads all over.

PITTSBURGH, PA., June 11, 1896.

NOW, WILL YOU SIT UP?

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

I trust that the member who writes that he will leave the League if you continue to hammer the hump-backed rider will reconsider the matter and stay; not for the good of the League, but for his own good. If he is open to reason—he must be or he would not have joined the League—and reads the BULLETIN regularly he will soon stop crawling along on his stomach, and sit up and be counted a man.

The monkey position crowds the viscera into a corner, interferes with their function, and sooner or later leaves both body and mind a wreck. Again, it does not allow the rider to see more than a few feet ahead of his wheel, and he loses everything except the dirt and the contempt of his fellow riders.

I have done missionary work in this field for to guess the names of senders of some damaged Standard Cyclometers (presumably sent us for exchange, under our guaranty), as we "cannot tell which from t 'other," since the senders fail to write their names on the packages. Maybe they are blaming us for the delay; for they do not know of our promptness and readiness, and they do not know that they themselves are the fault. If you wish your damaged Cyclometer exchanged with our invariable promptness, it is imperatively necessary that you write your name on the package, for identification, until such time, at least, as we have secured the infallible guesser.

some time and have made quite a few converts, and I would recommend that League members generally take this matter up, particularly in their own "household."

Many young boys ride with their seat tilted up and their nose on the tire because they think only fast riders assume this position. The monkey position does not indicate speed, but does indicate deficiency of gray matter. No. 85,109.

CYCLE PATHS IN CALIFORNIA.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

The Capital City Wheelmen have, so far this season, raised about $1,000 for building paths, or wheelways, as we call them. We have completed about twenty-two miles of path between Sacramento and Folsom and are now engaged in constructing one towards Stockton, a distance of fifty miles, and have some sixteen miles of same finished.

The merchants, farmers and most all classes are taking an active interest in these paths and are doing a great amount of work to assist the wheelmen.

The club has also formed an association in conjunction with the Sacramento Athletic Club to build a recreation park with a one-third banked track and conveniences for all out-of-door sports. Everything is booming here. C. J. ATWATER, No. 99,024.

BOOZE AND THE BICYCLE.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

I heard a conversation the other day that speaks well for the good influence of the wheel. Two young men, evidently workmen in the Carnegie Steel Plant at Homestead, were discussing the best way to go to a small town near by. Both were slightly under the influence of a "jag" producer. One proposed going by train; the other proposed to hire a horse and wagon. Neither of these plans seemed to suit both, so No. 1 proposed they hire two "bikes"; No. 2 said No! because if they did, and the boys should "set-em-up-strong," they could not get home on the "bikes." He says, "Jim, you can't ride a wheel with a jag." It was decided to take a train. C. W. TOWNSEND, No. 78,076.

IT IS MORE BLESSED TO GIVE.

The following criticisms are quoted verbatim from our mail during the last ten days. The selections and the grouping of them is, of course, our own idea, and is done to bring out the startling fact that there seems to be a disagreement:

"I am pleased to observe that you do not devote space to the idiotic custom of bicycle racing"

"I joined the League for the sake of getting a paper which would tell me about bicycle races, and I am disgusted to find that it does-n't do that at all."

"I was pained and grieved to notice that in your last issue you made light of a religious subject. There are many to whom these things are sacred, even if they are not so to you."

"Why don't you give us more of those 'Beer and Hell' articles? Those are what I like. Shake up the dry bones once in a while; it won't hurt 'em any."

"Am pleased that the L. A. W. BULLETIN does not all the time keep harping on bicycle subjects. You are right in assuming that many of us 'have other business.'"

"What right has a bicycle paper to print such a lot of stuff that has no bearing on the subject of wheels."

"In your issue of —— you printed a long story about a tour through ——. Why do you waste space on such things, which are not read? We want more of Mr. Waterman's rhymes."

"Some of the verses in your paper are gems. I clip them all out, and paste them in a scrap-book, and read them over for the entertainment of my friends."

"Why don't you stop that fool poetry and give us something about tours?"

"Why do you weary us with telling how to tighten a bearing? As though we did n't all know that years ago."

"The only things I read in the L. A. W. BULLETIN, except the advertisements, are those little things which show us how to care for our bicycles. Why do you print so few of them?"

"Your article, 'An Apology to the Monkeys,' was tip-top. The humped-up gentry we have no use for; give it to 'em hot."

"I am goin to resin from your wheelmans L. A. W. if you keep talking about stoopin over You ought to no that we hev to do that way if we go fast enuf to kepe warm," etc., etc., etc. Letters come in continuously with suggestions. We have repeatedly asked for them, and we hope to have them indefinitely; but the above extracts will show why we cannot accept and act upon all the advice received.

HE WOULDN'T BE POPULAR.

If William Shakespeare, matchless bard!
Were on the earth to-day,
Just lots of men would try real hard
To keep out of his way.
This statement may seem fetched too far,
And out of reason till
You think how many men there are
Who hate to meet a Bill.

HOW TO CURE RUTS.

"Don't make 'em" is the sage advice of "Farmer Harrison." Mr. Harrison is postmaster at Asbury Park, and a politician of no ordinary ability. He is a farmer of wide experience — one of those broad visioned men who can look farther than the width of any farm, and in looking sees things. His road talks are effective because they are earnest, and he holds the attention of an audience by his unique and homely way of expressing his ideas. He is secretary of the National Road Conference, and a man who is in demand at all meetings where the road question is discussed.

We have all seen in some parts of the country horses driven "wide," i. e., they are hitched with a long "double-tree" and "neck-yoke," the object being to "keep out of the ruts." Mr. Harrison tells when selecting a bicycle. If you're not an experienced rider, buy from a responsible local dealer who sells his wheels at one price. If you you are taking no chances. Clippers are honestly made and honestly sold at honest prices and profits. If you own one you'll be satisfied; if you're not we would like to know the reason why. No reasonable Clipper rider is allowed to remain dissatisfied if we know it.

Don't Trust to Luck

BUY A BUSINESS CLIPPER

it something like this: "The horse isn't a fool, though his driver sometimes is. The horse usually has 'horse sense.' He knows better than to walk in a rut. Now if the horses are 'spread' so that they must travel directly in front of the wagon wheels, then, of course, if the horse keeps out of the ruts himself, the wheels will keep out of them, and the result, if all horses were so hitched, would be to prevent the making of ruts."

We most heartily endorse this plain and obvious solution of the rut problem.

WHAT ARE FLEES?

In the June 5th L. A. W. BULLETIN (the one with the purple and old summer squash cover) was printed a verse about the historic Mary, whose experiences with the little lamb have been so much discussed. That verse was written by the L. A. W. BULLETIN office boy and was accepted by a friend of ours who for the moment sat down to rest in the editorial chair.

Now a correspondent in New York (Potter is up in the country on a vacation and New York is all at sixes and sevens, anyway,) writes and wants to know the thing "with which this chapter opens," as the novelists say. He evidently thought the boy intended to write fleas and that it was a "bad spell," but he says not, and he is surprised that a New York man, and a lawyer at that, should n't know that "flees" mean the same as departures, skedaddles, get outs, etc., and as all these mean action, he feels that his line "the flees were sure to go" is entirely appropriate and quite beyond criticism.

RACE TRACK ETHICS.

The above cut is intended to represent the home stretch of a race track, and is also intended to illustrate a new rule of the racing board now in force. In moving round a curve, of course there is a decided advantage in having the "pole," owing to the shorter distance at that line, and so it has always been allowable for any contestant, whether horse or man, to take the pole when he had passed, by a sufficiently safe distance, the former leader; but on the straight stretch at the finish a different state of things exists. If three riders enter the "straight" at A., C. and E., the nearest route to the tape would be the direct lines to the points B., D. and F., and it is obvious that in this case each man would stand an exactly equal chance of winning, the question being purely one of physical ability. But if A. should attempt to take the pole and finish at F., he must travel a longer distance to do it, so that his only object in going to the inner side of the track would be to get in front of E., who might thus be beaten while having in reality the speed of a winner.

This rule has always been in force at horse races, but has but recently become a part of the bicycler's code.

"RED, WHITE AND BLUE LAWS"

instead of simply "blue laws," are suggested by one of our readers, who says he is interested in things "Leagueal." He objects to the attempt that is being made in some quarters to prevent parents carrying children on bicycles, and suggests that such interference with the rights of parents savors too much of "paternalism."

THE wise man feels his unimportance: the fool is willing he should.

MANUFACTURERS WILL ENTERTAIN.

We learn that many of the principal bicycle manufacturers will keep "open house" in some convenient hotel during the Louisville Meet.

It is pleasant for the average L. A. W. member to hear that in addition to the well-known hospitality of the "Louisvillains," he will be asked to "have something" by twenty-five or thirty different cycle makers, even though the question may resolve itself into one of individual capacity.

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.

We recently spoke of the trip to the famous cave as being one of the interesting features of the National '96 Meet, and added that "all railroads running into Louisville would take wheels free on this occasion at least."

We have a letter from the passenger department of the Chesapeake & Ohio R. R., saying that they have carried wheels as baggage for the last five years and will be glad to carry to the Louisville Meet as many as are offered, even if they have to put on extra baggage cars. We are also reminded that the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. has always carried wheels as baggage, and announce that they will be glad to pay particular attention to them on this occasion.

Cheap Bicycles

ONE of the largest manufacturers in the West has a few hundred high-grade machines ready to assemble that were made up on the order and specifications of a prominent bicycle jobber. They are first-class goods, fitted with the very best of tool steel bearings, and in every way up to date. They have been selling at $100.00 list, and are as good as any other make listing at that figure. The jobber cannot use his entire order, and they are offered and will be sold singly or in lots to suit purchasers at Zimmerman.

The Union Cycle Mfg. Co., Boston, Mass., has issued a unique midsummer booklet, through which the Egyptian style of art runs riot, making a catalogue as grotesque as it is interesting.

MAYOR SWIFT, of Chicago, says: — "I see no reason why all vehicles should not be compelled to carry lighted lamps at night. We should not discriminate against the cyclists. I regard the practice of permitting carriages to go about at night without lamps to be fully as dangerous as allowing bicyclists to ride without lights."

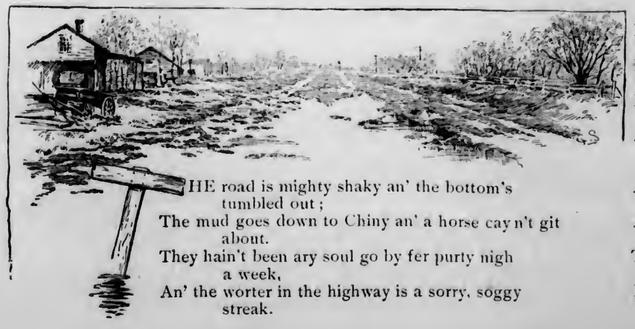
CHICAGO

HOW IT IS DONE IN DENVER.

BY E. S. HARTWELL, TREASURER OF THE L. A. W.

The associated cycling clubs of this city, in conjunction with officers of the State Division, recently succeeded in securing the passage of a bicycle ordinance of their own framing, among other provisions of which is one regulating the speed of all vehicles within certain portions of the city.



The A. C. C. then requested the chief of police to appoint as "specials" about twenty-five of our best-known wheelmen, to aid in the enforcement of the new ordinance.

The plan is working admirably. The number of accidents is greatly diminished, scorching is reduced to a minimum, and a vehicle seen traveling on the left side of the street has almost grown to be a novelty.

A courteous request from one of the "specials" to an offender to observe the ordinance is usually sufficient, but when a bulldozer is occasionally met with a single glimpse of the official star never fails to bring the law-breaker speedily to time.

Horse-meat is growing scarce, they say,
But with cycle meets it's the other way.

"THERE are many holes in a skimmer."

THE road is mighty shaky an' the bottom's tumbled out;
The mud goes down to Chiny an' a horse cay n't git about.
They hain't been ary soul go by fer purty nigh a week,
An' the worter in the highway is a sorry, soggy streak.

I hain't got no terbaccer ner I cay n't git enny more,
Fer I'm too old an' stiff to climb the fences to the store.
It's lonesome ez a funeral to hev to stay an' stay
A-waitin' fer the worter fer to sort o' ooze away.

An' yit it's gratifyin', ez I'm lookin' through the pane.
An' watch the road a-sinkin' in the drizzle o' the rain.
To know 'at while the mud prevents a-haulin' of a load,
It keeps them blame bisickle chaps from usin' o' the road.

Select Cycle Tours

Through Nova Scotia.

From YARMOUTH TO HALIFAX two routes can be taken: The Western Shore route and the Annapolis Valley route; the latter is preferred on account of the railway being within easy distance and the first part of the road very fine. The former is about the same distance, two hundred and twenty-seven miles, with some beautiful scenery and spots of splendid roads, but not altogether so good as the Annapolis route.

Yarmouth is entered usually early in the morning from Boston by boat. The "Grand Hotel" ($2.50 to $3.50 per day) is best, and run by an American. The "Queen," $1.50 to $3.00, and "Lorne" are the other hotels. There is a bicycle club here, Stanley Hood, secretary.

YARMOUTH TO DIGBY, seventy-two miles. The road is one of the best in the Province. Maitland is the first town, twelve and three-fourths miles; Metegan next of any size, twenty-nine miles from Yarmouth. Along here the inhabitants are mostly French, and the road, the whole distance to Digby, is in sight of the Bay of Fundy or St. Mary's Bay. Wm. Germain has a good house at Metegan.

WEYMOUTH is twenty-one miles further on. R. L. Black has a good hotel.

DIGBY, twenty-two miles, looking on the Annapolis Basin, and the North Mountains in view. "New Royal Hotel" is where we put up.

DIGBY TO ANNAPOLIS is about twenty-five miles; roads fair, although some parts are poor. Annapolis Basin nearly always in sight. Bear River would be a short side trip and is worthy of a visit.

At Annapolis the ancient Port Royal can still be seen, the ruins of the old French forts and barracks.

ANNAPOLIS TO BRIDGETOWN, about twelve miles is a fine run, and the best of Nova Scotian apples come from here, from the North Mountain at Bellesville. The whole Valley can be seen, including Annapolis, Digby and Bridgetown, one-half mile further up the Bay of Fundy, and the smoke of St. John across the Bay.

From BRIDGETOWN TO LAWRENCETOWN is eight miles, and from here to Kentville the direct road is very sandy. In some places side paths are good, but the best route would be along the North Mountain road to Canning; do not fail to visit the look-off on Blomidon; take your wheels, as a spin can be taken on the top.

CANNING TO KENTVILLE, about twelve miles, roads fair, but soft in some places.

KENTVILLE TO WOLFVILLE about nine miles. Here, if you wish a climb over the mountain, a fine run can be had through the Gaspereaux valley to Windsor, distance about twenty miles.

WINDSOR TO HALIFAX, about forty-five miles; first part of the road fine, getting worse as it nears Halifax. Five miles from Halifax the Ramblers have their club house at Prince's Lodge, an historic place on the Bedford Basin. Try to arrange for spending Sunday in Halifax, as the Imperial troops parade for church, and is an interesting sight for visitors.

Halifax is the most British city in America; their natural park at Point Pleasant and the Public Gardens can hardly be equalled on this continent. Population about 50,000, with many points of interest.

This summer, July 28 to 31, the city intends holding a summer carnival, including boat racing, naval and military reviews, etc., etc.

The "Halifax," "Queen" and "Albion" are the leading hotels; the former, I think, the best.

HALIFAX TO ST. JOHN, N. B. Cross the ferry to Dartmouth; take road to Waverly, twelve miles which is fair, then you strike bad roads for five miles (about the worst you can find in Nova Scotia) to Enfield about thirty miles; to Truro the road is either mud or thick dust, very bad in parts, but fair near the town; thirty miles. "Prince of Wales" or "Learmont" are good; we have put up at both, the latter best; treated us fine. Bicycle club, W. A. Fitch a good member.

A fine run can be taken from here to Five Islands, fifty-six miles, over delightful roads, including Londonderry Iron Works. Have not been over the road from Truro to Amherst, about eighty miles; understand some of it is good, but mostly bad, and one part over a mountain.

AMHERST TO MONCTON about forty-five miles over fair roads. Can take in Sackville (Mount Allison University and Art Gallery); also the Maritime Penitentiary at Dorchester. "Brunswick Hotel," which is not extra, but believe the best there.

MONCTON TO PETITCODIAC twenty-four miles. Understand the road is very bad; the first thirteen miles are fair. Mr. W. H. Squire of Meriden, Conn., U. S. A., can give better description of this portion (Truro to Sussex). At Sussex, twenty-two miles, the roads are fine; put up at Mrs. McLean's.

SUSSEX TO ST. JOHN, forty-nine miles. The road could not be much better; only one hill to speak of. The "Victoria," "Royal" or "Dufferin" Hotels are all good; we put up at the former, although the latter is considered the best.

The St. John Bicycle Club have the best club rooms in the Province; they are royal entertainers, as many visitors, including Americans, can testify.

Yarmouth to Halifax, via Western Shore.

YARMOUTH TO TUSKET. Road good about ten miles. Lower Argyle fifteen miles; fine scenery, roads good; put up at the "Acadian Hotel," Leon Amero, proprietor. Next Barrington, either through the nine-mile roads or around the shore; the former is shorter, lonesome and rather rough, but we took that way, twenty-three miles. S. B. Coffin will treat you well. Next, Clyde River, about eight miles. Shelburne eighteen miles.

We put up at the "Shelburne House," but won't go there again. Mr. J. W. Etherington, at that place, will tell you where to get a good meal.

LOCKEPORT next, about twenty-one miles; road fair. "Sea View House." J. F. Bill is a prominent wheelman there.

On account of the reports of bad roads and many hills, we took the steamer between Liverpool and Lockeport, about forty miles; but understand the roads are not too bad.

At Liverpool put up with Mr. Schultz, "Trilby Hotel."

LIVERPOOL TO BRIDGEWATER is a splendid run of thirty miles, Mill village being about ten miles out. Put up at the "Fairview Hotel" and take a view from the roof. The LaHave river is the Hudson of Nova Scotia, and a run down on either side would well repay the wheelmen; roads fine and scenery better; milk in plenty.

Lunenburg is fourteen miles from Bridgewater, and a fine little town with a lively cycle club. "King's Hotel" is the best.

CHESTER is the next place on the way to Halfax; twenty miles. Be sure and put up at "Manning's;" almost sure to find some American visitors there. In this twenty miles will be found a stretch of five miles of the road, the best in Nova Scotia, alongside the shore.

Mahone Bay is only seven and three-fourths miles from Lunenburg.

HUBBARD'S COVE is next, about fourteen miles, over hilly roads. A. W. Shatford will give you a good meal.

ST. MARGARET'S BAY next, eleven miles; fine scenery; roads good in places..

Halifax, twenty miles; first seven miles bad with up grade; then good, with about eight miles of down grade to the Northwest Arm, the western boundary of the city over good roads.

Eastern Route, via Guysboro and Eastern Shore.

Leaving Truro take road to New Glasgow, about forty-two miles. over the Onslow Mountain; road fair, splendid in parts, rather dusty nearing New Glasgow. Club here, who are fine fellows (A. D. Grant will give any information). Put up at "—— Hotel," McDermott, proprietor.

ANTIGONISH via the shore road is a splendid run. Arasaig is a beauty spot, and the road into Antigonish, about forty-three miles, is very fine. "Cunningham" or "Central" are the hotels.

GUYSBORO is a small but beautifully situated town, thirty-eight miles, over a fine road, up grade at first but about fifteen miles of down grade at the finish, ten miles of which run alongside the Milford-haven river. "Grant's Hotel." Beautiful sailing or boating.

Waverley BICYCLES.

The Pioneer High Grade at a Fair Price

Less than four years ago the first Waverley Bicycles were offered to the world at one-third less than other high-grade wheels. This was followed by yearly reductions in price of every other prominent make. Quite significant, is it not? It is a question of only a short time when there will not be a high-grade wheel sold above the price of the Waverley, for no bicycle at a higher price can successfully compete with it, because it is impossible to build better. Every part is made from the finest material, and every device is practical. Nothing has been overlooked necessary to entitle the Waverley to the distinction of highest of all high grades. WHO EVER SAW ONE?

The cycling tramp is one of the products of the wheeling craze, and is, if possible, more objectionable than his pedestrian progenitor. His machine and his vestiges of respectability enable him to approach you more readily, and he is harder to shake off and seems to possess a greater variety of woeful tales to support his application for a temporary loan. He is indigenous in America, has been introduced into England, where he is rapidly becoming acclimatized, and we fear he may before long put in an appearance in this country—absit omen. — Irish Cyclist.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

No doubt a lucrative business can be acquired by enterprising men with some mechanical knowledge, by calling at the homes of owners of wheels and contracting to clean same at a moderate price, and, if desired, make light repairs. Many cyclists, especially ladies, would willingly pay for this convenience, as frequently it is left to the care of inexperienced servants. Wheels are often condemned for want of proper cleaning. I. BEAUTIFUL HIGHWAYS.

PRACTICAL things precede the poetical. The beautiful must ever follow after and be dependent upon the useful. Good roads will be followed by beautiful roads.

The planting of trees and shrubs and the parking of the sides or centre of the public highways, may lend to them all the charm of a well-kept private grounds.

Sometime, beautiful flowers may border the public highways where ragweeds now flourish. Think of the charming effects that may be produced when the innumerable miles of highways are made as attractive as is a metropolitan boulevard system! The rustic seats placed at easy intervals amid the flowering shrubs and over-arching trees, will afford delightful resting places beside the perfect roads bordered by cycle paths. The public highways will then be continuous parkways of pleasure and the muddy, rocky and weedy "road" will have become a thing of the past.

The dream of perfect highways is as practical as it is beautiful. We shall stamp improvement on the wings of Time. Everywhere the uplifting forces are at work, by the slow but certain processes of evolution, making the highways more practical and more beautiful. The delightful possibilities in the development of highways are just dawning on the people of this land. They see that within their

THROUGH THE TUNNELS.

The L. A. W. has scored a victory over the West Chicago Street Railway Co.

As the reader probably knows, the North and West sides of Chicago are separated from the main business portion by the Chicago river, and cable trains from those two sides pass under it through tunnels, one from the North and two from the West side.

As the approaches to the bridges over the river are in most cases very rough, and crowded with teams, a number of wheelmen have been in the habit of riding through the tunnels.

Two of the tunnels are very narrow and dangerous, while the other, the Van Buren St., has seven feet between the tracks, and consequently has not as yet been the scene of an accident.

Recently a member of this division, Guy R. Ainsworth, while out collecting for the firm for which he works, started to ride through the Van Buren St. tunnel, but was stopped rather suddenly by one of the tunnel cleaners thrusting a long stick under his wheel giving him a very bad fall, resulting in a gash in his arm, from striking on his broken handle bar.

He appealed to the League officers, who had the man arrested, and when the case was brought to trial their attorney tangled up the company's employee so badly, that he was forced to tell the truth, and was promptly fined. During the progress of the cross-examination the attorney of the Company

MAKE IT AN ISSUE.

Discussing the bad roads question in the light of a local campaign issue, the Los Angeles, Cal., Times makes the pertinent suggestion:

"By way of a starter in this matter, how would it do this fall to make candidates for supervisors take a cast-iron pledge to favor a comprehensive system of road improvement that will put an end to the present extravagant method of tinkering roads, and give us the beginning of a first-class system of public highways? Our present method, or rather lack of method, of constructing roads is extravagant and ridiculous, and would have excited the derision of those early road builders two thousand years or more ago, whose work still remains in good preservation on the continent of Europe. The American idea of a country road appears to be to level off the soil, and wherever there is a hole filling it with loose dirt — and then filling it again. It needs as much science to construct a first-class road that will last as it does to put up a building, yet it is taken for granted that the first man you meet on the street can build a road. Consequently it is no wonder that the roads of this country cost every five years almost as much as the court house, and then we have nothing to show for it."

THERE is an organization of wheelmen in Atlanta known as the "Good Roads Club." This club, in addition to its regular bicycle exercise and sport, is paying special attention to the development of Good Roads in and around that city. It is not content with mere talk about the subject, but its runs makes investigations regarding the condition of the roads and reports upon it to the commissioners, besides taking other practical measures for improving the highways. This is a useful channel for wheelmen's energies. Bicycle side paths are all well enough for a makeshift, but the wheelmen should bring their influence and numbers to bear upon the authorities in the matter of securing Good Roads. — Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat.

TO PRESERVE NICKEL.

There are many compounds advertised (and most of them are good) for preserving the bright surface of nickel-plated work. In the absence of anything specially prepared for the purpose, take any oil that is suitable for lubricating the bearings, and rub the bright work thoroughly with it. If the machine is to be left standing for a few days, leave the oil on until you are ready to use it; then rub the surface vigorously with a dry cloth.

TOURISTS TO CANADA.

You cannot enter your wheels without presenting the proper membership ticket. Temporary certificates cannot be accepted, as it would be possible for a tourist to enter one wheel on the certificate and another on his membership ticket.

Wolfe Island is not a port of entry. The only customs official there is a Preventive Officer who is frequently absent. Wheelmen must not attempt to enter Canada at this point.

One way some supervisors have of repairing roads is to scrape stones, sticks and trash out of the gutters, and leave them lying in the middle of the roads, making some of them nearly impassable. Supervisors may be be indicted for such gross mismanagement. — Kane (Pa.) Republican.

Rev. S. D. Hutsinpiller of the First M. E. Church, Erie, Pa., recently published the following among his announcements:

Eight o'clock. Let us all worship God and think with the Pastor on the topic of the sermon: "A Royal Ride and a Consecrated Steed."

This sermon will suggest how we may use that popular invention, the bicycle, for Christian prosperity.

The latest theatre hat is called the Marie Antoinette. But ladies should remember that the original wearer of it lost her head. — Ex.

"THEY SAY."

"There's nothing the matter with bloomers,"
And the same may be mentioned, by rights,
Of those innocent shockers, the brief knickerbockers,
And what is the matter with tights?
Yet, women forever distress us,
And have since the time of the fall.
The amount that they wear is too great men declare,
Or else the amount is too small.

THE TRIUMPHANT WHEEL.

There is nothing in the highways of popular favor comparable to the triumphant march of the bicycle. Whether this season will witness the apogee of the wheeling furore is inconsequential beside the all-important and ever-pervading fact that the wheelmen own the earth for this one season at least. It may be that the percentage of those who do not ride and never will ride, even though wheels become as plentiful as blackberries in August, will be definitely determined this year, and it may be that the maximum limit of those who will succumb to the blandishments of the spinning multitudes has been reached. But this is a matter interesting only to those who have millions invested in the business.

The thing that is particularly interesting to casual students of sociology just now is the tenacious hold the wheeling craze has upon humanity. Time was when a portion of the more sedate and reserved devotees of polite pursuits regarded the wheeling exercise as undignified. With the passing of the "chimpanzee hump," however, and the tendency to a more erect posture, all classes of humanity seem to have come under its magic spell.

While the wheel threatens disaster to the manufacturers of pills and summer tonics, it is also a standing menace to the utilitarian spirit of the age. It has violently assaulted the old idea that streets were made exclusively for expediting commercial exchanges and that they should be given over entirely to the traffic of those who know nothing but sordid trade. They have rescued Jackson street in this city from the clutches of commercial greed and propose to stay by it until the only connecting link between the west and south park systems is preserved from despoilment by street railway corporations and is handsomely paved.

The political power of the wheelmen when their influence is properly unified and directed has been more manifest in the east than in the west. Notable triumphs of the cycling fraternity in New York are the State law requiring railways to carry bicycles free and the various ordinances in the city of New York providing for the construction of bicycle paths and the boulevarding of streets formerly either neglected or given over to heavy traffic.

The wheel is an evangel of health and sunshine. It is the recognized foe of shriveled lungs, hollow chests and torpid livers. It is a better agency for temperance and good living than all the legislation ever devised by dreamy moralists for making people good. There 's really only one thing as desirable as a clear conscience — a good wheel. — Chicago Times-Herald.

THE COUNTY'S LOSS.

We understand that the wheelmen of the county raised nearly $1,000 and have used it to shell a four-foot path from near Evergreen cemetery to Panama Park. If this amount had been expended by the county commissioners in building a good road on the proposed "good road" to Panama the county would have saved that much, and the wheelmen would have been better served. Though, of course, the county would have had to at once expend a much larger sum from the general funds. The four-foot path is only useful for wheelmen, while a good road to Panama eight feet wide would have given a fine drive for teams, as well as for wheels. We only instance this as a sample of as to what may be done when a system of good roads is inaugurated by combining public and private enterprise. Let the county be prepared to take advantage of like chances in the future. — Jacksonville (Fla.) Metropolis.

THE PSALM OF THE WHEEL.

W. W. SHEPPARD.

(With more apologies to the shades of Longfellow.)

Tell me not, in by gone numbers,
The wheel is but a crazy fad!
For the soul is slow that walketh,
And all wheelmen are not mad.

The wheel is real! scorchers are in earnest!
But the court is oft their goal;
Dust thou art, to mud returnest,
Was not spoken of our highways.*

Not enjoyment, but all sorrow
Is the scorchers end and way;
Simply to scorch, that each tomorrow
Find him swifter than to-day.

Centuries are long, and days are fleeting,
And the lungs, though stout and brave,
Still like porpoises are puffing
As they make the steep up grade.

On life's highways, world wide around us,
On the pleasure trips we take,
Be not like dumb driven scorchers!
Use more oft some kind of brake!

Trust not fashion, how e'er popular!
Let the dead past bury its dead!
Ride,—enjoy in the living Present!
Heart within, and God o'erhead!

Lives of racers all remind us,
We can't make our time as fast,
And, departing, leave behind us
Records that can always last.

Records, that perhaps another
Scorching in the crowded street,
A forlorn ambitious brother,
Knowing shall become less fleet.

Let us then, be up and riding,
On good roads for wheels are trumps;
Still enjoying, not a racing,
Learn to wheel without the humps.

*"Probably a misprint"—MARK TWAIN.

JOHNNY, GET YOUR PICK.

Dr. Lyman W. Denton, who holds the chair of political economy in the Northwestern Christian college at Excelsior, Minn., recently used the following language in a lecture on the labor problem:

"The army of Rome made the roads of Rome, and the roads of Rome made Rome. Let's gather wisdom from the lessons of the past. Good Roads are in urgent demand. Why not make the United States army, which is now a useless burden to the toilers of America, a productive factor in our public economy, by putting them to work at making Good Roads? I would stop feeding Coxey's army and the United States army in idleness. I would place the roads of the United States under the supervision of the army of the United States, then issue a call for volunteers, and transfer Coxey's army to the army of the United States. I would transform these two mighty burdens into one grand army of helpfulness."

NIXON WATERMAN.

A STARVING author wrote a book,
With highest thought inspired;
But publishers to whom he took
His manuscript inquired,
"Is this your first?" and when he'd make
Affirmative admission,
They'd say "Our means we dare not stake
Upon a first edition."

The author borrowed type enough
To print the book he'd written;
But over-work and cold rebuff
His flame of life had smitten.
Would that he were alive to-day,
To see his toil's fruition!
For oh, what princely sums we pay
To get his first edition.

CYCLING PROVERBS.

The following proverbs are taken from the catalogue issued by the Revere Cycle Co., Boston:

New cycles ride easy.
Small choice in poor bicycles.
Live and learn (to ride a wheel).
Never too old to learn (to ride).
Faint heart never won a record.
Bicycles don't laugh at tacksmiths.
To a rickety wheel all roads are bad.
You can't ride your wheel and lend it too.
The proof of a bicycle is in the riding.
A reckless rider makes a fat churchyard.
No wheel so poor as not to have its rider.
Experience is the best spoke in your wheel.
Mount in haste and mend your bones at leisure.
A mile in the morning is worth two in the evening.
Beware of the fore part of a cheap horse, the hind part of a cheap mule, and all parts of a cheap bicycle.

GOOD ROADS
A Monthly Magazine Devoted to the Improvement of Public Roads and Streets

THE MOST EXPENSIVE COMMODITY.

The modern man with piles of "stuff"
Can't find to spend it ways enough.
He hunts for costly things to buy.
And sorrows when the market's dry.
He looks for gold and jewels rare,
Yet never seems to be aware
That of all discoveries since the flood,
The costliest far is common mud.

COUNTRY ROADS.

Country roads are commonly divided into two classes — gravel and dirt, writes A. W. Campbell, C. E., Highway Commissioner for Ontario, in Farmers' Advocate. The terms "good" and "bad" are frequently regarded as synonymous with these, and as our roads are usually constructed, this interchange of words is to some extent not without reason. The way to construct a good gravel road is to first build a good dirt road from the natural soil.

A good dirt road to those who have driven through sloughs designated "bad" roads during the past spring will seem an impossibility. And yet these bad roads are chosen in June by the teamster in preference to the "good" gravel roads. These latter are now a collection of parallel ruts, with rocks firmly set, protruding or rolling loose under the wheels and the feet of the horses.

The diseases being so perfectly known, it is a poor recommendation for our inventive powers if we cannot produce the remedies. For dirt roads, take the water out and keep it out; for gravel roads, this and more. There will be less moisture remaining in the roads after the rains fail to assist the disintegrating and upheaving action of the frost. There will be less water to be carried away in the spring, and more ample means to do it quickly. A dry foundation for a road is as necessary as for any other structure. Were the benefits of drainage better known, our system of roads throughout this Province would soon be vastly improved.

Drainage must be secured at the surface of the road and beneath it. Under drainage — there may be a few exceptions — will accomplish more than surface drainage. Where and how to place the drains is a matter regarding which no definite code of laws can be formulated, since each mile or less of roadway may lead to an entirely new combination of circumstances. Surface drainage is attained by rounding up the road bed ordinarily with a rise of not less than one nor more than one and one-half inches to the foot, providing open ditches on each side of the grade. Crown the roadway on hills slightly more, so as to draw the water sharply to the ditches. Water allowed to follow the track of the wheels will wear them to ruts, and deposit a softened mass of mud at the foot of the hill.

The drains running parallel to the road about three feet below the surface and at the edge of the grade will usually afford the best method of underdraining. Take advantage of all natural water courses to relieve the ditches of their water. Use hard, well-burned tile laid carefully to a uniform grade, with a fall of not less than three feet to the mile, and if it can be obtained at reasonable cost, not less than six feet.

Provide culverts where needed, and do not allow the roadway to interfere with natural drainage. Do not build culverts higher than the approaching roadway, as muddy hollows in each side will result. If possible place small culverts below the surface, and cover with earth, as they will be the less subject to wear and will not interfere with the smooth surface of the road. Make culverts permanent. Avoid the use of perishable material. See that proper outlets are made for them and keep free. Water which is allowed to stand in them in frosty weather will destroy the best material.

The surface of the road should be kept smooth and free from ruts. Where gravel or other metal is to be applied it is best to dig a trench for its reception, otherwise the crown will be too high. Gravel is intended to perform the double service of a roof to shed the water and a floor to resist the wear of traffic and to lessen the amount of traction required. A forty per cent. greater load can be drawn by a team over a smooth gravel road in an equally good state of repair. All the work should be done on a uniform plan in a systematic and permanent manner, with a view to its extension on the same plan in subsequent years; this in a short time will secure a perfect system of finished roads.

Modern road machinery, properly operated, is economical. The grader and roller are indispensable. The grader performs the work quicker, easier, cheaper and more perfectly than can be expected from hand labor. The roller compacts the loose material, unites the different particles so as to better resist the load, prevents displacement which forms ruts, and reduces to a minimum resistance to traffic.

A SOFT answer turneth away wrath, but a rough road stirreth up anger.

2000—MISSOURI DIVISION MEET.—2500

TO MEMBERS:

The eleventh annual meet of this division will be held at Moberly, on July 3, 4, 5, and as the date is drawing near, it behooves every loyal member to begin making preparations to attend. A rate of one and one-third fare for the round trip has been made on all railroad lines and we are in hopes of reducing it to one fare flat.

Moberly is centrally located on both the Wabash & M. K. & T. Railways, and is easily accessible from all points of the State. The city has brick streets and hotel accommodations ample to accommodate all who may come.

The programme includes a century run, with a souvenir silver medal for each survivor, and a high-grade entertainment on the first day, besides runs to Macon, Paris and Randolph Springs. For the second day, the programme includes the annual parade, photograph and business meeting of the division in the morning, and the afternoon will be acceptably filled in with the races for which $800 are offered in cash and prizes. Five amateur and two professional events. Entries close June 27. For entry blanks, programmes, etc., write P. J. O'Leary, secretary, Moberly, Mo.

Nominations for officers to be elected by mail vote in October must be made at the business meeting of the division, and no one can be voted for who was not here nominated. The offices are chief consul, vice consul, secretary-treasurer, and one representative-at-large for every two hundred members. It is of the utmost importance to have every member present, therefore.

Rooms at hotels can be engaged in advance on application to Secretary O'Leary. Special reductions will be granted only on presentation of L. A. W. ticket. Rates, $2.00 per day. L. A. W., $1.50.

L. A. W. benefits will be given out to members only, or to those who join at Moberly, with a tourist band. On arrival at Moberly, proceed to headquarters in Merchants Hotel, and receive your badge on presentation of your L. A. W. ticket. This will admit you free to the entertainment on night of July 3, the races on July 4, and another on night of July 4, and the picnic at Randolph Springs, on July 5. Special prizes are offered for the largest and best appearing L. A. W. club in the parade, July 4. Don't fail to be present, and help to make the Moberly meet a record breaker.

MEETING OF LOCAL CONSULS.

A meeting of all local consuls will be held at the Merchants Hotel, Moberly, at 7.30 P. M., July 3. Important business effecting the growth of the division will be transacted, and every officer is requested to be on hand.

ROBT. HOLM, Chief Consul.
ST. LOUIS, June 12, 1896.

OHIO DIVISION.

The annual meeting of the Ohio Division will be held at Dayton, O., on July 2, 3 and 4, 1896. The Phillips House will be League headquarters. The business meeting will convene at 8 P. M. July 2nd, at the Dayton Bicycle Club House. By order of the chief consul.

ARTHUR B. HOWSON, Sec.-Treas.

Dear Sirs:

You may be interested in knowing that I used your bicycle chain graphite exclusively during my 21,000 mile ride around the borders of the United States, and that it gave me entire satisfaction, as is evidenced by the fact that, as stated, I used it to the exclusion of various other makes which were tenderd me free. It saved me much hard work, as its application never failed to cause an easy-running chain.

REPAIRING PUNCTURES.

CORRESPONDENCE

SHAME ON YOU! MEN.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

Several lady riders have called my attention to the fact that they are so frequently accosted by ungentlemanly wheelmen when they ride out in the evening, that they either have to put up with what has become a serious annoyance or forego their evening's pleasure. The ladies referred to do not go out absolutely alone; but in groups of two or three. The majority of the riders they meet act like gentlemen, but there are always a few toughs who make the ride unpleasant.

As the gentlemen are in the majority, they should I think, do everything in their power to put a stop to the evil complained of. Let the ladies enjoy their evening rides unmolested. Each rider should see to it that he does not himself transgress (for even those who think themselves gentlemen sometimes forget to act consistently with that character), and let him frown down and vigorously protest against rudeness on the part of others toward the wheelwomen.

The Great Forest Park Road Race is an annual event of considerable importance in St. Louis, on the occasion of which prominent speed merchants from all parts of the land take part. The former course record was held by Willian Van Wagoner—54 minutes, 9 seconds. Last year "Unpaced Hamilton" did it in 54 minutes, 17 seconds; but this year it was easier, for Laing rode his Rambler and did it in the record time of 53 min., 50 1-5 sec.

A BICYCLE SHED.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

Up to the year 1893 there were a few wheels ridden to the American Waltham Watch Company's establishment (where I am employed).

In the spring of that year there were so many stored around the yard that the company (through the kindness of its president, Mr. E. C. Fitch) voluntarily built a shed, costing $1,080, large enough to hold one hundred wheels. An employee keeping his wheel there pays twenty-five cents per month for the time he actually uses it. The money is paid to the Watch Factory Mutual Relief Association, so the company gets no direct benefit whatever.

No. 64,333.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

What to do with the increasing number of bicycles was a problem the managers of a shoe factory, employing five hundred people, have been wrestling with for the past two years, and perhaps the solving of it will interest other managers and riders.

We hang them up, wheels up, saddles down on hooks screwed into the ceiling. Each rider furnishes hooks for his machine. It effectually puts them out of the way, is inexpensive, and there is no danger of their being banged and scratched up.

The Wicked Chip, or "The Perversity of Inanimate Objects."

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

How many BULLETIN readers have been warned to guard against a serious accident that is liable to occur from the flipping up of an innocent chip or short stick if 't is struck by the wheel just right? Probably but one per cent. In this city of 2,500 riders, I know of but one other than myself who has had the startling experience, although some others whom I do not know have doubtless met with it.

If the chip catches you on a tour many miles from home, 't will do its best to "knock you out" and seriously damage the wheel.

Its manner of doing the trick is something like this: You are jogging along at a good-road pace on a smooth road or side path, feasting your eyes on the many lovely views of hill and dale, etc., when suddenly you pitch out your head, conjuring many shooting stars, whilst your wheel joins in the somersault over you!

On recovering consciousness you look all around for the thing that has so ruthlessly maltreated you.

Whose Fault?

Yours, sir, — for when your damaged Standard Cyclometer reached us, your name was not on the wrapper of the package, consequently we could not identify your property; and there was delay until we could ascertain the name of the sender. Otherwise, the exchanged Cyclometer would have gone to you by return mail.

Don't be careless about this little matter. Write your name on the wrapper of the package, thereby hasten the sending of the exchanged Cyclometer, and so insure your own peace of mind, and add to the joy of our shipping clerk.

AGENTS AT ALL IMPORTANT POINTS.

Your dilapidated wheel gives the clue: a bent valve stem and broken spoke adjoining; and so you next find a small, harmless-looking stick, three or four inches long, with convex ends and a wire print across it. It had flipped up and wedged the front wheel so tight against the fork that it has instantly stopped your progress and brought you to grief.

My experience was startling, disagreeable and expensive. I hope this warning will put my fellow riders on their guard. No. 63,576.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

DOES N'T CARE FOR LOOKS.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN.

I wish to say a word about sitting up while riding a wheel. I have seen riders humped over in front, and some that sat so straight they were humped backward, which is worse than forward. A man in walking leans forward, and the faster he walks or runs, the more he leans forward. Riding a wheel is only sitting down to walk, and the faster you go, the more you will lean forward. When I began to ride I was badly hump-shouldered from working over a bench and lathe; now, I am as straight as any one, and have the name of being a scorcher if I like.

There is as much sense in some one refusing to wear hats because some one else wears his on one side of his head, as there is in refusing to ride a wheel because some one they saw was riding humped over. I, for one, will ride where I have the most comfort, if I have to stand on my head to do so.

E. J. WHITSON, No. 68,487.

HARD AND SOFT TIRES.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

I am of the opinion that the character of the road should in a large measure govern the question of how hard the tire should be. I am seldom out for a run on my wheel but what some "good Samaritan" informs me that I should pump up my tire, which I am in the habit of riding as soft as I can, and still be free from any bumping of the rim on uneven places. The result is I ride over quite rough roads, almost entirely free from the jolting and jar incident to a hard pumped tire. The only place I have found a very full tire to be more pleasant and comfortable than the slack-filled one, is on an asphalt pavement, where a slack filled tire is annoying by reason of the apparent suction created.

Don't ride with a very hard tire until you have given one rather soft a trial, then, if you prefer the hard one, I would suggest a cushion tire and consequent freedom from punctures.

MUD AND MURDER.

IN offering a panacea for almost every known political skin disease, the platform adopted at St. Louis prescribes nothing for curing the serious trouble in the nation's blood. It favors the continued enlargement of the navy and a complete system of harbor and seacoast defences, but says nothing about improving the millions of mud streaks, sometimes mistakenly referred to as public highways.

It seeks to make the nation appear more formidable by giving the coast defences another coat of paint and powder, but does not refer to the superlative advantages to be derived from a great system of national highways and millions of happy, intelligent toilers of the soil.

The strength of a nation cannot be estimated by the size and number of its cannon nor by the thickness of its fortress walls. The happiness, prosperity and well-being of the great, common people is the supreme test of its power. And this power, standing for the defence and good of the nation, should be made graciously apparent throughout all the smiling years of peace, and not simply as a blood-stained monster in an altogether improbable time of international madness, called war.

Total number printed this week, . . . 59,000
Sent to paid Subscribers,. 56,392
Samples to Advertisers, Exchanges, etc., 2,608

In seeking to enlarge the nation's sword it has forgotten to give more strength to the nation's arm.

A deeper and more warlike scowl on the nation's face will count for but little while the nation's arteries and stomach and bowels are filled with mud.

There is really nothing to be gained by pulling the tail-feathers from the great shanghai of commerce and sticking them in the bantam's top-knot of international strife.

"Mud" is the enemy this nation should fight until its isolated communities become one united and prosperous people, with the happy means of mingling in times of peace and massing in times of war.

"Mud" is a present, living, national issue, affecting the happiness of all classes and ages, everywhere. Its extermination would be one far-reaching, perpetual victory for peace and prosperity. Mud costs the nation more, annually, than all the other drains upon its resources combined. It breeds isolation and ignorance, poverty and pollution.

If the means and men employed in the army and navy were put to the service of constructing a vast system of national highways instead of riding military broomsticks in search of straw men set up for the purpose of being torn down, the health of the nation would soon smile its lasting approval and humanity would become more human.

Instead of giving Uncle Sam a thicker coat of mail that it will tire him to carry about, we should so tone up his internal system of blood and brain and brawn that his wonderful physique will become something dazzling to look upon, not only in the red glare of war but in the pure white light of triumphant peace.

We want good roads.

JUST MUD.

BY TENNY'S SON.

Mud, mud, mud,
As far as the eye can see,
And I'm glad my tongue can't utter
The thoughts that arise in me.

O well for the city chap
As he rides on the level street,
And well for the country lad
That he 's born with large, web-feet.

And the half-filled carts go on,
With a little jag of a load,
But O just to feel the joy of a wheel
And a nice, hard, level road.

Mud, mud, mud,
As far as the eye can see,
But the joy I miss on a road like this
Can never come back to me.

Like Finding Money

to own a Business Clipper at the difference in price you pay for it and the other of equal grade. There is no bicycle of equal grade and epual quality sold at a price as low. No maker of bicycles ever produced more satisfactory wearing bicycles at any price. More expensive wheels have been made and sold for more money, but nothing the equal of a Business Clipper has yet been made and sold at anywhere near the same price. This is a broad statement, but our experience during the past three years has convinced us of it. Fine Frames and Best Bearings make them so.

A TWO THOUSAND PACE.

Golden yesterdays are happy twilights in our memories, and hopeful to-morrows are brightening dawns in the rosy sky of anticipation; but the triumphant to-day is a material joy and a present gratification.

The past record of the League of American Wheelmen contains much to be proud of, little to regret. The future is full of the promise of good things. The present is most satisfying.

The number of applicants for membership last week exceeded two thousand, a high-water mark never reached until this year, but now becoming a common occurrence in the growth of the organization.

The worth of the League increases in value to each member as the membership of the organization increases.

The members are now becoming so numerous, and so distributed throughout the whole country, that the fraternal features of the brotherhood of wheelmen is just now becoming happily manifest.

"A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." The membership of the League is now sufficiently large to exert an influence upon the whole body of wheelmen, and it is worthy of note that almost every victory, local or general, that has been achieved, has been won under the L. A. W. banner.

The Good Roads campaign has now become general, in city and country, from Maine to California. More work and more intelligent work is being done than at any previous time.

The public has reached the firm conclusion that the wheel has come "to fill a long felt want," and that it is "here to stay."

Two centuries ago the Roman emperors built a system of highways that remain to-day a priceless legacy to the people.

The influence of the imperial wheel may result in securing highways that shall be a blessing through the centuries yet to be.

The "two thousand a week" pace is one of the most hopeful signs of the times. Yet the pace will be much greater.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

"The wheelmen of the city have at last tired of the indifference of the city authorities to their requests, and are making preparations to assert themselves in obtaining what they believe to be their rights. To that end it is now proposed to form a strong alliance among the different clubs and individual riders and to work along lines that it is hoped will be more effective." — Minneapolis Times.

That's the way to talk. Wheelmen should be careful not to ask for too much, but having determined on what is just, they should stand together for its accomplishment.

Look on the bright side, but ride on the shady side.

THE MISSION OF THE WHEEL.

In ye olden time peoples who lived on the opposite sides of waterways or mountain chains felt it was their bounden duty to fall upon one another whenever they happened to meet, and to smite one another hip and thigh, above or below the belt.

Most of the wars of history were geographical wars. Had the surface of the earth been made all in one piece and all of one character, without distinguishing lines or marks or rivers or ridges; no highlands or lowlands; no seacoast or interior, much of the bloody nightmare called history would never have been written. Creeds and parties would not have been born.

Boundary lines, their establishment and maintenance, have caused a whole lot of trouble, one way and another.

And why? Because a boundary line usually marked the limit of the people's knowledge of men. They did not know, hence they did not love the people on the other side of the waterway or the mountain ridge.

They were strangers and distrusted the motives of one another. They had not learned that deep down in the hearts of all mankind, black and white, savage and civilized, are hidden the same hopes and incentives, and that all the peoples of all the earth are forever doing that which to them somehow seems to be the right and proper thing to do under the circumstances.

Ignorance has been the monster evil of the world. The mountain chain that separated nations was the innocent cause of the mountain of ignorance that stood like a frosty shadow between two peoples. They did not know one another. They lacked knowledge and intercourse. They could not reason. They were shut away from the congress of nations, the parliament of religions, the tournament of peoples, and the illuminating and uplifting forces of a universal convocation of the world's thinkers.

The great world's fairs are designed to bring all nations into closer and better relationship. They are thought to be humanizing, civilizing and Christianizing in their effect.

Anything that facilitates travel and communication among the peoples of the world does those same things.

The bicycle is a leveler and a harmonizer of peoples. It is knitting the world closer together and is broadening and deepening the brotherhood of men. It is bringing the people of city and country into pleasant relationship with each other. They are becoming acquainted. They will love each other more as they know each other better.

During the summer the bicycle will be the means of inducing thousands of citizens of the United States to enjoy tours through Canada. The St. Lawrence River, that has marked their boundary line of knowledge of that beautiful country, will be overcome and the horizon of their intelligence will be broadened. Canada and this land of ours will be brought within sight and hearing of each other. They will be nearer and better neighbors therefor. And thousands of American wheelmen will tour through Europe learning the good things to emulate and the evil things to avoid.

During this winter many northern wheelmen will tour through the south as southern wheelmen are now touring through the north. Knowledge will come of all of this. Not the knowledge one gets from a car window and a guide book, but a knowledge of the real people of the land, those who till the soil and do the world's work.

What the ship and the railroad train have done in a crude, wholesome way, the multitudinous wheel will carry to a happy finish in a minute manner. They will remain the great trunk roots of the international tree of knowledge, but the wheel will be the fibrous fingers that touch the people.

The bicycle, and the smooth and beautiful roads it is, by the force of merit, compelling the world to build, is an evangel of peace and light. With it the prisoner will break away from his isolated cell of narrow ignorance and fly to where the sails of truth from all the harbors of the world come bringing their cargoes of joy.

Regarding the wheel
We, somehow, feel,
And think you will find quite surely,
It's a lack of good care
Much more than the wear
That makes it grow old prematurely.

A BOY'S BEST FRIEND.

His mother is a boy's best friend:
And though the happy, careless youth
Is slow to see it, in the end
There shines upon his mind the truth.
One day of sickness, he will find.
Will much more forcefully instill
This lasting thought into his mind
Than forty books of proverbs will.

TAXATION OF BICYCLES.

Bicycles are personal property and any assessor may tax them as he would a wheelbarrow or a lawn-mower, in proportion to value. The idea of putting a special tax on bicycles is absurd, and should not be seriously considered. The bicycle is not exempt from taxation, so far as we know, in any part of the country, though there may be a temptation to try and make it so if the "special tax" fellows do not subside. If assessors will place a fair valuation on bicycles and treat them as they do other property, we have no doubt wheelmen will, as a rule, be content to accept the situation, but to put a special tax on the soft-footed wheel on the plea that the money is needed to keep up roads is not good logic.

The only place where a special tax should be levied for such a purpose is on the road-destroying narrow-tired wagon.

Cheap Bicycles

ONE of the largest manufacturers in the West has a few hundred high-grade machines ready to assemble that were made up on the order and specifications of a prominent bicycle jobber. They are first-class goods, fitted with the very best of tool steel bearings, and in every way up to date. They have been selling at $100.00 list, and are as good as any other make listing at that figure. The jobber cannot use his entire order, and they are offered and will be sold singly or in lots to suit purchasers at

A NINE-MILE RAILROAD

in North Carolina has just announced a new rule which makes cyclers pay extra for the transportation of their wheels. We are asked by a local wheelman what should be done about it. We don't know what the condition of the wagon road is, but if that is good it should not take long to decide what to do.

This reminds us of a burglar who, on looking at a mail bag which had an elaborate lock on the end of a leather strap, said that a lock on leather "made his jackknife laugh."

A nine-mile railroad that refuses to take cycles as baggage is certainly doing its part toward the building of a new turnpike.

D. B. Shepp, L. A. W. Pennsylvania Division, reports the following:

Scorcher. What sort of roads have you in Bucks county?

Singletube. Real balbriggan.

Scorcher. What do you mean by that?

Singletube. Oh! Fine (k) nit.

BITING DOGS.

A League member in Pennsylvania writes that while riding along a public highway he was attacked and bitten by a savage dog which he "promptly shot," and he asks if in case the owner of the dog sue him will the L. A. W. take care of his case? Answer: This would rest with the State officials of his division. We don't hesitate to predict, however, that they would undertake the case, unless there is some feature that does not appear on the surface. It is not probable, however, that the owner of such a dog would care to have the case come up in court.

SOAK YOUR CHAINS.

A great many wheels have "squeaks" which seem to be either in the crank bearing or chain, and the trouble in nine cases out of ten is that the chain is not properly oiled.

The stick lubricants which one rubs on the chain don't go far enough in, and the strain comes on dry parts. Oil your chain. Soak it in oil or melted mutton tallow and see if it is n't "great."

To the Catskills.

I desire to call the attention of the "Metropolitan District" Wheelmen to a most delightful and inexpensive one-day trip to the Catskills.

ROUTE.

Catskill Evening Line. Steamers leave New York, foot of Christopher street, N. R., daily at 6 P. M. Return: Leave Catskill week days at 6 P. M.; Sunday, 7 P. M. During July and August a special boat at 10 P. M., Sunday only. Excursion, including berth, $1.70; supper 50 cents extra. Wheels carried free and well cared for.

Leaving Catskill Landing about 5 A. M., ride west through Palenville (at foot of the mountain proper); thence through the Palenville Clove to Haines Falls House, where turn left, cross the Falls to Santa Cruz Park, where an excellent breakfast is had. The distance from Catskill is seventeen miles, and time about three hours. After proper rest, retrace to main road, and continue west to Tannersville to Hunter, a distance from the Park of seven miles; after dinner, and on the return, turn left before reaching the Haines Corners Railway Station, and ride to the old Mountain House. From here take the road north of the Otis Elevating Railway Station, past "Sleepy Hollow," and the flat rock which has the reputation of being the identical one on which old Rip Van Winkle slumbered for twenty years, to the valley and main road below leading into Catskill, where take boat as above.

FEATURES.

The sail up the Hudson to one for the first time will prove a treat indeed, and to any is always refreshing. The ride to Palenville with few exceptions, and for short distances, is over good roads. Through the famous Palenville Clove, more or less walking is necessary; yet the continual change of scenery and delight of the wheelman, makes the slight effort hardly noticeable, and one feels more than repaid when reaching the Park, which is at an elevation of 2,150 feet above sea level. The view from this point is second to none in this region. The run to Hunter is over good roads and through a rolling country.

From the old Mountain House, a view of 15,000 square miles is obtained, including the Hudson River valley and Berkshire Hills beyond. Here also, is the now famous Otis Elevating Railway, operated by a cable, with an ascent of 1,750 feet in a distance of one and one-third miles.

THE LEAGUE COLOR:
What Shall It Be?

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

May I enter a protest against changing the League colors? Let us keep the royal purple because it is our color.

Red, white and blue is any and everybody's color, and means anything and everything when carried. It is used alike for Sunday-School picnics and political parades, and for a club or organization has no individuality. Every one who knows anything about the L. A. W. knows its color now, and infers that any one carrying it is a member thereof; but if we carry the national colors it signifies Decoration Day, Fourth of July or any other national celebration. Let us stick to our color, and be loyal enough to the L. A. W., to display it at all times on our wheels — every one.

MRS. E. C. ALLIS, Consul.

NEW YORK CITY.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

I see that a request is made that L. A. W. members display the League color (royal purple). Now, as this is a national society, I am of the opinion the color should be red, white and blue, and we would be proud to wear these on our wheel. What method is necessary to bring this change about?

No. 35,856.

NEW HAVEN.

D. D. YOUNG, Atlantic, N. J., writes: — "I have a set of streamers for my handle bars of our color, with L. A. W. on one side and No. 90,207 on the other side, worked in silk; it looks very pretty. I would say, let each member have one made: see the effect; it is worth the cost twice over. If I am asked the meaning of it, I present them with an application blank and explain everything, and seldom fail to get a member."

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

In your valued paper of June 12, Mr. H. G. Bradbury makes a suggestion that I hope will receive general approval and adoption, even though he proposes to revive a form of decoration that has been forgotten since the days of high wheels, solid tires and mud guards, viz., that L. A. W. members wear the League colors, royal purple, on their wheels. But I would suggest that a standard length and width of ribbon be adopted, and that a form of the letters L. A. W. be woven or embroidered on it in bright gilt.

I think the first form best, as it would secure uniformity in style, workmanship and fabric, and, by making the necessary arrangements with a manufacturer, the lettered ribbon could, no doubt, be furnished to members by the League at as low a figure as the plain is now secured from retailers.

In any event the cost would not amount to enough to retard its general use.

I would suggest a silk and satin finish ribbon, as a streamer on left handle bar near grip two and a quarter inches wide, and one and a quarter yards long. This would admit of a letter one and three-quarters or one and seven-eights inches high.

No. 98,322.

HYDE PARK, MASS., June 16, 1896.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

I read a great deal in the BULLETIN about wearing L. A. W. colors. I would like very much to know why that color, purple, does not predominate on the L. A. W. button? I have a large and small one on which the prominent color is yellow. It would look much better for a man to wear a button on which the L. A. W. color was prominent than to wear a ribbon on his wheel. There are so many different colored buttons worn that I think it would be a good idea to have all L. A. W. buttons made alike with the League color the outside circle.

BLESS HER HEART!

JAMES BARTON ADAMS.

She tipped adown the theatre aisle,
On her head a feathery tower;
Her pretty face wore a radiant smile
Of a hundred candle power.
She settled down in a central seat,
And the men who sat in the rear
Ejected words of volcanic heat
Which I am glad she didn't hear.
She pictured was in each fellow's mind
As a blot on the name of womankind.

The orchestra oozed from the stage's hold.
The leader swung his baton,
And a crash of horns and of fiddles told
That the overture was on.
Two shapely hands, with unstudied grace,
Removed the offending hat,
And a smile came over each fellow's face
As he sat there staring at
What each one vowed, in his wild delight,
Was the loveliest girl in the house that night.

DECORATION DAY RUN TO BABYLON, LONG ISLAND.

BY GEO. T. MOREY.

Leaving our place of business, my friend and I agreed to meet at the King's County Elevated Railroad at 5.30, and from there get an early train and an early start for Babylon. We were both up betimes, and at promptly 5.30 we were shouldering our "wheels" and climbing the elevated station stairs, and awaited the coming of the train. Handing our tickets to the conductor we pushed into the "smoker" and found that there were others with the same mind as ours, bound for a day's outing down the "Merrick" turnpike to Freeport, Amityville Babylon, Islip or Patchogue. Wheels, wheels everywhere. The cars looked liked a train on the "New York Central" bound for State Camp at Peekskill: the bright shining handle bars, the polished tubing, hubs and spokes glistening in the aerly morning sunlight. Arriving at the end of the Elevated Railroad, the guard calls out, "Last stop, all out," and then the procession began. Cyclists with their lady-companion cyclists, alone and tandem, slowly filed out of the cars, and again shouldering their "bike" descended to the street. Investing from a small boy five cents worth of "pepsene" (spelled as the gamin pronounced it), we mounted our wheels, glanced at the cyclometer, and began our day's fun. "Our first dismount," said my companion, "will be 'Belmore,' where we will stop for breakfast." Going along at a twelve-mile-an-hour rate, we were suddenly brought to a standstill by the shrill whistle of a locomotive, and our calculations were upset by having to dismount at this point, and watching a string of thirty or forty freight cars bowl along the track towards Long Island City. By the time the train had passed there was quite a gathering at the roadside. Wheel clubs, tandems, sociables, and one fellow, on an "1888" Columbia high wheel. He attracted more attention than any of us, and was greeted with remarks as to the weather,—"Is it cold up your way?" which he took good naturedly. I took my pocket kodac out to get a snap shot of him, but before I could press the button he had disappeared in the woods and around a turn in the road. We arrived at Belmore Hotel at 7.15 o'clock, and was greeted by Manager Swain (formerly of Amityville), who said, "breakfast was just ready." We did not need a second invitation, or any "tonic" to excite an appetite, After doing nineteen miles, nature rebelled against going any further. Partaking of porterhouse steak, hot coffee, cucumbers and "French fried," we adjourned to the stoops, and mine host Swain passed the "perfectos," and we lay around in his hammocks and swings for nearly two hours. We took a picture of landlord Swain, with his two dogs on his lap, which he said, not long ago to me, was equal to work by "Sarony."

The morning stillness was broken by the whirring of wheels, and we got a fleeting glnce of thea

BROWN SADDLES ARE ALL RIGHT.

BROWN SADDLE CO.

ELYRIA, OHIO.

"Pequod" wheelmen of Brooklyn fast division, making a century run to Patchogue. We started in to catch up with them, but soon gave it up. They were riding for business. We were out for pleasure, and had a full day before us. We did not dismount until we arrived at Babylon, and stopped at the "Sherman House," getting there at 10.15, thirty-five miles from the Brooklyn Elevated Railroad. The hotel was crowded with wheelmen. Noticing the following club uniforms, "Bushwicks," "Williamsburgh," "Kings County," "Long Island," "Brooklyn," "Ocean Parkway," of Brooklyn, "The Century." "Riversides," "Harlem," "Grammercy Park," of New York, and "Hudson County," of Jersey City, we rode down to the Great South Bay, and from the end of the pier we sat and watched the pleasure craft, either under full sail or at anchor near by. We obtained some excellent views; one in particular being a yacht under full sail, bearing directly down upon us. We were well paid for our trouble in riding down to the pier, as the roads were very bad, and we gave it up two or three times.

Mine host of the "Sherman" informs us that he is over-run with customers, and it would be three o'clock before he could promise any dinner, and not wishing to tarry so long we bade him adieu. Bowling along we espied a farm house nearby, which looked cool and inviting, and as we had sought in vain at the many hostelrys, and had been refused, we alighted at the gate and, pushing our wheels up the shady path, banked on both sides by roses and shrubs, we enquired of the young lady who answered our knock, if we could have something to eat, explaining to her that we had tried at the different towns for food, but without success. Oh, the hospitality of these good people on Long Island. We sat down in a plain summer kitchen, and partook of cold ham, pie, cake, and genuine milk. We were too hungry to say grace, so we just pitched in. I have dined at all the first class restaurants in New York and Brooklyn, but this dinner at this country farm-house tasted better than the bread of heaven. We were glad to see the outskirts of Brooklyn, and hear the din and bustle of the city as we arrived home at seven o'clock. We both were glad that the next day was Sunday, and two people were absent from roll-call at Sunday School next day.

PROTECT THE ROADS.

Did you ever drive along through the country and notice two-wheel tracks that have worn deep ruts into the surface of the road? Have you noticed that these deep ruts give a severe wrench to a light carriage when you go to turn out for an approaching vehicle? Have you watched how these same ruts hold the water after a heavy rain and become two long muddy canals, through which you plough your way, while the rest of the road has become moderately hard? Now, when you come to look at the matter seriously, what is the use of those two ruts, and why can they not be avoided? Would n't we have better roads if we could do away with the ruts?

Of course, you may ask what this has to do with selling carriages, but you know well enough that good roads mean a greater demand for carriages because they increase the pleasure of driving. The ruts can be avoided easily enough if all vehicles do not track alike, or if drivers would exercise a little care in using the whole road, and would not all drive in the same track. There's a good deal of outcry in favor of wide tires, but even if every vehicle were compelled to have wide tires, and they all tracked alike, while the drivers continued to use the same care that they now seem to exercise in keeping exactly in the wheel tracks of every other vehicle that has used the road, we should only have a little wider ruts than we have now. That is about all we would gain from wide tires. If, on the contrary, we should arrange it so that the front wheels of every vehicle tracked inside of the back wheels, and if in addition we could educate drivers up to using the whole road, and not to continue following one another like a lot of school boys playing the old game of follow my leader, we might at least protect the roads we have, and keep them in much better condition than we possibly can under existing circumstances.

Can't you, as one of those who should be interested in the Good Roads question, do a little missionary work in this matter, and talk to your customers about protecting the roads by not all driving in the same track? Might you not gain a little advertising advantage over your competitors by putting up signs along the roads, here and there, reading something like this: "Protect the roads. Don't all drive in the same track." This should be in large, bold letters. Then follow it with an announcement of your business, briefly told, in letters legible enough, but a trifle smaller. You'll earn an enviable reputation as a public spirited citizen, and at the same time will find the signs a good drawing card to attract custom. Why not try it? — The Hub News.

THOSE ACCOMMODATING RAILROADS.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

On the 30th of May we rode to Trenton, and took train from there to Philadelphia, paying fifteen cents for each wheel, receiving checks for same. On applying for our wheels at Philadelphia, we were asked if we had paid for "excess of baggage." Replying in the affirmative and producing our checks, we were told that that was not sufficient proof that we had so paid, yet, as we differed on that point, the official magnanimously consented to let us have them without any further payment for said "excess of baggage." As our wheels were the only baggage we had, and being both featherweights, the situation was rather comical; we could not decide as to whether we were "excess of baggage" or baggage. However, on the following day at 10 P. M., we took the same line from Philadelphia to New York, and after paying the regular fares and forty cents for each wheel, and being advised that if we wished our wheels to go on the same train with us we should put them in the baggage car (which we did), and then getting into a crowded car with standing room only, until we reached Trenton.

By this time we had decided that we were not even "excess of baggage," but some kind of a commodity that had n't any rights whatever.

I was surprised that this, the most reputable road in the country, should treat their patrons with such utter contempt. When paying full fare and an extra charge for wheels, I think I am justified in saying that they should at least have suitable accommodations for wheels and seats for passengers. I am told that the Philadelphia & Reading does not charge for carrying wheels, in which case the next time I have occasion to ride between New York and Philadelphia I shall either patronize it or ride my wheel.

BICYCLES FOR PARK POLICEMEN.

The stopping of runaway horses in Washington and Douglas parks on Sunday by policemen who were off duty and were riding bicycles for pleasure, ought to convey a timely suggestion as to a possible enlargement of the field of usefulness for the bicycle. On Sundays the parks and boulevards are filled with women and children, as well as thousands of wheelmen and vehicles of all kinds. The danger to life and limb from an infuriated animal dashing through one of these boulevards is fearful to contemplate. The boulevards are practically monopolized by wheelmen on Sunday, and, while the authorities have taken measures to prevent the frightful consequences of scorching, there appears to be no provision made for guarding against the fatalities that would result from an unmanageable horse turned loose in a thickly crowded boulevard.

The runaway horses on Sunday were stopped by officers who pedalled their wheels with such velocity that they managed to overtake them, grabbed their bridles, and by a heoric risk of their own lives managed to stop them.

This is not the first time that it has been demonstrated that a runaway horse can be stopped by a good wheelman. In New York the experiment of mounting park policemen on bicycles has pr most successful and satisfactory.

Officers on foot are powerless to prevent scorching or to enforce the lantern ordinance if wheelmen choose to disregard these regulations. Mounting a certain number of officers on wheels in the Chicago parks would secure a stricter observance of the rules that have been adopted as necessary measures of public safety, and would afford more adequate protection for the people who fill the parks on Sundays and holidays. — Chicago Times-Herald.

BICYCLE RACES ON WATER.

The whaleback steamship, the Christopher Columbus, which was a feature of the World's Fair, has arrived at Chicago, where extensive repairs and alterations have been made to fit the steamer for the season's excursion business. One of the new features is a bicycle track, fifteen laps to the mile, constructed on the lower deck, where scorchers may disport themselves and bicycle races may be had "on water." It is proposed to have races during excursions to Milwaukee, prizes being given to the riders who make the most laps between Chicago and the Cream city, between which points the whaleback will ply. Short races also will be had, and they are expected to prove a drawing card. The bicycle track is constructed so as not to interfere with the freedom of passengers. — Chicago Record.

BOUNTY FOR CYCLERS PROPOSED.

The insane desire on the part of those in possession of the taxing power to "do the bicycle" is but the effect of a cause. The bicycle has in its power to so brace up the American people to the real duty that the present peanut politicians of all stripes see and feel that their days are numbered. The self-reliance born of the wheel is the real emancipator of the men and women of this republic, and one feels that in very desperation this miserable, narrow policy of a duty of one dollar a wheel is to be imposed.

Allow me as one non-rider to offer my protest. In place of the tax, seeing what good the body politic must get from the use of the wheel in the increase in numbers of good healthy citizens, improved miraculously both mind and body, I respectfully submit a proposition for an annual bounty to all bicyclers in the State or city: First, as the bicycle is as much an educational factor as our city college; second, a factor for good health in a very, very much larger degree than our health department, and third, every one knows that in place of the bicycle wearing in the slight degree any roadway it absolutely aids its repair.

Finally, no one can be in the company of wheelmen and women for ever so short a space of time without seeing how it has improved the powers of observation and conversation, good breeding and real good fellowship, and how every one who becomes a cycling devotee at once becomes a healthy, sober, broad-minded man or woman. — Henry W. Rowland in Baltimore Sun.

NO THOUGHTFUL man ever referred to a frosty Boston girl as an old flame of his.

If any of our readers should be mentally disturbed after taking the herewith deeply to heart, they must bear in mind the tribulations of the editor from whose brain evolved or "revolved" this peculiar circular and "Gothic" statement. Hopes are still entertained for the recovery of the compositor whose duty compelled him to stand on his head; art of the time and to work as a Chinaman reads, —from the bottom up. The office boy has resigned his commission, after his mental and moral struggle with the problem in justification, and the office cat — since the first proofs were exhibited — has vanished, evidently taking our circular truth for a Fourth of July pin-wheel, with a bunch of Chinese fire-crackers attached. So, after reading, have tender feelings — as far as possible — towards everyone and work all the harder for Good Roads.

BILL JONES' REFORMATION.

Bill Jones played "penny-ante" until far into the night;
He played and was a loser, so he knew it was n't right.
His hard-earned wages, small enough before the game began,
Were smaller still when it was done: the cards against him ran.

Next morning — ah, the morning! — when his good wife called him up
To eat his Sunday breakfast there were smiles in every cup.
The baby cooed and carrolled while his wife, so sweet and glad,
Told how she 'd made the baby's gown, but Bill's poor heart was sad.

With pride she mentioned how she 'd saved (to her it seemed a lot)
A dollar. (That would help to lift the mortgage from their cot.)
And Bill, he swallowed all his grief and in his heart he swore
He never would (he never did) play poker any more.

A CURE FOR THE PROFANE.

Editor L. A. W. Bulletin:

In a recent issue of the Bulletin, on page 817, I find an article about profanity, and in it is the query from a New York lady, "What is there about wheeling that is so conducive to profanity?" As she charges "the many wheelmen" with profanity, there must be something about the pavement in front of her residence to cause these universal eruptions. If she will have her servant remove the broken glass from under the nearby street lamp and not have the sprinkling done as though they were extinguishing a conflagration, I will warrant her ground for complaint will disappear.

No. 99,006.

The sun-dog is a "setter."

In New York City a bicycler arrested for breaking a city ordinance may give his wheel as a bail bond and thus be spared the grief and shame of a ride to the police station, and the trouble of summoning friends to go his bond. It should be so everywhere.

"PATRONAGE SOLICITED."

In a recent issue of the New York Press appeared the following: "The ladies of St. Mary's Guild of the Episcopal church at Richmond Hill, L. I., will serve supper, ice cream and strawberries in the rectory of the church from 4 until 10 P. M. to-day. The patronage of wheelmen is solicited."

A Western member writes: — "In this part of the country a protector for the withers is used a great deal. It is generally made of leather and is put on on the top of the collar. (Not used with a breast strap.) The hames pass through holes made for them. It hangs down on each side of the neck and protects the neck, where the sun and rain, and rubbing of the collar are very liable to cause a sore. Why not have some of these with "Good Roads" on them for the among our western drivers?"

"A number of riders of our city," writes a Brooklyn member, "after riding through our park wonder how it is that so much money is being spent on roads and paths while the park is left in the condition it is. It is full of ruts running across the road, and what with a good road would be a fine run, is simply unbearable, as the jolting one gets is fearful. Why does not the park commissioner see to this and make it the fine ride it could be made?"

Commenting on a correspondent's suggestion to put the toe clips well towards the inside of the pedals, a Colorado member says, "I think he is wrong, that is, for the majority of us, as in walking our toes stick out, and the same in riding a wheel. In putting toe clips on my wheel, I put them one-third the distance from outer end, and they come square over the toe of the shoe, while with the side of my heel I have wore the enamel off the side of the frame. If I was pigeon-toed I might want the clips farther in."

AN IMPORTANT LETTER.

Philadelphia, June 17, 1896.

Bicycle Appliance Company.

Gentlemen: — I take pleasure in assuring you that the Simplex Repair Tool, as used by our ambulance corps, on the Newark-Philadelphia Century Run, of Saturday last, was a success in every way, having made upwards of thirty odd repairs of all sizes and in no case was the rider deprived of the use of his wheel for a longer period than four minutes.

I remain, Very respectfully yours,
George A. Bilyeu,
Captain Century Wheelmen.

AT THE COUNTY FAIR.

County fairs are nearly ripe enough to pick; and, by the way, county fairs are, collectively, a forceful event in the year's history.

The county fair is seen by the many, the city exposition by the few. The exposition is machine-made and tailor-finished. The county fair is home-grown and hand-picked. What the county fair does and says means a whole lot to a whole lot of folks.

It goes without saying that bicycle racing will be an important feature of interest and amusement in every up-to-date fair held this year.

Will the other and more important corelative of bicycling, Good Roads, receive the attention it should at these many farmers' shows?

In every county wheelmen should endeavor to have the directors of the fair incorporate in its exhibits an intelligent exposition of the value of good hard roads, the methods of building and maintaining the same, and such other information regarding the proper width of tires, etc., as will lead to the improvement of highways.

This feature should be made prominent in every county and district fair. The farmers should be the first to move in the matter, but as the wheelmen have thus far been the real force back of the Good Roads agitation, they should persevere until by sheer force example the truth is dinned into the minds of the whole people.

See to it that there shall be an attractive Good Roads exhibit at your county fair.

A BAND of horses and mules from the John Day country, where bicycles are not numerous, were driven westward for market when Frank Chamberlain, riding a wheel, encountered them as he was descending a grade east of Prineville, Or. Thinking a stampede the quickest way out of the scrape, the daring bicyclist jerked back the lever, opened the trottle and threw on all steam. All would have ended well, perhaps, had it not been for one lone mule, which, overcome by terror, or cussedness, stood pat. He was a populist mule, and stuck fast "right in the middle of the road." There was neither time for turning to the right nor to the left, much less a chance to jump off. Frank, bicycle and all crashed squarely into the mule amidships. A moment's mix-up of legs, arms, wire and ears, and Frank shot out in one direction, the mule in another, and what was left of the bicycle caught on a projecting limb of a neighboring pine tree on its way down. The young bicyclist says he is "done bicycling in this blasted mule country."—Portland Oregonian.

"WORKING" THE ROADS.

EDITOR L. A. W. BULLETIN:

In your issue of 12th inst. a little paragraph reads: "The roads have been 'worked' long enough. They should now be improved." That is right to the point! If anything will bring forth billingsgate from the driver or wheelman riding over the country roads of the interior of this (N. Y.) State during a month or two in late spring, such "worked" roads will do it. The abominable road scraper traverses the ditches, hauling up into the road bed all the stones and quackgrass sod and impalpable dust of back decades; and this it repeats year after year, hauling back into the road the same old stones and the same old dust. Can a more asinine thing be thought of? It would seem as if the simplest and best method of obtaining good roads would be for each county to purchase and keep running from, say, April 1 to Dec. 1 of each year, a certain number of stone crushers (according to its miles of road). They could be run by cheap labor and, where practicable, by county poor and tramps. Then let the farmer "work out" his taxes by drawing stones from his own farm to the crushers, in doing which he would be killing two birds with one stone (supplying road material and ridding his farm of stone). That is all we should expect a farmer to do intelligently in connection with good roads. To be sure such stone would not be the very best stone for the purpose, but they will have to be used sooner or later. The method of making the road with this material could easily be determined upon.

All vehicles having an iron axle one inch and a half, or an axle of equivalent capacity, shall be equipped with tires not less than two and one-half inches in width.

Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this Act shall be fined not more than $100.

BICYCLES AS BAGGAGE.

The Legislature has passed a resolution requesting the railroad commissioners to investigate and report on the bicycles-as-baggage question. It is stated that the case will be heard some time this month.

An effort is being made to regulate the sprinkling of streets in cities, so as to improve on the present muddy condition of things.

It is reported that Columbus avenue, Boston, is to be asphalted from Park square direct to Franklin Park.

Secretary-treasurer Peck reported balance as follows:

Cash on hand, March 12, 1896	$487.41
Receipts to June 10	4,481.48
Total expenses to June 10	2,532.14
Cash on hand June 10	2,336.75
Due from Secretary Bassett	1,100.00
Total	$3,436.75

The A. C. C., through its president, Spencer T. Williams, offered to pay one-third of the amount given for prizes May 30 by the division. Offer accepted with thanks.

Receipts and expenditures of the Spring Meet, May 30, showed that the appropriation of one thousand dollars was not exceeded.

Reuben S. Swan, Chairman of the Finance Committee, reported the receipts and expenditures for the quarter in detail and stated that the secretary's accounts had been audited and found correct.

Chairmen of the other committees made verbal reports showing that the Massachusetts division's interests are being properly looked after.

S. T. Williams, Chairman of the Rules and Regulations Committee, submitted certain changes in the By-Laws, the principal object of which is to place the receiving of nominations and the making up of the State ballot in the hands of a committee of seven, of which the secretary-treasurer shall be one, instead of leaving it entirely with the secretary-treasurer as formerly, said committee to be elected at the regular September meeting of the board of officers, and the returning board will hereafter be chosen by the Elections Committee.

A General Committee was also provided for, consisting of the chief consul, vice consul, secretary-treasurer and the chairmen of all standing committees. Such a committee has been in existence for the past year and a half and was appointed by the chief consul without special authority from the By-Laws. A number of minor changes were made to harmonize other portions of the By-Laws with the above amendments.

Five hundred dollars was appropriated for the expenses of a summer meet. The location to be settled by the General Committee, which meets June 25.

Three hundred dollars was also appropriated for the fall meet at Springfield.

The Rules and Regulations Committee was instructed to publish at once a hand book which is to contain the new Constitution and By-Laws, together with a list of hotels, repair shops, etc. The edition to be 10,000 copies.

I. M., "Enashaway," N. H. — 1. We are not sufficiently familiar with the independent order of "Dunkards" to answer your question. 2. No, the name is not "shy one letter." 3. Sound teeth are preferable to gold fillings.

AN L. A. W. M. D., writes: — "You cannot wash the muscles, but simply the skin: and the best thing to strengthen and build up the tissues is exercise and wholesome food. Simply keep the skin clean by daily bathing with warm water."

W. S. D.: — League members take their wheels into Canada free. They need not leave Canada at the point of entry, but on entering must state where they are to re-cross the line.

A NEW YORK wheelman advises parties sending uncrated wheels by express to attach a sprocket lock. Helpers on express wagons are not all expert riders, and in this city they seem to prefer to practise on some other fellow's wheel.

He rent his clothes and tore his hair,
He gazed upon them in despair;
His soul in anguish sore was 'prest, —
A moth had "free-lunched" on his "Sunday best."
— W. C. Z.

A number of New York wheelmen, on an outing recently, discovered the following gems of poesy in a soda fountainry in Oriskany:

When sweet spring across the hills
Sets the prisoned flow'rets free,
When the babbling of the rills
Join with song birds' symphony,
Then it seems to me we "oughter"
Turn our thoughts to soda water.

Your thirst we will quench,
Your palate we 'll tickle;
Our soda is fine,
Our charge but a nickel.

ASTRONOMERS should be optomistic. Their business is always looking up.

A LAP RACE.

A GOOD wheel maketh a glad heart.

A ROLLING wheel gathers no rust.

A MILLIONAIRE may put on a million airs.
